GOOD TIME TO PUSH A GOOD THING

"It's All in the Shreds"

The prices of foods of all kinds are soaring skyward. Your customers naturally "squeal."

If you carry

SHREDDED WHEAT BISCUIT AND TRISCUIT

you can always please a dissatisfied customer. Shredded Wheat contains more muscle-building, strength-giving material than meat, eggs or vegetables, and is always the same price, always pure, always clean, always wholesome. It's a good time to push it.

If 1000 Retailers in Philadelphia Recommended Us, Would YOU Believe in Us?

One of the hardest propositions which confront the retailer is to turn their bad debts into cash. Lots of them have tried different collection agencies, paid retaining or subscription fees and got no results; so it is hard to convince them that any one can help to bring the beats to book.

We show you how to collect your own accounts; nobody handles your money but you. We can give you the names of a thousand merchants in Philadelphia whom we have shown how to get money due them which had been charged off long before they heard of us.

It costs you nothing to find out what our plan is—can you afford not to?

No Defence at Dried Fruit Hearing

Charles Kephart, of Altoona, Heard on Charge of Selling Dried Peaches Containing Sulphurous Acid. Jobbers' Association Not Represented. Department's Witnesses Find Five Grains of Acid in Two Pounds.

The hearing of the case brought by the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department against Charles Kephart, of Altoona, Pa., on the charge of selling dried peaches containing sulphurous acid occurred late on Saturday, the 5th. Rather singularly, after all their announcements of what they proposed to do, the jobbers' associations were not represented. In fact there was no attempt at a defense, and a penalty of $50 and costs was imposed on the defendant. He did not pay it, but will appeal and give the jobbers another chance.

At Mr. Kephart's hearing the department had several expert witnesses and was prepared for a hot fight. The chief chemical witness was Dr. Frear, of the State College, who testified that he examined two pounds of peaches bought at Kephart's store and found five grains of sulphurous acid. To the lay mind this seems like an infinitesimal quantity.

Two other witnesses were Dr. Horace Smith and Dr. W. Albert Nason, both representing the State. Both testified that the quantity of acid mentioned was injurious to health. It impaired digestion, they said, destroyed the red corpuscles and inflamed the kidneys.

There being no defense presented, the magistrate promptly found Mr. Kephart guilty. In this case there was no chance to transfer the prosecution to the jobber, as the firm which sold the peaches to Mr. Kephart was R. C. Williams & Co., of New York.

The Tri-State Wholesale Grocers' Association has retained Samuel L. Clement, Jr., to represent it in whatever fight will be made The Grocers' and Importers' Exchange will probably retain an attorney of their own.

The Dried Fruit Association of New York, whose letter to the Pennsylvania Commissioner stirred up the dried fruit matter, has taken the rather extreme stand that until Commissioner Foust says exactly what he proposes to do, no sulphured dried fruits should be shipped into Pennsylvania. This would mean the exclusion of almost all dried fruits, as they are all sulphured to a greater or less extent. The association's letter to the trade, issued during the week, is as follows:

> In our bulletin of October 1 we advised you that the wholesale grocers of Pennsylvania and other States had taken the matter up with the Commissioner and Attorney-General and that it was decided that the matter was to be settled by a test case, and that pending the decision of the court in this case there would be no prosecutions for the sale of dried fruits that had been bleached with sulphur.
> We are advised to-day that there is some hitch in these proceedings and that further conference on the subject will be held on Wednesday of this week. As soon as we have further information we will advise you. In the meantime it would seem to be advisable not to ship sulphured fruits to Pennsylvania.

Western Butter Men Accuse Railroads.

Charges of discrimination and conspiracy are made in a petition filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission last week by the Fairmont Creamery Co. and several other creamery companies against the Illinois Central Railroad Co., a large number of other Northwestern and Western railroad companies, and the United States, Adams, American and Wells Fargo & Co. express companies. The creamery companies have an aggregate capital of $5,000,000 and produce annually sixty million pounds of butter of an aggregate value of $14,000,000, the net profit on which is asserted to be less than one-half a cent a pound. The complainants alleged that, under the present rates for the transportation of cream they pay the defendant lines more than $600,000 a year in freight and express charges. It is alleged further that, by concert of action, the defendants decided and announced they would increase their charges for the transportation of cream after September 1, 1907, from the average of 1 cent a pound of the butter produced to an average of 1⅔ cents a pound. The complainants allege that the increased rates will cost them more than $400,000 annually and that they are unjust, unreasonable and discriminatory; and that they will wipe out absolutely all profit the complainants realize from their business. The Illinois Central, the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, the Chicago Great Western, the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul are the most powerful of the defendants which are charged with having entered into an illegal conspiracy and that it will subject them to enormous losses. They ask, therefore, that the proposed rates be declared illegal and of no effect.

Complain Over Our Small Use of Porto Rico Coffee.

Imports Into United States Show Heavy Decrease in Last Three Years. American Dominion Over the Island Held Responsible.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
October 11, 1907.

The people of Porto Rico are exceedingly disappointed that the United States is not taking more of their coffee, which they claim is superior to most other varieties. As a matter of fact, a marked decrease in the coffee business has been shown since the United States came into possession of the island. Depression continues among the planters. The protected Spanish and Cuban markets are lost to them, while the market of the United States obtains its supply of coffee elsewhere. The problem is an intricate one. In interviews with planters in various parts of the island the desirability of obtaining the market of the United States, or protection in some form for their product, is deemed by them as necessary for the welfare of Porto Rico. It is certainly true that if the selling price of coffee could be increased 25 per cent. of the population would be benefited thereby. Coffee may be cultivated with a comparatively small outlay of capital, and a large acreage lies in the mountainous interior of the island which is adaptable to no other product. There are at present 17,000 plantations, comprising 185,000 acres under cultivation, the average yield of which is 200 pounds an acre.

It is claimed that the future of the industry will not be solved until improved methods of cultivation are adopted, thereby insuring an increased yield.

The Cuban market takes all inferior grades of Porto Rico coffee, or seconds, which, while inferior in appearance, both as to bean and color, have a good flavor, and being cheaper finds a ready sale in that market. American markets take very little of Porto Rican coffee, and although shipments have been made of superior qualities of large and even-sized beans, the same as shipped to Europe. Coffee for home consumption is roasted both with and without sugar, a much darker berry resulting from the addition of 20 per cent of sugar. It is asserted that the berry thus roasted yields a stronger flavor, though it is increased in weight. The domestic retail price a pound for coffee roasted with sugar is 20 cents; roasted without sugar, 25 cents.

The official figures show a remarkable decrease in the imports of Porto Rico coffee into the United States within the last three years. They show that in 1904 the imports amount to 2,415,559 pounds, valued at $279,461. In 1905, they were 1,519,149 pounds, valued at $201,642, and in 1906 only 303,455 pounds, valued at $27,069.

HOLT.

Another Way to Preserve Eggs.

An experiment station in Germany kept eggs eight months, testing twenty methods. Most of the eggs spoiled, but all of those preserved with water glass, lime or vaseline were good at the end of the period. The vaseline method is a new one and consists simply of coating the eggs with the petroleum product and keeping them in a cool place. The covering of the grease-like substance keeps the air out of the pores. This method requires little expense, a 10-cent bottle of vaseline being sufficient to preserve ten dozen if the substance is heated until it is semi-liquid and the eggs are rolled around in it. Care should be taken to see that every part of the shell is covered. The vaseline also may be applied cold.

The Salt Trust Situation in the East. Independent Salt Concerns to Make a Stand. Grocers Watching Standard Oil and Tobacco Suits. Callanan Again Denounces Department Store Advertising. Small Trade News.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, October 11, 1907.

Your correspondent called to-day at the offices of the International Salt Co. to learn if there was any desire to say anything for publication with reference to the reports that the so-called trust has eliminated competition here and so has now the entire Eastern field to itself, this being said to be in violation of the anti-monopoly law of this State. The people at the office were not communicative. One of them said that the company makes it a policy not to notice rumors and newspaper stories which are often originated by outsiders with ulterior motives.

This position, in these days of increasing publicity for corporation affairs, was not taken, however, by some other persons who are in the salt business and who were willing to talk freely enough provided only that their names were not published. They were evidently not looking for the trouble that might follow any statements which would not be satisfactory to other people in the trade.

One man who is prominent in a company which certainly was independent of the trust until recently—if it is not now—said:—

"People buy salt from any one of a large number of salt companies or agents, but hardly know whether or not they are really buying from the International, because the conditions are confused by the number of subsidiary companies. The selling agency of the International in this city is the Independent Salt Co., an odd name, of course, under the circumstances. But the trust sells under various other names and through various agencies, so that many people are getting 'trust' salt, as it may be called, and do not know it.

"It is not true, however, that the trust has obtained control of all the companies that had been operating in this field. Last year several independent companies were fighting the trust and prices were cut to a level at which there was no profit or no reasonable profit for any of the companies. It may be that the trust has extended its influence over one or more of these companies, but it certainly has not obtained control of all. We have all found, however, that it is time to get a fair price for our salt. The International advanced its prices and we find that we can get just as high prices as it is getting. Nobody could expect us to sell for lower prices than we can readily get. All the salt that we wish to sell in this market we dispose of easily without leaving the office to make a sale. I think that there are other independent companies that are similarly situated, but this does not indicate that the trust has absorbed any of us.

"Nobody who is not on the inside knows anyway just how the various companies in the trust are held together. It is not likely that the ties are any stronger than those that are sometimes called a community of interest—that is, they decide at what prices they shall sell the output and maintain this agreement. This is the idea of many people, although we could not say positively that such is the arrangement.

"The advance since last year is not unreasonable and does not go any farther than putting the business on a fairly profitable basis. The advance falls entirely on the jobbers. Salt is one of their most profitable lines, and while the prices were being cut the margins of the jobbers were very large. They can now afford to pay the higher prices and still make good money. As far as I have heard, no retailer has been called upon to pay more for his supplies and the consumers are paying the old prices."

As instances of the advance, it may be mentioned that a 320-pound barrel of table salt that sold a few months ago for $1.43 is now bringing $1.62; a 200-pound bag that sold at 80 cents is now 91 cents; a 324-pound bag that was sold at 91 cents is now $1.

The Ohio Salt Co., of Cleveland; the Wadsworth Salt Co., of Wadsworth, Ohio, and the Colonial Salt Co., of Akron, Ohio, are mentioned as companies that formerly fought the trust, but are now getting the same prices as does the trust.

In advancing the prices the salt companies apparently made some effort to remove a grievance of which the New York jobbers formerly complained loudly—that the trust discriminated against them by giving more favorable prices elsewhere, thus trying to divert business that naturally belonged to the jobbers of this city. It is said that the prices now are all on the same basis at the works, the only differences being such as are made by the differences in freight rates. So Western jobbers may buy Ohio salt more cheaply because the freight is lower.

All the jobbers are not satisfied on this score, and some say that there is still discrimination because some of their old customers, in places where the freight rates are the same as to New York, may buy in comparatively small quantities at the same prices quoted to jobbers here on large lots. In other words, the trust is suspected of having designs to squeeze out the old middlemen, substituting its own various agencies.

Talk is heard in the trade of a movement to present the facts to State or Federal officials, but there does not appear at present to be any substantial basis for such talk.

The New York directory gives the names of about 40 salt companies having offices in this city. The International has its principal offices in the new building of the United States Express Co. in the Wall street district. The names of E. L. and Mortimer B. Fuller appear on the door. The Avery Rock Salt Mining Co. occupies the same offices. The Independent Salt Co. has separate offices in other parts of the city.

Grocers are watching the progress of the Federal suits against the Standard Oil Co. and the American Tobacco Co. with as much or more interest than other people, and many old-fashioned dealers are beginning to dream of a degree of competition in that used to prevail, in contrast with the system with which the "large interests" have been doing things in late years. The legal developments and the evidence as to the smothering of small companies and other details of high finance have surprised even those who expected the worst, while conservative old merchants are dumfounded.

The advertisements of some department stores in the Sunday papers, whose misleading character has been exposed from time to time in your columns, have recently awakened new indignation because of the tricks that are being practiced, and this was voiced to-day by L. J. Callanan, who said that when the pure food law was passed it should have carried a companion measure providing for the stamping of the true weight on all packages.

A recent advertisement, he pointed out, announced packages of California seedless raisins at 11 cents. Now, in view of the fact that people are in the habit of buying raisins by the pound and that other articles mentioned in the same advertisement were pound packages, he said, the unwary customer supposes when he buys such a package of raisins that it weighs a pound. The text and the circumstances naturally would lead a person not used to scanning advertisements closely to suppose that a pound of raisins was offered, and without a question the purpose of the wording was to give this impression. Yet the package contained only three-quarters of a pound.

The other tricks the regular grocers already know, as Mr. Callanan suggested. There is the sale of an article at a low price for an hour and only a small percentage of those who chase after the bargain are able to get it in that hour. Or the big store sells something really cheap, but stipulates that it can only be bought with an order for other groceries, so that by the time the customer pays for all, including the high prices of some other articles on the list, he will pay more than he would for the same articles at any regular grocery store.

It is Mr. Callanan's opinion that the authorities made a grave mistake in dropping the plan for requiring the weight to be stamped on packages, at the same time that they put through the food law, and he hopes that a lively movement will be started by retailers to get such a law as soon as possible.

bers to have all labels comply in every particular with the requirements of the food law and the regulations made by the Federal authorities. The association in this way gives up its effort to get an extension of the time for using labels that in a technical way do not comply with the regulations.

An officer of the association said that after this the efforts of the organization will be centered, as far as the food law is concerned, in trying to obtain its complete and general enforcement. The officers realize that as the right thinking jobbers will do exactly as the law directs, they must, for their own protection in trade, see that, as far as it can be brought about, everybody does the same. So the jobbers are to assist wherever they can in the enforcement of the law.

It is said that the Department of Justice is about ready to begin some suits at the request of the Department of Agriculture against concerns that are said to be flagrant violators of the new law.

Business Failures Vary Only 200 From Last Year.

Official Figures Show Difference of Only 178. New England, Southwest, Central States and Western States Had Fewer Failures in 1907, Other Sections Had More.

According to the official figures just received from the Dun Mercantile Agency, there were slightly less than 200 more business failures in 1907 than in 1906. The actual difference was 178. The aggregate liabilities were $84,660,237 in 1906, as against $116,036,348 in 1907.

It is interesting to note how the failures varied in number in different sections of the country. In New England 1907 brought 885 failures and 1906 993. The Middle Atlantic States (North) experienced 1,937 failures in 1907 and 1,612 in 1906. Middle Atlantic States (South) report 1,526 in 1907 and 1,389 in 1906. The Southwest States had 705 in 1907 and 823 in 1906. The Central States had 1,419 in 1907 and 1,475 in 1906. The Western States had 842 in 1907 and 962 in 1906. The Pacific States had 776 in 1907 and 658 in 1906.

The cold weather has curtailed the receipts of tomatoes, though plenty are still coming forward. The quality, however, is poor. The market ranges from 35 cents per basket down, and the demand is only fair.

Now Is the Time to Buy Fish.

The season is here when Holland and Scotch herring, Norway mackerel, Norwegian anchovies, sprats and fish of similar character, are in demand. It will pay you to buy these goods from Carl Wilde, 357 N. Second street, Philadelphia, who is one of the largest importers, and who will give you the best goods for the least money. He has new summer Ementhaler Swiss Cheese, the finest cheese that comes to America ready for you.

WE CAN GET YOU ORDERS

We knew when the repeat orders came in from the hotels for Hotel Astor Coffee that we had a blend that would succeed anywhere under all conditions.

Because if a coffee can succeed with the high-grade New York hotels it can succeed anywhere.

We make and sell many brands of coffee, but we're a bit fonder of Hotel Astor than any other. It is truly a delicious blend and there isn't one chance out of a hundred that it won't make the same hit with your trade that it has everywhere else.

We have a special plan getting you orders for Hotel Astor Coffee—may we tell it to you?

The Pennsylvania Dried Fruit Case.

The Pennsylvania action against dried fruits, from a legal standpoint, analyzes itself thus:—

If the sample of fruit on which prosecution is brought contains a percentage of sulphur which is permitted by the Federal rules and regulations, no case can lie against it in Pennsylvania, provided that part of the State law which protects it is constitutional. If the sample contains a percentage of sulphur in excess of the 35-1000 of 1 per cent. permitted in Federal Decision No. 76, it will be necessary for the defence to prove that the Federal authorities have issued a further regulation permitting the percentage shown to be present in the sample. To prove this may or may not be easy. Certainly the Federal authorities have issued no written regulation permitting more than 35-1000 of 1 per cent., and when forced into a corner they are therefore in a position to deny having officially issued such a regulation at all. It is well to remember that a Federal regulation permitting more than 35-1000 of 1 per cent. must be proven in order to protect—in Pennsylvania—dried fruits containing more, and that in the absence of anything in writing it may be difficult to prove that such a regulation exists. But if the existence of such a ruling can be proven, the case falls.

If the protective provision of the State act is unconstitutional, or if the percentage of sulphur in the sample is in excess of the Federal regulation, and, therefore, unprotected by it, the defendant still cannot be convicted unless the department can prove that the percentage present is in itself injurious to health. At the test case hearing in Altoona the State chemist testified that two pounds of dried peaches examined contained five grains of sulphurous acid. The chance is that a consumer at a sitting would not consume more than two ounces of dried fruit, which would mean a consumption of 5-16 of one grain of sulphurous acid. Some chemists will doubtless swear that this atom will harm the eater, but by no means all will. Further than that, it is a matter of evidence that dried fruit when ready for the table contains much less acid than when sold over the counter, because it is soaked and cooked, both of which processes eliminate a large portion of it. There is no specific provision in the State act authorizing the examination of dried fruits when ready to be eaten instead of when sold, but that that is the spirit of the act is shown by that section which says that where preservatives are externally applied to food, to be partly or wholly removed before eating, their legality shall be estimated by their condition when ready for the table and not when sold.

It will be an exceedingly interesting case.

The Wholesalers' Attorney.

Under ordinary circumstances the identity of the attorney engaged by the Wholesale Grocers' Association of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware to represent it in the dried fruit conflict would be exclusively its own business, and any criticism of its choice would be gratuitously impertinent. The dried fruit case, however, is not an ordinary case. Interests representing millions of dollars center in it, and the business of every grocer in Pennsylvania will be directly affected by the result. The Wholesale Grocers' Association has assumed the burden of showing dried fruits as now sold to be wholesome and legal, and its plans in that direction are therefore of consuming public interest and a legitimate subject for discussion and criticism if criticism reasonably lies.

In the "Grocery World's" judgment criticism does lie against their selection of an attorney, and this is said without the slightest flavor of disparagement for Samuel L. Clements, Jr., the man selected. Mr. Clements is a fair all around lawyer, a man of good character and is credited with much political influence with the ruling Republican dynasty. But he is decidedly not the man to handle a case which must be fought out in the highest courts of the State and which involves the welfare of the entire grocery trade of Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania Food Commissioner on the Dried Fruit Situation

PENNSYLVANIA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE DAIRY AND FOOD DIVISION

HARRISBURG, October 8, 1907.

E. J. Buckley, Esq.,
730 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

My Dear Mr. Buckley:—The "Grocery World" of October 7th, has misquoted me regarding my attitude in the enforcement of the new Pennsylvania Pure Food Law.

I am quoted as saying, "important protective part of law is unconstitutional." In this I am misquoted. I must accept the law as constitutional and uphold it as such in every particular until the Courts decide otherwise. In your editorial of same date you quote me as saying, "that I would much prefer not to bring a single case during my official term." This is correct, provided the law is not violated.

As Dairy and Food Commissioner it is my duty to enforce the laws as I find them. The Legislature made the law, it is my duty to enforce it and the Courts to interpret it. I assure you this is my position.

A number of propositions were made to me by the trade, setting forth numerous reasons why I should do certain things, and I stated that the questions were questions for the Courts and not for the Commissioner. I made the proposition myself to go to see the Deputy Attorney-General, and stated that I would most certainly carry out his instructions regarding the matter.

There were several questions raised as to the attitude of the Federal authorities. I suggested that all these matters be placed before the Court, inasmuch as the sulphurous acid was found in excess of the amount allowed by the Federal rules. Had the amount been 350 milligrammes or less, as allowed by the Federal rule, then, under the Pennsylvania Food Law, there would have been no case. The trade contended that a written statement or agreement was furnished by the Federal authorities that no action would be taken notwithstanding the sulphurous acid was found in excess of 350 milligrammes in this year's crop. I stated that this was undoubtedly a matter entirely for the Courts and not for me, unless an official ruling was issued by the authorities at Washington.

I think that you will agree with me that my position, as stated above, is no unreasonable one; on the other hand, is perfectly fair.

I feel that this statement is necessary at this time in order that my position may be properly understood.

With kind regards, am

Sincerely yours,
JAMES FOUST.

This dried fruit controversy is the ost important food case which has ver transpired in Pennsylvania or ny other State. That being true, ow utterly silly to go into the fight ith any less than the very best wyers obtainable—men like John . Johnson, of Philadelphia, or D. . Watson, of Pittsburg. This isn't time for political lawyers, for olitics will have absolutely nothing o do with this case.

What is said here will of course ot change the ideas of the Whole- le Grocers' Association in the ast. It will go right ahead, fol- wing its motive of saving money, r of winning the case through po- tical pull, whatever the motive is. he unfortunate feature of it is that nce it has assumed the initiative e entire trade must stand or fall n what the association does.

The automobile is beginning to e held up by the pulpit as an enemy to the merchants who handle the necessaries of life. Rev. Frederick A. ould, of Grace Methodist Church, Vorcester, Mass., recently preached most bitter sermon against the utomobile, in the course of which e made these remarks:—

Automobiles and the Grocery Business.

Another moral phase of it is that multitudes are purchasing automobiles who cannot afford to do it. It is one of the most expensive luxuries of our day, and many spend money for high-priced machines at the expense of their grocer and dry goods merchant, and at the sacrifice of benevolences and the church. Dr. Buckley says in one city of moderate size in two months fifty men mortgaged their homes to get money to buy antomobiles, and in a smaller place twenty-nine did the same thing.

There is much solid truth in this. p to date the automobile has rought good only to the manufac- rer of the vehicles and its sup- lies, the physician and the under- ker who have fattened off the in- umberable accidents, and the tandard Oil Co., which sells the ost of the gasoline. The automo- ile is a luxury pure and simple, nd, like other luxuries its excess- e use robs all businesses that deal n necessities. Probably ten thou- and automobile owners have held ff their grocers in the last five ears because they had automobile xpenses to pay and couldn't pay oth. In such a case it is always the uxury that gets the preference.

The virtue of a catsup depends on its avor. Snider's Catsup is not too sweet, ot too sour. It's just right, it suits par- cular people.

The Pittsburg Produce Wrangle Again.

Pittsburg Paper Lays Blame for the Situation Upon Retail Grocers. Say They Maintained Famine Prices for Their Products.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Allegheny, Pa., October 11, 1907.

Here is a clipping from one of the Pittsburg papers:—

A significant fact in connection with the failure of a produce commission house yesterday is that while a Scottdale retail grocer also filed a petition in bankruptcy, one seldom hears of the failure of a Pittsburg retail grocer or of one of the hucksters who have amassed fortunes in the diamond market.

H. G. and W. G. McCracken, doing business as H. G. McCracken & Co., yesterday filed a petition in bankruptcy, the liabilities being $245,387.47 and assests $166,200. Recent events in the produce yards and the absence of business at the retail groceries and in the market foreshadowed the failure. In the produce yards the wholesalers were selling potatoes for 13 cents a bushel less than the tubers cost them at the farms 500 miles away. Peaches, offered away down, were such a drug on the market that they were allowed to rot. Hundreds of boxes of cantaloupes decayed because the market house stall holders and the retail grocers would not buy them.

Directly on the shoulders of the grocers and market house sellers the blame for the condition of the wholesale business is laid, for while produce and fruit were rotting in the yards, the retailers were asking famine prices from the private consumers.

This is the canning season, when housekeepers ordinarily buy great supplies of fruits and vegetables, but because of the high prices asked by the market men and the grocers housewives are not buying.

William M. Kennell, a Scottdale grocer, also filed a petition in bankruptcy, placing his liabiliities at $2,841.08 and his assets at $2,055. No reason for the failure is stated, but recently retail grocers in Scottdale were complaining that some fellow went there every week from Pittsburg with a carload of fruits and vegetables and undersold the local grocers.

It seems to me strange that the poor commission merchants of Pittsburg, who have continually controlled the fruit and vegetable business over the retailers for so many years, having their own way absolutely, could not operate their business so as to come out on the right side of the ledger.

I suppose by the first of January there will be many more in the same boat.

Soap and Soap Powder.

It stands to reason that when a firm gives the market the best soap of its kind, that it can and will give the best soap powder. It is an absolute fact that Pearl Borax Soap and Pearl Borax Soap Powder stand at the top. both are pure and both contain full pounds. The wrappers and cartons are redeemed for gifts. They are made by Chas. W. Young & Co., makers of soaps of merit, Philadelphia.

Collier's and Post Still At It

"Collier's Weekly" Replies to Mr. Post's Charge That They Attacked Him Because He Refused to Advertise. Say They Refused His Advertising As It Was Written. Mr. Post's Tart Reply.

The conflict between "Collier's" weekly and C. W. Post, of Postum Cereal fame, waxes warm, and promises to be both amusing and entertaining before it is concluded. In answer to Mr. Post's charge that the "Collier's" attacked him because he refused to give them advertising, the publishing company has issued a statement, which in part runs as follows:—

> If this were the mere rhetoric of ignorance we should pass it by; but Mr. Post knew all, and confesses that he wrote the charge himself. This being so, is not the correspondence almost beyond belief? On November 7, 1905, the Grandin Advertising Agency said, in the course of a letter to us: "Enclosed you will find Postum advertisement No. 1236, 'The Coffee Heart,' and Grape-Nuts, No. 1203, 'A Brain Worker,'" etc. In his reply of November 17 our advertising manager wrote to Mr. Post:
> Owing to the advertising policy recently adopted, copy of which I am enclosing herewith, it will be impossible for me to publish the style of copy you have been sending for Postum and Grape-Nuts.
> The following, of November 29, is from Mr. Post's reply:
> I observe from yours of the 22d, that you question the advisability of publishing our Postum and Grape-Nuts advertisements on the ground that they claim some medicinal effect.
> I have never written, in my recollection, a Postum or Grape-Nut article that makes any claim in that direction.
> I will be obliged to you for any announcement of mine that makes claim for medicinal ingredients or results.
> On December 11 Mr. Post begins a lengthy argument to induce us to take his advertising with these words:
> I have yours of the 6th forwarded from Battle Creek. I am making reply, not for the purpose of asking you to use our advertisements, but to see if it is possible to make clear to your mind the differences between food and the results of food and medicines.
> At the end of his long harangue in celebration of his foods, Mr. Post give us the naive permission to print his letter if we wish! Mr. Post was hard to discourage. On December 18 our advertising manager wrote to him:
> It seems to be rather difficult for us to understand each other in the matter of inserting this copy.
> Your standpoint is upon the ingredients of Postum and Grape-Nuts, and mine upon the method of advertising them. I do not, for one moment, maintain that Postum and Grape-Nuts are medicinal in ingredients; but I do maintain that Postum and Grape-Nuts can not be advertised in "Collier's" as a cure for certain diseases.
> Our business office wished his advertising only if it was honestly expressed, and would take it on no other terms. Mr. Post begged us to publish statements which we believed were untrue and should not be made. That was the whole issue.

Mr. Post comes back in a lengthy advertisement under the rude heading "'Boo Hoo' Shouts a Spanked Baby." Some interesting extracts from this follow:—

> Usually a private controversy is not interesting to the public, but this is a public controversy.
> Collier's has been using the "yellow" methods to attract attention to itself, but, jumping in the air, cracking heels together and yelling, "Look at me" wouldn't suffice, so it started out on a "Holier Than thou" attack on the religious press and on medicines.
> We leave it to the public now, as we did when we first resented Collier's attacks, to say whether, in a craving for sensation and circulation, its attacks do not amount to a systematic mercenary hounding. We likewise leave it to the public to say whether Collier's, by its own policy and methods, has not made itself more ridiculous than any comment of ours could make it.
> Does Collier's expect to regain any self-inflicted loss of prestige by demonstrating through suits for damagers that it can be more artful in evading liability for libel than the humble but resentful victims of its defamation, or does it hope by starting a campaign of libel suits to silence the popular indignation, reproach and resentment which it has aroused?
> Collier's cannot dodge this public controversy by private law suits. It cannot postpone the public judgment against it. That great jury, the Public, will hardly blame us for not waiting until we get a petit jury in a court room before denouncing this prodigal detractor of institutions founded and fostered either by individuals or by the public itself.
> No announcements during our entire business career were ever made claiming "medicinal effects" for either Postum or Grape-Nuts. Medicinal effects are results obtained from the use of medicines.
> Thousands of visitors go through our entire works each month, and see for themselves that Grape-Nuts contains absolutely nothing but wheat, barley and a little salt; Postum absolutely nothing but wheat and about ten per cent. New Orleans molasses. The art of preparing these simple elements in a scientific manner to obtain the best food value and flavor required some work and experience to acquire.
> Now, when any publication goes far enough out of its way to attack us because our advertising is "medical," it simply offers a remarkable exhibition of ignorance or worse.
> We do claim physiological or bodily results of favorable character following the adoption of our suggestions regarding the discontinuance of coffee and foods which may not be keeping the individual in good health. We have no advice to offer the perfectly healthful person. His or her health is evidence in itself that the beverages and foods used exactly fit that person. Therefore, why change?

The lawsuit which "Collier's" weekly has brought against Mr. Post will doubtless be an extremely interesting event.

Retailers Liable for Adulterated Butter Tax Only When They Know of Adulteration.

So Says Internal Revenue Commissioner in a Letter of Instructions to Agents. Manufacturers Primarily Responsible and They Must Bear the Blame Where They Sell Butter Through Commission Men.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Oct. 11, 1907.

Apropos of the protest by butter dealers all over the country against being taxed 10 cents per pound for selling butter adulterated with more than 16 per cent. of water, where they bought the goods from the manufacturer believing it to be pure, the Internal Revenue Department has issued a statement to revenue agents and collectors. The statement clearly defines the status under the adulterated butter law of the retail and wholesale dealer caught selling watered butter innocently. The order in part is as follows:—

> It has been developed by investigations made by the officers of the bureau that the adulterated butter act is and has been disregarded or ignored by many manufacturers of creamery, ladle and process butter, the result of which has been the cause of assessment and collection of the internal revenue taxes imposed by the act of Congress known as the adulterated butter law above referred to. Of course these taxes would not have become due had the persons interested kept their product within the limit fixed by the law and regulations.
> Practically all the trouble has arisen from failure on the part of butter makers or manipulators to see to it that the moisture content of their product is kept below the 16 per cent. limit, thus placing on the market a class of butter designated by the law as adulterated butter, taxable at 10c. per pound, and fixing the liability of the producer as a manufacturer, requiring the payment of a heavy special tax as well as the tax on the product. When these taxes have accrued no authority exists for omitting their collection.
> In addition to the taxes imposed on the manufacturer who produces and markets the taxable product, are the special taxes accruing against persons or firms who sell the same as wholesale dealers or retail dealers according to the quantity sold at one time. These latter taxes have necessarily been collected from dealers who have handled adulterated butter furnished them by the manufacturers, and their liability has been incurred without knowledge of the character of the butter handled and without intent to violate the law or carry on a business subject to tax.
> In this class of cases in almost every instance no liability would have been incurred had the proprietor of the creamery or other factory where the butter was produced, furnished an article that did not contain an abnormal quantity of water. Thus have innocent persons been caused expense, loss of time and injury to business through no fault of their own, but by the handling of an illicit product which they had a right to suppose was free from liability to internal revenue tax.
> From interviews with a number of prominent butter merchants and commission men, it is found that much of the butter handled by them is dealt in on commisssion and sold for account of the creameries, ladlers or renovated buttter manufacturers, who retain the ownership of the goods until sold. In such cases it is held by this office that if the butter so consigned for sale is adulterated butter, the liability to special tax as dealer is on the creamery and not the commission merchant, who acts simply as an agent of the manufacturer.
> Hereafter, in reporting persons or firms as dealers in adulterated butter, it must be ascertained whether the sales were made by the manufacturer through an agent, broker or commission merchant for account of the manufacturer, in which case the tax as dealer will be reported against such manufacturer and not against the agent so selling.
> When it is found that the merchant broker, etc., has become the actual owner of the adulterated butter by purchase or otherwise and has sold the same for his own account the liability to special tax as dealer is his and should be so reported for assessment. In such cases the name of the manufacturer or producer must if possible be ascertained and reported so that the business of such producer may be investigated with the view of requiring the payment of the special tax as manufacturer as well as the tax on the product removed and sold illegally.
> As I view the matter the entire responsibility for the exaction of any tax on the product of creameries and other manipulators of butter rests with the manufacturers. If the butter is so made as to avoid its being classed as adulterated butter or process or renovated butter, no tax accrues thereon under the internal revenue laws. It is believed that the manufacturers can control the per cent. of moisture in their product so as to keep it within the lawful limit.

Co-operative Buying Among Dry Goods Men.

How It Grows in Pennsylvania. New Association Life at Luzerne. No Soap Ordinance at Pottstown.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Erie, Pa., October 10, 1907.

The Beaver Falls dry goods merchants recently placed an order collectively with a leading supply house for a carload of window shades at a big saving to the merchants participating. Co-operative buying is practical to many trades

On September 27th Secretary D M. Evans, of Pittston, visited Forty Fort and Luzerne and secured four new members. Merchants at Luzerne had an organization two years ago which died in an effort to regulate early closing. The merchants are very anxious for an association. Forty Fort, Luzerne and Kingston ought to organize jointly with a strong association.

We are informed by the Burgess of Pottstown, Pa., that the press dispatch stating that the town had passed a local ordinance which will compel Pottstown women as well as men to pay a $10 license fee for soap soliciting is absolutely without foundation. No such ordinance has been introduced or passed.

The Retail Merchants' Association of Jeannette and vicinity, through a committee consisting of W. C. Permar, J. A. Pehrson and D. H. Rankin, secretary, has successfully induced 95 per cent. of the butchers and bakers in their locality to close Sundays all day and weekdays at 6 P. M., excepting Monday and Saturday.

State Secretary.

Advice of a Collecting Agency.

———— ————, Va., Oct. 8. 1907.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—Kindly give us any information you may have as to integrity and reliability of a collecting agency styled the National Credit Exchange, Baltimore, Md. We have given them a list of accounts and got no response from them. Yours truly,

* * *

The "Grocery World" has never heard of the concern in question, and knows nothing of its standing or methods.

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

Apple Butter Display.

Place in centre of window a wheelbarrow upset. Put in about one bushel of apples, part of which are on floor of window. On one side place a small half barrel or keg with the word cider on it, then place your crocks and jars of apple butter in an artistic manner on the floor of the window where you have plenty of space. Do not crowd your window.

Then have a few limbs with apples grown on same, or if you cannot secure them you can tie the apples on the limbs with very fine wire so as not to be detected.

Your sign can be of two words—Apple Butter—or you can use some name as "Heinz" or Williams, or the words Special Sale. Do not try to say too much on a display card.

This window was a winner for us.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

To use the language of one of the largest operators, "there is a better tea market to-day than we have had for three years." The demand for cheap teas is particularly active, due to scarcity. London is buying Foochow Oolong in this country now at an average price of 11 cents. This is an advance of 2 cents per pound from the price ruling a few months ago. Foochow Oolong even at 11 cents is about the cheapest tea on the market. Hysons, Young Hysons and Gunpowder also show an advance of 1 cent per pound within a short time. The market seems stronger than for some time and the demand very fairly active.

Coffee.

The market for Rio and Santos coffee has shown practically no change for the week. The market has shown some slight fluctuations, but they have not been important. The consumptive demand is fair, but the speculative demand is still very narrow and dull. Mild coffees are strong, particularly Bogotas. Javas are also strong. Mocha is unchanged. The general demand for coffee is good.

Sugar.

The sugar market shows practically no change for the week. Raws are steady at ruling prices. Refined sugar is also unchanged, and now seems reasonably certain not to advance, although it is doubtful if the refiners are making much money at the present market. The Federal Refinery has secured a large number of orders on a basis below the Trust, and there is expectation in some quarters that the latter may decline its price to meet the Federal's. Other authorities predict that the Federal may advance to meet the others. The demand for refined sugar is rather better than usual at the season.

Syrup and Molasses.

The market for syrup and molasses shows absolutely no change for the week. Glucose is unchanged, as is compound syrup, the demand for the latter being fair. Sugar syrup is unchanged and moderately active. Molasses is selling in a small way at ruling prices.

Fish.

The mackerel market is still excited, due to scarcity of all desirable grades and active demand. Figures as to the new catch of fat Norway fish are now obtainable. The current yield is 16,000 barrels, against 38,000 last year. A notable feature of this year's catch is the exceedingly small percentage of large fish. The percentage of No. 1s was only ¾ of 1 per cent., and of No. 2s 5 per cent. The balance were 3s, 4s and 5s. This assures a scarcity of large Norway mackerel throughout the winter season. Prices on all grades of mackerel have remained firm during the week, with an active demand. Cod, hake and haddock are in good fall demand at unchanged prices. The advance in domestic sardines scheduled to occur October 15th, which is next Tuesday, has not aroused much interest. The demand is fair. Imported sardines are firm and unchanged. Salmon is firm and unchanged.

Canned Goods.

The tomato market is firmer, owing to the early cold spell and the fact that the packing season is nearly over. Ninety cents factory is now about the lowest, although probably a car or two might be picked up at 87½ cents net cash. The West is still buying heavily at 90 cents, but up to the present writing the "Grocery World" has heard of no sales in the East above 87½. The pack is about over, and conservative authorities estimate it at 10,000,000 cases. Last year it was 9,500,000, which with a carry-over of one and a half million provided a supply of 11,000,000 cases. This year there is believed to be almost no carry-over. If 10,000,000 is really the pack, the market would seem sure to be steady throughout the season, at about present prices. There will probably be no speculation, as the most uncertain quantity on earth is the tomato market. Corn is strengthening on definite information that most deliveries will be short. The important Maine packers have now all notified the trade what they expect to deliver, their figures range from 60 to 90 per cent. The New York State pack will hardly be more than 25 to 40 per cent. of normal, but as the sales of futures were small the deliveries will probably be fair. Western deliveries are mostly expected to be full. Maryland corn is strong, and probably nothing good is obtainable below 75 cents. Offerings are small. There is no doubt that the corn pack will be much smaller than last year. Some authorities estimate six to seven

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for ıe right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" ıd contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried :veral, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, robably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of win-ow-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window isplays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new r original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are erhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an verage price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement ıould be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If rawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink ıot pencil).

illion cases. The available sup-y of old corn is comparatively nall compared with the last three acks. Peas are unchanged but eady. There is a good demand at price. Peaches show no improve-ent. The pack is still proceeding Ohio, New York and Michigan, it no recession in prices seems kely. Apples still range $3.75 for allons and the demand is excellent. he Baltimore line of small canned oods is unchanged and dull. The alifornia line shows no change hatever.

Dried Fruits.

New prunes show a decided eakness on the coast, apparently ıe to a desire to sell. Old prunes 're pretty well sold up. The new 're quoted at ¼ to ½ cent below st quotations, and the market is ıther soggy, since the slump romptly choked off everything but ıe necessary demand. Peaches are ıll and unchanged. The trade in ennsylvania has been greatly in-rfered with by the sulphur con-oversy. Apricots are selling in small way. New currants are ettting in and the market rules ıiet at unchanged prices. New ıisins are selling readily at good ices. Apples are firm and un-ıanged.

Beans and Peas.

New pea beans are quoted around 2.40, and good old stock is worth out the same. The demand is ow. The supply of marrows is latively larger and the price is ıerefore $2.40 to $2.50, practically more than for pea beans. Mar-ows are selling moderately. Cal-ornia limas are unchanged and irly active. Split peas are selling ell at practically unchanged prices. ome manufacturers named a price 25 cents off for new peas, but with-drew it without accepting any orders.

Butter.

The butter market is very firm. There is an active consumptive de-mand for all grades. The make is fully 25 per cent. below normal for the season, and stocks in storage are lighter than for years. The market is extremely firm, and if any change occurs during the coming week it will be an advance. The above describes the condition of all grades of butter.

Eggs.

The egg market is practically un-changed. The receipts of fresh eggs are very light, and this grade therefore commands outside prices. There are still some summer packed about, which must be sold at rela-tively low prices. Stocks in stor-age are decreasing satisfactorily and the consumptive trade is about normal. No radical change is likely until freezing weather.

Cheese.

The cheese market is very firm at a further advance of 1 cent per pound. This makes the country markets 16 cents in a large way. The make of September cheese is about half what it was a year ago, owing to the continued short sup-ply of milk and the demand for it for other purposes. All cheese manufacturers are much behind in the orders of September cheese. The future is very uncertain. Stocks are short and the future de-pends on consumers' willingness to go on paying the excessive prices.

Provisions.

There has been practically no change in provisions during the past week. Everything in the smoked meat line is about normal. Stocks are about average for the season. Both pure and compound lard are firm and the demand is very active, but without change in price. Bar-reled pork, canned meats and dried beef are all in satisfactory demand and unchanged in price.

Produce.

Sweet potatoes, primes, 50 to 55 cents per basket; culls, 25 to 30 cents per basket, demand fair; white potatoes, Pennsylvania, 75 to 80 cents per bushel; Jerseys, 40 to 45 cents, good demand; string beans, 40 to 50 cents per basket, de-mand good; tomatoes, 10 to 25 cents per basket; green, 15 to 20 cents; onions, 55 to 65 cents per bushel, demand fair; white onions, $3 per barrel; turnips, 30 to 35 cents per basket, scarce and good demand; pumpkins 20 to 25 cents per basket, fair demand; green pep-pers, red, 30 to 40 cents per bas-ket; green, 20 to 30 cents, demand good; eggplants, 25 to 50 cents per basket, demand fair; cabbage, $2 to $3.50 per 100, demand fair; beets, $2 per 100, fair demand; lima beans, improved, 90 cents per basket; flat, 75 cents; shelled, 18 cents per quart, demand good; carrots, 40 cents per basket, demand good; horseradish, 10 to 15 cents per bunch, demand fair; radishes, $1.50 per 100, demand fair; corn, $1.50 to $2 per 100, demand good; celery, York State, 20 to 35 cents per bunch, demand fair; spinach, $1.50 per barrel, demand good; water-cress, $2 per 100, demand fair; parsnips, $2.25 per barrel, demand fair to good; salad, 50 cents to $1.75 per barrel, demand poor; Savoy cabbage, 40 to 50 cents per barrel, demand slow.

Green Fruit.

Bananas, firsts, $1.25 to $1.75; 8-hands, $1 to $1.25; 7-hands, 65 to 85 cents; 6-hands, 40 to 60 cents, slow demand; lemons, $2.50 to $4.25 per box, demand fair to good; California oranges, $5.50 to $6.50 per barrel, demand fair; Jamaica oranges, $5.25 to $6 per barrel, de-mand poor; Florida grapefruit, $6 to $6.50 per box, demand scarce and good demand; quinces, $5 to $6 per barrel, demand good; pine-apples, $4.50 to $6.50 per box, de-mand slow; limes, 80 cents per 100, demand poor; pears, $5 to $7 per barrel, demand good; apples, $3 to $5 per barrel, demand good.

Nuts.

Almonds, 21 to 22 cents per pound; Brazil, 11½ cents; filberts, 10½ cents; pecans, 16 cents; mar-bot walnuts, 12 cents; mixed nuts, 11½ cents, demand poor; green peanuts, jumbo, 8 cents; fancy, 7 cents; choice, 5¾ cents; roasted, jumbo, $1.65 per bushel; fancy, $1.50; choice, $1.25, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Spices.

The market continues very ac-tive. There has been a steady decrease in spot stocks, due to in-creased consumption. Crop reports now coming in represent true facts. Pedangs and Tellicherry crops are small, and from present indications crop of cloves will be unusually large.

Pepper.—Situation is practically unchanged. Peppers, however, are slightly firmer, and we expect to see higher prices rule from now on.

Cayennes.—Bright Japans con-tinue scarce; prices are practically unchanged; very scarce on spot; demand very good but there is prac-tically no trading in the futures.

Pimento (Allspice) is quiet but firm. The crop is undoubtedly short and higher prices will likely rule.

Nutmegs in very good demand at the lowest prices ever recorded.

Mace scarce; demand much bet-ter and prices firm and tending up-ward.

Gingers steady and practically unchanged. Jamaicas continue high.

Seeds.—Mustard, caraway and celery in good demand, spot stocks of mustard being small and prices are very firm. It is rumored that California crop will be short. Cori-ander seed is now in good demand and will continue to sell well until late winter.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

No. 1.

Heavy buying of tomatoes con-tinued up to the close of business, and it certainly looks like there is a strong market for them ahead of us. It might be beneficial to all concerned if there should be a breathing spell to enable the pack-ers, jobbers and brokers to catch up with and straighten out the orders already booked, but while the buy-ing fever is on it must work itself out. The entire country east of the Missouri has again been buying here in large quantities all this week and at full prices, and offerings made in the morning are taken be-fore the day closes. Conservative buyers are disappointed and puz-zled, and they wonder if the toma-to market is going the same road with peas, corn, string beans, apples, peaches, pears and all the other staple lines of canned vege-tables and fruits. Every buyer is of course entitled to his own opin-ion, but here on the firing line, so to speak, the opinion seems to be all one way. It is a safe proposition for a manufacturer to sell his goods when they show him a profit, and that is what we are asking our canners to do with any surplus they may make above their contracts, and not speculate in them. If they do that then the jobber may feel entirely safe with his purchase. The outlook is for continued activity.

The new goods offered are all quite strong, pears, lima beans, spinach, sweet potatoes, etc., with more activity in corn than last week, doubtless because of the damage done to the crop by the frost. Protect your wants in corn fully and at once. Peas are stronger and string beans are active with an upward tendency. September was the banner month of the year, but October starts out equally as active for the first week.

No. 2.

The tomato market has advanced over last week's quotations. Despite the higher prices buying is good and it is not an easy matter to fill orders. The past two or three weeks have certainly been remarkable ones. It is doubtful if we have ever had such an interesting or exciting market. Packing is still going on, though the glut seems to be over. A peculiar thing about the situation is the limited offerings. There has been some good heavy packing in this section during the past month, but there certainly are not many goods being offered. As far as Baltimore city proper is concerned, there is hardly a packer to-day who is an anxious seller of tomatoes; in fact, most of them are out of the market entirely. With all this excitement, there is hardly any doubt but what the tomato market ought to be thoroughly sound; no old goods carried over, and a short pack in the West ought to be a pretty good, strong combination to make a healthy market.

The corn market closes very much stronger. There is very little new-packed corn being quoted under 80 cents per dozen.

A few lima beans are being packed but the crop is light. New goods are now quoted at $1.10 per dozen for No. 2 standards.

Imported Fish Products.

Norway Mackerel.—Our agents in Norway report by cable that the catch is a failure this season, and, owing to unusual competition amongst the buyers, prices have reached a much higher level than anticipated in the beginning of the season.

The quality judging from shipments which we have now on the dock, is perfectly beautiful this season, but prices are very high. Not a single barrel of Bloaters has been caught so far. No. 1 and No. 2 are extremely scarce. Buyers here are eager to purchase and are taking the goods in spite of the prevailing high prices.

Good Irish mackerel are scarce and in good demand at advancing prices.

Imported Oil Sardines.—Without change. No catch in France. We have letters from our principal packers stating that they have been unable to pack even a single case; others again have paid for the few fish caught exorbitant prices merely to put up a few cases of their well-known brands. Our market is entirely bare of French sardines. Portuguese sardines are very scarce, but it is likely that there will be some catch this month, and it is to be hoped that this expectation may be realized so that we may have some sardines to sell.

Owing to the extreme scarcity of French and Portuguese sardines the trade has turned to the Norwegian smoked sardines in oil, and demand for the same has increased very largely this season. The catch in Norway may be called a failure also of those sardines, and the principal packers are unable to execute all the orders that they have on hand. In consequence smoked sardines are scarce and prices rising.

Dutch Mackerel.—A few have been caught and are coming over here, but prices paid to the fishermen have been higher than during any previous season. It is rather a pity that the Dutch fishermen should be averse to splitting the mackerel in the usual way, as they could realize very much better prices for the same than for the belly-split fish which they are shipping.

MARKET NOTES.

A few peaches are still coming forward from New York State, but the season is nearly over. The range in price is $2 to $2.75 per rack, equal to a case, and the quality is poor.

The Colorado cantaloupe season is about over, and good melons are bringing a good price—$3.50 per crate.

A few new chestnuts have made their appearance, commanding $7 per bushel both for large and small. The crop is fair, but the demand light.

Apples are still high, ranging from $3 to $5 per barrel. The demand is good. It looks like even higher prices this winter than last.

Cranberries are getting plenty. Cape Cods still average $7 per barrel and New Jerseys $5.50 to $6.50. The crop promises to be very fair and a good demand will set up as soon as the weather gets settled.

Concord grapes range from 10 to 12 cents per basket, and are plenty but late. Niagaras and Delawares go as high as 14 cents for the best, and are selling well.

The receipts of sweet potatoes have fallen off, and the market now ranges from 45 to 50 cents per basket. A few days ago they were 35 cents.

Lima beans are advancing and New Jersey stock now commands $2 per half barrel. This is an advance of $1, due to scarcity and the waning season.

Don't Want Grocers to Make Flour Profit.

The San Francisco (Cal.) "Chronicle" is making war upon the arrangement between the millers of that city and vicinity and the Associated Retail Grocers of San Francisco by which the selling prices of flour are maintained. It publishes a facsimile of a notice by the Associated Retail Grocers, giving the prices of flour of nine mills, and containing a warning against cutting prices. The "Chronicle" states that the mills not only fix the price at which their flour is sold to the grocers, but the price at which retailers are allowed to sell. In order to make certain that there shall be no price cutting, the mills refuse to sell to the wholesalers at all, and the latter are compelled to buy flour from Oregon or Washington. Any retail grocer who cuts the price fixed by the association or the mills can buy no flour of the millers, and the grocers act as detectives on each other.

National Wholesale Grocers' Association on New Label Ruling.

The National Wholesale Grocers' Association has issued a circular to its members urging them to obey the new regulation refusing permission to use old and uncorrected labels after October 1st. The circular is in part as follows:—

> Counsel for the association has been notified that the arrangement of label as suggested in Food Inspection Decision 52 is merely advisory, and a departure therefrom is not necessarily a violation of the law. * *
> We recommend that members go over their stocks of labels again, and if they find any violation of the regulations, that they take immediate steps to correct the same.

SUGGESTION FOR CORRECTION.

(a) Run labels through the press again, or—

(b) Stamp with rubber stamp, or

(c) Have stickers made to paste over inaccurate statement or use rubber stamp with plain obliterating marks.

CHIEF IRREGULARITIES TO CORRECT.

(a) Name of wholesaler appearing on label when he is not the manufacturer, without the words "Packed for," "Distributed by," "Distributors," or like phrase—Stamp or print in these words.

(b) Geographical name appearing on label without the word "brand." You do not have to use the word "brand" when a fancy name appears, i. e., "Eclipse," or "Lilas." "Brand" is necessary only when the word is geographical and not true, i. e., "Maine" or "St. Louis."

(c) Labels bearing fictitious firm names—Paste sticker over name. Fictitious firm names cannot be corrected by using the words "Packed for" unless the firm becomes an actual distributing firm and bills the goods. It is not necessary under the national law to have any name on a label.

AMONG THE TRADE.

Practically all brands of flour advanced from 15 to 25 cents during the week, owing to the strong wheat situation.

THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

This Department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent in for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be filed in their order and taken up according to strict rotation.

The trouble with grocery advertising is that it is liable to get into a groove. I see a great deal of grocery advertising in the course of a year, and very little of it gets outside the beaten track. It may be good advertising, understand, but it is still in the groove. I have before me now an advertisement which gets outside the groove, and which I regard as particularly good on that account. It was used by a grocer in Trenton, N. J., and the text is here reproduced:—

Kitchen Management.

We want to talk to you in this space to-day about kitchen management.

The woman that runs her house thoughtfully and successfully is a business woman.

It needs brains for this work.

Now, if there are any leaks or if the expense runs too high, very likely you can trace it to the kitchen.

Every buyer for a big concern must know the place to buy to make his department pay.

It doesn't make any difference how hard it is to get there nor how much "friendship" exists. These things cut no ice.

So it is with you as a buyer—Lehman's is headquarters. You may live miles from any of our stores and you may live next door.

Distance is nothing. It's nothing to the shrewd buyer who comes from California to New York.

Run your kitchen on a business basis.

Never mind your prejudice; never mind the little ifs and ands. Be a broad-minded business woman and try things out.

Come to Lehman's. Have it to say that you do business with the biggest people in the town.

Pride yourself in owning goods at cash-down prices.

This is what we call kitchen management. Hand this ad. over to the gentleman himself and ask him to read it. We can hear his opinion.

Let us see you to-morrow or Friday or Saturday. Thousands of bright women are alive to the value of these stores.

Come on.

This is pretty brainy advertising, for it gets to the root of grocery buying. I believe an occasional little talk of this sort does good. I wouldn't do much of it, because good as it is its effect would soon be gone if used to excess. And more than a very very little would undoubtedly be excess. All housewives try to run their kitchens on a business basis, and every once in a while it occurs to all of them to ask themselves whether they are really doing it or not. Advertisements like this are suggestive and are likely to sink in and make an impression for that reason.

Let me have more matter, please.

Sears-Roebuck & Co's Enormous Business.

The annual statement of Sears-Roebuck & Co., the Chicago (Ill.) mail-order house, is out, showing that the gross sales of the concern for the year ending June 30, 1907, were more than $50,000,000. Because of a change in the ending of the fiscal year of the corporation it is impossible to make definite comparisons with previous years. The gross sales were $53,285,792. and net $50,722,839. The surplus for the year is $3,238,502, which is equal to 7 per cent. on the $10,000,000 preferred stock, and 8 per cent. on the $30,000,000 common. The only means of comparison is with the results of the period ended December 31 last, when the net sales were $37,943,472 and the surplus $2,868,061. The company was incorporated in its present form on June 16, 1906. The report compares as follows with the year ended December 31, 1906 and December 31, 1905:

	June 30, 1907.	Dec. 31, 1906.	Dec. 31, 1905.

The balance sheet of the company, as of June 30th, shows $39,206,354 as the value of the real estate; merchandise and supplies on hand, $6,911,426; cash, $1,072,215. The value of the assets to $49,707,376. Undivided profits amount to $2,542,899; due officials of the company for loans, $2,226,990; due tradesmen for merchandise, $1,336,718; sundry other open accounts, $2,605,144.

Baked Beans Ought To Be Baked

Most "baked" bean manufacturers are much exercised over the status of their goods under the National food law. Why? Because their beans aren't baked at all—they are merely boiled or steamed. It's a question whether they can be sold as baked beans.

Actual baking makes a big difference not only in the flavor but in everything else. Boiling or steaming swells the bean and makes it mushy. Baking reduces the size and make it not mushy but mealy. Anybody can see and taste the difference instantly.

The tomato sauce used on L. & S. Baked Beans is genuine tomato sauce made from the ripe tomatoes; not the catsup that is often used.

For awhile we had a tough fight to win our campaign for the gospel of purity.

People were indifferent—sometimes we almost concluded they didn't care what they ate.

But the food laws have changed all that. Pure things are wanted, the others are shrinking out of the market. Ralston Health Food and Purina Whole Wheat never had such a vogue as they have to-day, partly due to the tremendous advertising we have done, and partly to the fact that they have been held up to consumers as pure as purity itself.

What You Read.

I had a chance the other night to get off something that's been buzzing in my old intellect for a long while.

I had to spend the night down in a town in Maryland, and it happened to be the night the Retail Grocers' Association met. One of my friends in the place knew I'd be stranded there, so he gave me a bid to go.

There were about thirty fellows present. Most of them seemed to be mighty bright, lively men. They went through the usual little business meeting, and then the president asked all who would like to hear from the gentleman from Philadelphia on anything of interest to the trade to please say aye.

By George, they all voted for me to a man, and it was one of the proudest moments of my life. I am an impressive figure on the public rostrum, and as I rose and stood before that admiring throng in one of those attitudes of careless grace, I'll bet I looked all right.

Then I let off this thing that has been simmering. As near as I can recollect, this is what I said, though cold type can't begin to do justice to the beauty of my gestures or the liquid music of my delivery:—

"Gentlemen," I said, "I am going to say something to you to-night which I have felt for a good many years. For a long time I have traveled among grocers, and I know them and their lives pretty thoroughly. It has long seemed to me that the average grocer led a far too narrow life in one respect which isn't often touched upon, and that is as to his reading. Ninety-five per cent. of grocers read far too little for their own good and the good of their business. I don't mean trade papers now; it goes without saying that they are a necessity and every merchant with his heart in his business reads one. I mean general reading—reading of a kind that will keep him posted on the doings of the world and his country. I have made a great many inquiries from time to time, and I tell you, gentlemen, the number of intelligent grocers who don't read a single book in a year, or who don't take a single magazine, is stupendous. Probably you wouldn't believe it. This lack leaves the grocer a good deal lower in the scale than he ought to be. It spoils people's opinions of him, for when you get him in conversation on things outside of his business you'll find he isn't there."

That was about all, and I sat down. They didn't know just how to take it. I didn't get anywhere near as much "tumultuous applause" as I usually get.

Finally one member got up.

"Can I ask the gentleman a question?" he said.

I said sure he could.

"Don't you think," he said, "that the hard, long hours a grocer has are responsible for the fact that grocers don't read as much as they should?"

"I do," I replied, "and yet the hours can't excuse him altogether. I believe a grocer ought to force himself to read something if he can't bring himself to want to naturally."

And then I went on to say that the amount of reading done by the country grocer was much greater than that which the city grocer does. That's the truth, too. I don't know why in all cases. In some cases the city grocer has to get up early and go to the wharf for truck, which means going to bed early and sleeping all day Sunday. And then there's more in the city to eat up the little leisure that a grocer has. The country grocer has more time to himself and less to in it.

After that we got into a general talk and had a bang-up time. After a while I said I wanted to try an experiment.

"I want every man here who subscribes for two magazines outside of trade papers to hold up his hand," I said.

Only one held up. What were the two? "Munsey's" and the "Black Cat," both of 'em bum so far as giving general information is concerned.

"How many take one magazine?"

Twelve held up out of over thirty. I got each of the twelve to tell me what their magazine was. Here's the list: "Munsey," 3; "Everybody's," 2; "American," 1; "Popular," 3; "Metropolitan," 2; "Argosy," 1.

The other eighteen or twenty didn't take a single magazine of any character!

And of the twelve that did, only three are taking a magazine that can teach 'em a darned thing they

Our Santa Claus Catalogue

By the time your request for a copy can reach us—we shall be mailing the first copies of our Santa Claus catalogue.

This new catalogue presents the most comprehensive line of holiday goods ever gathered into the showing of a single house. And it quotes net prices in plain figures.

Three score of the largest sample trunks that might be brought to the store would not be as informing as this catalogue is to every buyer of toys, china, dolls, fancy goods, etc., etc.

Tens of thousands of retailers all over America have learned to treat this catalogue as the signal to start their holiday buying without further delay.

They know that it marks the top notch in wholesale holiday preparations—that breaks are not far away—but that prompt ordering will still get what they want and all they want.

That so many shrewd merchants consider our Santa Claus catalogue so important is suggestive. Can you afford not to know the profit possibilities it holds for you?

That Santa Claus catalogue is No. D634. Write for it—NOW.

really ought to know. The "American Magazine" and "Everybody's" are all right—they give you a pretty good idea of what's going on. But the others are froth and slush, well enough, some of 'em, if you do other reading beside, but no better fitted for a man's whole brain food than only jelly would be for his tummy.

A man who reads four or five good magazines is going to be a pretty well informed fellow. What five? Well, I should say "McClure's," the "American" (or "Everybody's"), "Harper's," "Scribner's" and the "Century." The magazine ain't the dull thing it used to be—it takes up the current things and serves 'em hot. A man can learn a lot from 'em without doing any other reading at all, though he ought to read some books, too, if he can.

Well, after we had found out where the magazines went, I worked another stunt. I read a lot of magazines myself, on the trains mostly, and I'm pretty well up on 'em. So I jotted down a series of questions on subjects that I remembered reading articles on in recent numbers of magazines, and threw 'em at 'em. There were only six. Here they are:—

1. What is the difference in method between the Walter Wellman campaign to find the North Pole and the Peary expedition?
2. Who is Judge Lindsey, and what has he became famous for?
3. What is the Esperanto language?
4. Give just a rough idea of the principle of wireless telegraphy and who was the inventor?
5. Was Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy the real discoverer of Christian Science? If not, who was?
6. What is the main point of osteopathy?

I read these questions off one by one, and then I said thus:—

"Gentlemen," I said, "I don't want anybody here to misunderstand what this means. I'm not trying to show up anybody's ignorance. Any ordinarily well-informed man ought to be able to answer all these questions, and he can answer them if he makes a habit of keeping posted through the magazines. I know that's so, for I learned all I know about 'em from magazines alone. Now, I want every fellow who can answer all these six questions to hold up his hand." Then I read 'em over slowly again and waited for the hands.

Not one showed.

"How many can answer five?" Not a hand.

"Four?" Not a hand.

"Three?" Ditto.

"Two?" Same.

"One?"

One man answered the question about osteopathy. He had the right idea, though he didn't make his explanation very clear.

See here, I've got to stop! I had no idea I'd written eighteen pages. I guess you get the idea now—see if you can't make something out of it for yourself.

THE STROLLER.

Gloomy Prophecies of Valorization.

Mr. Irving B. Dudley, American Ambassador to Brazil, writes from Petropolis as follows in regard to the progress of the coffee valorization plan: "The outcome of the 'valorization' scheme is fraught with grave uncertainty in the opinion even of its friends, who favor it as probably the lesser of the two evils; while the general opinion of foreigners and others not intimately affected is that it must eventually end in collapse. The withdrawal from the market of the coffee now held by the Convenio (about 8,000,000 sacks) has at least postponed the fall in price; but more purchases are not to be made and good crops hereafter would be fatal to valorization, the success of which is predicted upon an alternation of good and bad yields. For the past year the Brazilian product has reached the unprecedented figure of about 20,500,000 sacks. Two remedial courses are being advanced with increasing insistence. The one is to plant less coffee and in lieu thereof rice, which the country lacks and to the production of which the soil is adapted; the other is by a liberal expenditure of money in advertising coffee and making a systematic propaganda in favor of its increased use in the United States and Europe."

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XIV.—Learning Business from Cranks.

You can generally learn something from the "cranky" customer.

Too many business men are today looking for the easy side of business so hard that they overlook great opportunities to add to their business knowledge. The effort to dodge a "cranky" customer is probably as great a mistake in this direction as could well be made, for this same "crank" gets his reputation because he feels sure he knows something well and persists in displaying his knowledge in that particular direction.

Give this kind of a customer a chance and he is liable to impart a line of information to you which may be of great benefit, and certainly cannot harm, for if you get no further benefit from the conversation than his good will you will find that it is well worth having, for if you must have cranks for customers, and we all must, you should make them the best of customers by having their good opinion.

A close inspection will convince you that a "cranky" customer is not a fool, so do not make the mistake of treating him as such. He is probably a long ways from it. He has a few queer notions, and may have a mighty good reason for having them. If you will try to get at these reasons you will find that you are not wasting any of your time in so doing, for the information you imbibe is very likely to be worth far more than the time spent in getting it.

Slices Everything from 6-pound Knuckles to half-ounce Ends.

FACTS, INTERESTING FACTS

A. W. Johnson, a retail grocer, invented, patented, and is now manufacturing Johnson's "EVERSHARP" slicer, the only machine that ever did slice soft, moist, cured beef to perfection. In less than a year's time his retail sales of sandwich sliced beef increased to 300 pounds a week in warm weather and 250 pounds a week in the cooler season. While his full size slices, so smooth, broad, thin, moist and glossy cheerfully sell for 36 cents a pound, affording him a handsome profit of $38 to $45 a week on dried beef alone, with a pleasing increase of trade in other goods.

Edward M. Fithian discarded a much advertised rotary cutter and installed a Johnson's "EVERSHARP" more than a year ago. His being the only store in Bridgeton, N. J., able to slice dried beef to perfection, he acquires distinction, prestige, increased trade and profits.

Lehman & Co., Dover, N. J., equipped with a circular knife slicing machine, discontinued cutting dried beef because the time, trouble and waste meat counterbalanced the profit on their sales. They have just installed a Johnson's "EVERSHARP" and are advertising sandwich sliced beef in full size slices, broad, smooth, moist and delicious.

This as a leading article to draw trade and incidentally yield a profit of 60 per cent.

Send for a sample of sandwich sliced beef and cease to wonder.

Jots From a Jobber's Note Book

All wholesale grocers will agree at prices of food products are gher than for many years, yet of a ge number of jobbers with whom nave talked not one but declares it his business is fully as large as ial. Some testify to an actual in-ase in business in the same breath th which they groan of inflated ces. The Philadelphia represen-ive of one of the large millers rolled oats stated to me during week that his sales of rolled oats, the highest price ruling since he ered the business, were larger n ever before. It is hard to derstand how this can be, except the theory that the purchasing wer of the working man, upon ich the prosperity of the country pends, has very largely increased the last few years. But certainly, en if this is true, there must be a nit, and when that is reached the action will doubtless be sharp.

Speaking of the campaign to push sale of Ceylon tea in this coun-, which has been so ably waged Messrs. Courtney and Welsh, the credited representatives of the ylon planters, there is one point at has always struck me as in-ngruous: the regular Ceylon Tea mmissioner advocates the use of re, selected Ceylon tea, unmixed d unblended with anything, on e theory that it is so fine that it nnot be improved. At the same ne an Indian Commissioner ad-rtising in the newspapers advises e trade that Ceylon tea is only od when properly blended with dia tea, and tells them to take par-ular pains to see that the legend ads "India and Ceylon." In a cent interview Mr. Welsh states at this association of the two ades works to the disadvan-ge of Ceylon tea. India is immense empire capable of oducing itself enough tea to fur-sh baths for the people of the nited States, while Ceylon is a tle island, with a limited capacity. his, if used to its fullest extent and the market is legitimately worked absorb the tea from the island, mixed and unblended with any-ing else, would of itself, by virtue the limited output, considerably enhance the value of Ceylon tea. Under the present conditions, how-ever, whenever the demand for Ceylon tea is increased and the price of Ceylon enhanced by reason of the increased demand the im-mense crop of India steps in and the proportion of India tea is increased, leaving Ceylon just where it stood originally. There is no question but what the dead level price of Ceylon teas could be elevated materially along the lines used by Messrs. Courtney and Welsh in their cam-paign.

THE JOBBER.

How to Get a Roll Top Desk Free.

The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., of New York, have made an arrangement with the Manufacturers' Trade Mark Association, the big premium clearing-house of New York, which enables them to substantially reward retailers who show an interest in increasing the sale of Barker's Hasty Lunch Chocolate, Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoas.

These goods are so fine that it is hard to sell anything else to consumers once they have had them; so besides the re-ward the Knickerbocker Chocolate Co. give grocers for pushing them, they are certain to please their trade.

Suppose, for example, a grocer needs a new roll-top desk, a safe, a cheese cutter, a computing or platform scale; instead of drawing on his bank account to pay for them he pushes the sale of the Knickerbocker Co.'s goods with his customers, saves the Universal Coupons packed in every case for him and adds them to those coming to him from other manufacturers, and in a short time he will have collected enough to entitle him to any of the articles named.

The Manufacturers' Trade Mark As-sociation issue a handsome illustrated catalogue which they send free to gro-cers, showing an almost unlimited array of useful articles of merchandise which they will send grocers in exchange for the Universal Coupons, together with a list of all the manufacturers throughout the country who give these same coupons to the grocers.

The Knickerbocker Co. is the only manufacturer of chocolate and cocoa from whom a grocer can get these Uni-versal coupons; so grocers who want valuable free merchandise as well as their regular profits will concentrate their efforts on the sale of the Knickerbocker Chocolate Co.'s goods.

Getting Out of the Rut

Suppose a wagon has gotten into a deep rut on the road.

To get it out and moving your way, you've got to exert a force not only as great as the force which put it there, but a considerably greater force just because the wagon is in the rut.

Same way with increasing your trade.

You want to get the trade of Mrs. Jones, who is buying at Brown's.

The very fact that she has fallen into the habit—the rut—of buying there makes your task harder.

You've not only got to give her as good a deal as Brown does, but a better one.

You might tell her that you can give her the best goods at the lowest prices, but Brown is telling her the same thing, and, naturally, she won't exert herself to change.

Looks as if you'd have to sacrifice a good portion of your profit on some things to exert the necessary pull.

But wait a minute.

Suppose there's a way for you to give her more goods and better goods for the same money, and still better your own profit on each sale.

There is such a way.

Eight thousand merchants have found it.

The American Slicing Machine will enable you to give more slices and better-looking meat for the same money and will increase your profit.

The even, appetizing, uniform slices will bring and hold for you all the high-class trade of your locality.

We want you to write us for proof.

Pickles Packed in Tin

The Hoffman House little pickles have special features that ought to interest you in them.

First, they are packed in sanitary cans.

Second, they are prepared by a new process, and have a pickle taste instead of a vinegar taste.

They are guaranteed to keep in any climate, and are altogether the tastiest, meatiest, spiciest little pickles ever put on the market.

Being packed in cans, they are a novelty. You can sell novelties.

A Seller May Choose His Buyer.

In the second department of the Appellate Division of the New York Appeal Court last week an important decision was handed down touching the right of a seller to sell to whom he likes and to refuse to sell to whom he likes.

The case involved an action brought against the American Tobacco Co. through its selling agent the Metropolitan Tobacco Co. by John A. Locker, a Brooklyn jobber, who was refused goods by the Trust. Locker sued for $100,000 damages. The lower court dismissed the case on the following ground:—

> The American Tobacco Company, like any corporation or person, may lawfully refuse to sell its goods to the plaintiffs or to any one, for any reason or for no reason. If, however, it should combine with other corporations or persons to do so, that would be a combination in restraint of trade and unlawful. The trouble with this complaint is that there is no allegation of such combination.

The case was carried to the Appeal Court, who affirmed the decision of the lower court in the following opinion:—

> It is the well-settled law of this State that the refusal to maintain trade relations with any individual is an inherent right which every person may exercise lawfully, whether such refusal is based upon reason or is the result of mere caprice, prejudice or malice.
> It is a part of the liberty of action which the Constitution, State and Federal, guarantees to the citizen.
> It is not within the power of the courts to compel an owner of property to sell or part with his title to it, without his consent and against his wishes, to any particular person.
> There being no averment that in its growth and development the American Tobacco Company has at any time entered into an unlawful or forbidden combination or merger, or become a party to an illlegal agreement or arrangement, we must assume that its relations with its alllied companies are innocent and lawful, and that such is its legal status upon the record before us is abundantly supported by the decisions of our courts.
> While the plaintiffs allege an injury resulting from the acts of the defendants in refusing longer to sell them their products, such injury and attendant damages flow directly from the breach of the alleged contract with the American Tobacco Company to furnish such products at all times, and adequate and complete damages are recoverable therefor in an action at law.

Want New Method of Grading Rio and Santos Coffee.

Consul-General G. E. Anderson reports from Rio de Janeiro that the adoption of the New York classification for grading Brazilian coffees, which has obtained practically in Brazil for a long time and which now has more or less official sanction through the action of the Santos Commercial Association in issuing a formal syllabus of the system, has met with considerable opposition in Brazilian coffee circles, and may have some very importnat results in the coffee markets of the world. The committee of the National Association of Agriculture of Brazil, which was recently named to consider the matter, has published a protest against the New York classification and is carrying on agitation against a continuation of present methods of selling the Brazilian product. The committee objects to the New York classification on the ground, first, that t recent action was not represent tive of Brazilian coffee interest secondly, the adoption of the ne York classification promotes spec lation rather than legitimate sellin resulting in violent oscillations the prices of coffee and prejudici interests dependent upon the pro uct. In the third place, the co mittee declares that inasmuch as t types best known to consumers, Java, Mocha, Porto Rico and t like, are mostly composed nowada of Brazilian coffees without a recognition of the fact being mad while the coffees generally know as Brazilian are those of inferi grades, the waste coffees, in fa it is necessary for the protection Brazilian coffee interests that t present New York system shall done away with, so that the high grades of Brazilian coffee n known under other names shall presented to consumers as wh they really are. Lastly, the co mittee favors an ideal classificati based upon chemical analys Whether there will be any chan in the present method of gradi coffee as a result of this new agit tion in Brazil remains to be see

Hams That Always Sell

There is another sort of ham much less preferred to the absolutely unidentified and unbranded ham, and that is the ham of the packer who gets good raw material to-day and poor to-morrow.

Both of these kill the grocers' trade, because they are so irregular. They please his customers to-day and provoke them to-morrow. No trade can last long under hot and cold applications.

Swift's PREMIUM Hams are always regular. We have the pick of the hogs of the whole country and hence we can keep the quality even the whole year through. Swift's PREMIUM Hams hold and increase trade.

Karo
CORN SYRUP

When you buy Karo Corn Syrup, packed in sterilized sealed cans in our factory, we, the manufacturers, are responsible for it. If it is wrong in any way it is our wrong, and we must make it right.

This is so whether you buy through a jobber or not.

When you buy syrup by the barrel the manufacturer or the jobber may be responsible, and he may not. It depends on circumstances, and it's often a weary, acrimonious task to get together.

You can't buy any better syrup than Karo. It is made direct from corn and has a smooth, rich, sweetness that sugar syrup never has. 10, 25, and 50-cent sizes. Pays a good retail profit and is for sale by all jobbers.

eart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED.]

INITIATIVE.

We read a good deal these days out initiative. Initiative means, applied to business, originality. means getting out of the rut. It eans doing something differt from the way it was done herefore. But this doing different ust have motive. It must have awing power. It must make ople say, "That's great" or That's the thing to do."

It's a great thing to become imersed in business. When you find our thoughts centering pleasantly n your work outside business hours 's a pretty sure sign you're going make a success of that work.

Any of you that may have new leas about the management of any epartment do not hesitate to give iem to us.

HANDLING CRANKS.

The ordinary man loses his temer when things cross him. Your eal business man seldom does when sale is in sight. We want you to ultivate this spirit of diplomacy. t's one of the many important nings for you to work out. Kill he impulse to retaliate. Handle he cranks like an artist. Really hese people aren't looking for rouble. They're susceptible to paience and kindness and considertion. Their view of life is narrow nd their horizon a little dark. olly them. Say to yourself, "Poor voman, I'll try to show you how to reat people."

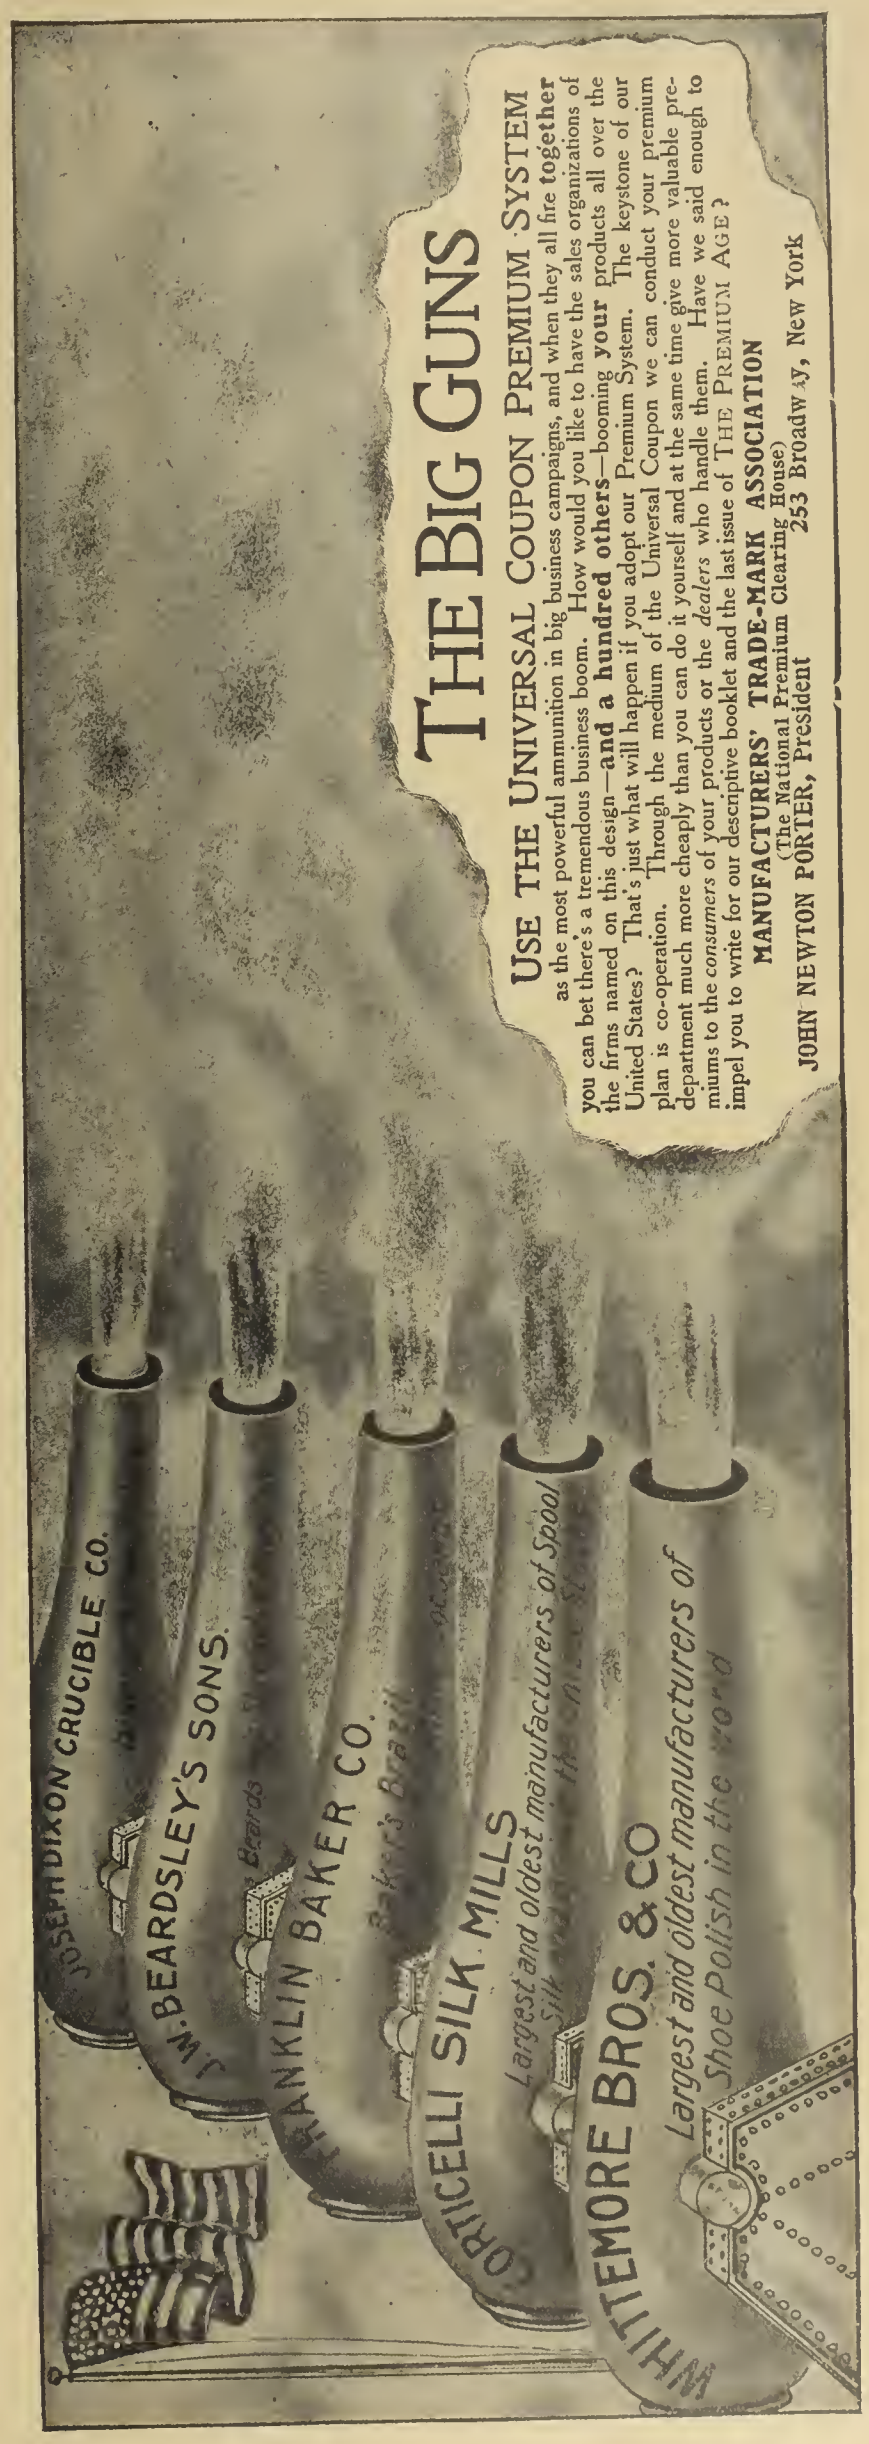
SELLING SUGAR.

When a woman comes in for 5 or 10 pounds of sugar and wants nothing else, for any sake be pleasant about it. Too many salesmen make the mistake of appearing dissatisfied with such a purchase. Of course there's no money in it—that is, in that single transaction, but how about the goods she'll need tomorrow? Make her feel that she's welcome to the sugar even at cost. She's expecting you to show up that special on 25-cent coffee we advertised last week. Fool her. Don't do it. Mind this instruction is not general nor does it apply to everybody. It simply applies to the "smart" examples that you men and women come in contact with every day.

PUSH FLOUR.

We're about entering at the beginning of the bread baking time. All of our own brand now in stock is owned at the old price. That now in transit was bought at the August price. Talk flour at $6.35 a barrel, 80 cents a 24½-pound sack. Our own brand is one of the fanciest patents milled. It has strength and spring, and of course absorbs far more liquid than the low-priced flours. Dwell upon this. Prove that a flour that takes in 20 pounds more milk to the barrel than the ordinary flour means twenty extra 5-cent loaves—$1.

You have 6-pound sample sacks at 20 cents.



This Has It

Foreigners have a knack of preparing food specialties with a flavor that we on this side can't seem to get. Take Bismarck Heringe, a canned fish specialty that we import, and whose packing we control. It is cured in pure vinegar and pure spices, and nothing else, and has an enticing flavor that brings back the consumer time and time again.

There is nothing like it in this country, and if you want something exclusive, you ought to put it in.

California Walnuts Higher Than Last Year.

Two hundred walnut growers o Southern California, comprising the Walnut Growers' Association, met during the week at Los Angeles and voted not to accept less than 14 to 15 cents for this year's crop of walnuts. This is an increase of about 4 cents over the price of last year. The cost to the consumer will be about 25 cents a pound. The association controls almost completely the walnut crop of Southern California, which is practically all that is produced in the United States. Last year 752 carloads, or a total of 5,355 tons, were shipped out of this State. This year the crop will be about 830 tons less. Harvesting will begin about the middle of October.

The GREAT Ramly

Is the one spelled R-A-M-L-Y, the finest Turkish cigarette ever made to sell for 10 cents. So good, other cigarettes are made to look like it, so they will sell on the Ramly's reputation.

If you want to give your customers an ideal smoke, sell them the Ramly. You won't have to tell them about it the second time—they'll ask for it.

What's the Difference?

The answer—"the bottom is as good as the top." You know what this means in Evaporated Apples. It means that your customers will keep buying that kind, and we know you will keep buying that kind to supply your customers. APELPI on a package of evaporated apples is a positive guarantee that the fruit is the finest that can be had, and its preparation can't be excelled.

Ritter's Guaranty

In compliance with the rules and regulations for the enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act published by the Commission appointed for this purpose, we have filed a guaranty covering all our products with the Agricultural Department in Washington under the serial number 1017.

In the future all our products will be labeled in accordance with Regulation Nine as follows: Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906, No. 1017.

This guaranty is sufficient and covers every sale we make and no individual guaranties are necessary.

It has always been our aim to manufacture pure and wholesome food, to comply with existing laws and to protect all who buy our products, and we shall carry out this principle in the future.

We hope to deserve your continued confidence and patronage.

WHERE the GLASS JAR COMES IN

The glass jar in which Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa—and that only—is packed offers the entering wedge to a sale, because it is unusual.

No woman ever saw cocoa packed in glass before; the sight is novel; she asks about it, and if you help a little, she buys.

Bought once, Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa will always be bought again, for it has a flavor which has never been successfully imitated. Our exclusive making process removes the bad, develops the good, and the result is the smoothest, most delicious drinking cocoa on the market.

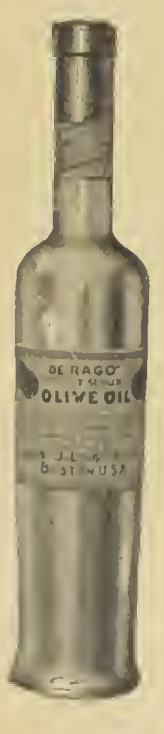
MEDICINE AND FOOD



Lots of people, although they need it, won't take medicine because it's unpleasant. One of the finest medicines ever discovered is DE RAGO OLIVE OIL, and in taking it you get the effects of the medicine without the unpleasantness. On the contrary, the delicious flavor of DE RAGO OLIVE OIL makes everybody who takes it as a medicine WANT it as a food. Recommended by physicians everywhere for infantile and delicate stomachs.

More Lady Acquaintances

There are other good laundry soaps on the market, of course there are, but none seem to be the same hardy "stayers" that Babbitt's Best has been for years.

Babbitt's Best Laundry Soap is known by more housewives, and known better, than any other soap made. This isn't conceit—the sales sheets tell. We know what's going on.

We Are Going to Show How You Can Increase Your Trade at an Expense You Can Afford

Why is Willow Grove Park lighted by countless thousands of electric bulbs?

Why are Coney Island's Parks illuminated in the same way?

Why do all amusement places, department stores, and other big business enterprises spend such enormous sums for light? There is only one answer—to attract the people. Their success depends entirely on attracting the people. Doesn't yours? Why can't you take a leaf out of their book? If light brings them trade, won't it bring trade to you?

Did you ever stop to consider that you could illuminate your window in such a way that it would be sure to "attract the people"—and that if you get one new customer a day through it, the expense will be paid for a month. We will show you how it can be done if you will write or phone us.

He Grades It "Extra"

One reason why it's safer for you to sell

than other butter:—

As an extraordinary precaution we have every pound of it inspected by the official inspector of the Philadelphia Produce Exchange. He looks it over with the utmost closeness—examines it for every phase of quality and after he's through grades it "extra," the highest grade known to the butter trade.

Your reputation depends more on the butter you sell than most other things. Here's reputation-insurance for you.

You May Think You Can't Afford an Automobile in Your Business, but, as a Matter of Fact, You Can't Afford NOT To Have One

A Rapid Motor Truck or Delivery Wagon will do more work than two teams at half the cost. If you can deliver twice as many goods at half your present expense with one of our machines, are you not making a mistake to stick to horses and wagons. Do you know that the trolleys don't cost as much to run as the horse cars? We are certain you know they do much better work.

Get our catalogue and we will show you the Twentieth Century method of delivering goods.

What Washing Powder Do You Sell?

Some old and half-forgotten brand, sold only because you always have sold it?

Or Snow Boy Washing Powder, a powder made of pure soap and other cleansing ingredients, quickly cleaning everything water won't hurt; containing none of the skin-eating alkalies that some of the old brands do; carrying beautiful and high-grade premiums to your customers?

There is room in your store for a good washing powder, but be sure that you handle the best.

Want to double your cake sales?

Certainly you do. Every storekeeper does! Here is the opportunity of not only doubling your sales, but also of preventing the most serious losses connected with the cake trade, that of sampling and breakage.

USE A

Durham Display Cake Cabinet

and your cake troubles are over. It is made of highly polished oak in sizes to hold 12, 16, 20, and 24 cans of standard size, and so arranged that the cans rest upon elevated roller trays, easy to slide in and out. Each can is numbered to save time and labor in filling orders.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES
—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

No Friends Among the Wheelwrights

Wheelwrights don't think much of the "J. M." delivery wagon; it doesn't make enough money for them. No wagon pays fewer visits to the repair shop, or makes its visits shorter.

The most celebrated delivery wagon made—the best wagon ever built for the grocery trade. Strong as iron, yet easy-running; finest steel tires, and wheels from second-growth hickory. Send for catalogue.

At Last We Know What Secretary Wilson Said

Mystery Over Whether He Really Granted Permission to Use More Than 35-1000 of One Per Cent. of Sulphur in Molasses and Dried Fruits, Dispelled by Letter to New Orleans Molasses Man. Text Reproduced Showing Department's Attitude.

For months there has been speculation among the trade as to whether the Federal food authorities had or had not given specific permission to the Louisiana molasses manufacturers and the California evaporated fruit interests to use more sulphur than F. I. Decision, No. 76, permitted, i. e., thirty-five one thousands of 1 per cent. Practically all manufacturers of the two lines of products named are using more than the above percentage of sulphur and it has been widely stated that they are doing so with the positive sanction of the Secretary of Agriculture

It has been said by some that this sanction was given by word of mouth and by others that it was given by letter but up to this time no letter granting definite permission has been produced.

The "Grocery World" now presents the text of a letter signed by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson which for the first time clearly shows as a matter of record the position of the Department on this highly important question. The letter was addressed to a well-known molasses handler of New Orleans, La., and bore the signature of James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture. In part it is as follows:—

"I gave the California people assurance that I would not take them into Court if they were doing the best they could along the line of sulphur, even if they did use more than was permitted by F. I. D. 76. Of course, I have said the same to your people [molasses manufacturers], and I do not think there need be any apprehension with regard to your handling of this coming crop."

"The California people wanted me to abrogate or suspend the ruling—I cannot do that. It was made in conformity with the law and agreed to by the three Secretaries. I can refuse to prosecute where I am not satisfied that people should be prosecuted. We can modify the decision, and if we find from further investigation that it should be modified, we shall do so. Just assure them that they should go on with their business and everything will come out all right. If it be found that Decision 76 may be well modified, it will be modified."

The above seems to be as definite as anything short of an official regulation can be, yet the fact remains that it is not a regulation, but is rather a permission to temporarily evade a regulation. For this reason the Pennsylvania courts, if the above were looked to for protection against dried fruit prosecutions where the sample contained more than 35-1,000 of 1 per cent., would probably refuse to allow it to be considered.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Erie, Pa., October 17, 1907.

Our 134th affiliation is the Coatesville Business Men's Association, which was organized June 1, 1907, with the following officers: President, Wm. R. Jackson; first vice-president, I. Braunstain; second vice-president, J. E. Ramsey; secretary, F. H. Ewald; treasurer, L. C. Robinson. Executive Committee: A. Tucks, Jas. Ginis, W. W. Mast, Theo. Wickersham, J. M. Duncan, Jas. G. Kennedy, C. N. Speakman, John E. Martin, E. E. Schrack. Meetings are held on the third Tuesday of each month. They have 77 members in good standing, with an average attendance of 30. Annual dues are $5. They are interested in co-operative buying, municipal and State legislation, collecting, credit reporting, arbitration of strikes, fire, life, plate glass and horse insurance and trade excursions.

Our 135th affiliation is the Merchants' Protective Association of Nazareth and vicinity. This association was organized June 19, 1907, with the following officers: President, E. J. Unaugst; vice-president, A. J. Stoffler; secretary, L. P. Kostenbader; assistant secretary, Geo. H. Weltz; treasurer, J. J. Kemmerer. They have 37 members in good standing, with an average attendance of 50 per cent. Meetings are held monthly. Entrance fee, $2.

The Merchants' Legislative League, incorporated under the laws of New York State, George S. Hughes, secretary; "Judge" Parsons, attorney, have established headquarters at Erie, Pa., in the interests of their Merchants' Legislative League Advocate. They intend to become a legislative factor in Pennsylvania, and have applied for indorsement of the Erie Business Men's Exchange and the Retail Merchants' Association of Pennsylvania. Indorsement has not been given. The character of their work and workers is being carefully investigated. Gimbel Bros. Sold Short Weight Prunes

Only Full Weight Store in the City Detected in Selling 15¼ Ounc of Prunes for a Full Pound. "Grocery World" Represent tive Answers Gimbel Advertisement.

A great shock awaits the general grocery trade of the East. Owing to the modest and oft-repeated confession of Gimbel Bros., the Philadelphia department store people, that their's was about the only grocery store in the city which gave full weight and which abhorred all forms of short weight frauds with furious horror, the general trade have come to hold a deep reverence for the Philadelphia concern and to feel an humble gladness that there was at least one grocery store in the vicinity to which they could point with pride.

The "Grocery World" is now about to add to Gimbel Bros' reputation. In last Thursday's daily advertisement appeared the following:—

> Pitted Prunes—Ensign; fancy, large, meaty California fruit; three 1-lb. packages for 40c; or 15c lb.

The "Grocery World" sent a representative to the Gimbel store to buy three cartons and to take the added precaution of asking the clerk whether each one contained a full pound of prunes. This question was asked and the unequivoc answer received that each cart did contain a full pound.

The cartons were brought to t "Grocery World" office a weighed on scientifically exa Troemner scales. Two of the were straight. The third failed weigh a full pound, carton and a The exact gross weight was 15 ounces. Stripped, the prunes the selves weighed only 15¼ ounce

Considering that Gimbel Bro advertised to sell full pounds, a that their clerk specifically inform the buyer that she was selling fu pounds, and that the concern fu filled these promises with 15 ounces, where does that place the Pharisees on the short weight que tion now?

ial correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, October 18, 1907.

Resolutions adopted at last week's eting of the New York Retail ocers' Union on the subject of k inspection do not meet with approval of some prominent mbers who happened to be absent m the meeting, and it is likely t the question will be brought up further consideration at another ie. The resolutions indorsed the itude of Comptroller Metz in op- sition to a request of the Health ard authorities for more money h which to employ additional in- ectors.

The Health authorities claim that larger force of inspectors is re- ired in order to asure the purity the milk supply of the city. The mptroller says that the inspection eady in force has resulted in owing most of the business into control of a few large compan- , and he believes all the small mpanies will be driven out if the esent tendencies are encouraged. Some of the members said at the eeting that as a result of the sys- n of inspection and restrictions it s been getting more and more ficult for grocers to handle milk th any satisfaction and with any rt of profit. One or two seemed think that it will be just as well r the grocers to cease the sale of id milk altogether and give up e field to the large dealers.

The principal criticisms of the solutions is that retail grocers ould not, especially at this time, ke any position against the most ll inspection of food products. ne of the officers who intends to eak on the subject at the first portunity said that even if the ocers should have to abandon the le of fluid milk, they should de- are themselves in favor of the best id most rigorous inspection that to be had, for the purpose of safe- uarding the supply in every way. he chief trouble at present, accord- g to Health Board authorities, is at many of the producers are care- ss as to the sanitary conditions nder which the milk is collected and shipped into the city. It is believed by some, however, that the more exacting are the requirements, the more likely are the grocers, at least in parts of the city, to sell the product. In some parts of the city the number of people who prefer to get their milk in bottles from their grocer instead of from a milkman is said to be increasing.

Now that short weights is a topic receiving consideration in various quarters, retail grocers are pointing out that they are often among the victims, because packers and shippers carelessly or otherwise neglect to deliver the full quantity of various articles. One large grocer said that among the products that have reached him short of weight are potatoes, which have come in some instances from five to forty pounds below the standard 180 pounds that should be in a barrel. The advice is given to the retailers to use the utmost vigilance in weighing on its receipt everything that is sold by weight, and taking nothing for granted. If the barrel or bag of potatoes is passed along by the retailer to a customer, as sometimes happens, without reweighing there is a possibility that it did not contain the full weight, and if the customer should, perchance, learn this he would put the responsibility on the grocer.

Anxiety is expressed by retailers who have made their contracts for canned goods with the usual conditions, which will let out the jobber if the receipts turn out small and there should be a scarcity of supplies a little later in the season, perhaps about the holiday times. In that case the retailer would, as in former years, under similar circumstances, have to pay higher prices, and the contracts would prove of no avail. The jobber in turn puts it up to the packer and to the producers, saying that they will not make deliveries if the crops are not up to requirements.

Still a retailer is heard now and then to complain that he gets the

Although the holder of a fruit concession outside a chain grocery store on Fulton street, in Brooklyn, has been compelled by the city authorities to pay a license fee, others who have like concessions have not been prosecuted for the fee. In the case in question it was held that the man is only a stand owner and is not in the class of storekeepers, although he pays a rental to the chain grocery company for the space in front of the store, extending to the sidewalk line, and also for room in the cellar. Many grocers sublet the stand at their doors in like manner, so that if there should be a general crusade to collect license fees it would mean the collection of considerable money.

The probability is that in the Fulton street case there was complaint because the holder of the concession has branched out to an unusual extent, occupying with his stand much more than the ordinary sidewalk space, and this resulted in the demand for the license fee. Sometimes the stand owners scatter their stock of fruit about so that it almost blockades the sidewalk, and this has been the cause of occasional complaint.

The Japanese are said to have intended to advance prices quite high during the coming winter, but there are other people who know about as much as they do as to the methods of putting up prices. Large tea dealers hint that by getting hold of a large proportion of the crop they have kept prices from going still higher, but everybody does not agree as to this claim.

The National Association of Food Manufacturers held a regular meeting in this city on Thursday and decided finally to make a stand in favor of the continued use of benzoate of soda as a food preservative. It was voted to recommend to all these and certain other associations that each appoint a committee of three, to combine into a national committee to have charge of the campaign in the interests of the continued use of benzoate of soda. Invitations were accepted from several of the organizations to send delegates to their conventions soon to be held.

After a general discussion of the benzoate question, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—

Be it resolved by the Food Manufacturers' Association at their meeting in New York, October 17, 1907:—

(1) That we commend the movement of the Government in the direction of improving the food supply of the country as being in the interests of the manufacturers, distributer and consumer alike.

(2) Resolved, however, that at the same time we must give expression to our regret at the inconvenience and difficulties under which the business interests labor from the conflicts in the various State laws and their interpretation, and would, therefore, urge the unification as far as practicable, of the various laws and regulations adopted thereunder.

(3) Resolved, That, believing benzoate of soda to be harmless, and knowing its necessity to our business in small quantities, we urge the food officials to allow its continued use.

Postmaster-General Will Give Country Merchants Parcels Post of Their Own.

Proposes to Remove Parcels Post Opposition of Retail Merchants by Giving Them a Lower Rate for Their Own Parcels. Suggests 12 Cents Per Pound to the Mail Order House and Five Cents for the Country Dealer.

The official statement of his intentions at the coming session of Congress, issued during the week by Postmaster-General Meyer, shows that he is relying upon a small sop granted to the retail interests of the country to induce the withdrawal of their opposition to his parcels post scheme.

As to this the report speaks as follows:—

Two interests are opposing the extension of parcels post in this country—the express companies and the country retail merchants. The latter fear that the mail order houses will derive a benefit to their own disadvantage. It is in connection with the country retail merchants that I desire to speak especially. I propose to recommend the establishment of a parcels post in rural routes which will meet the objections of the small storekeepers and retailers. This will be a boon to our rural population, and to the storekeeper, so the latter can receive his orders by mail or telephone and dispatch the desired merchandise by the rural carrier.

If my recommendations are adopted it will cost 12 cents a pound for the mail order house to send parcels to the rural delivery patron from any city post office, while for delivery from the distributing office of said route, the charge will be but 5 cents for the first pound and 2 cents for each additional pound, up to eleven pounds, or 25 cents for a package weighing eleven pounds.

I am also considering the advisability of recommending a local parcels post delivery at city free delivery post offices, but in order to install such a system it will be necessary to obtain from Congress a special appropriation to acquire wagons and automobiles to do the required hauling. The object of my recommendation to Congress will be to get an adjustment of rates and weights that will meet the rates and weights charged for parcels sent by post to other counties. This will mean a reduction in the rate from 16 to 12 cents per pound, and an increase in the weight limit from four to eleven pounds.

Made $100.

T. R. Elliot writes under date of September 24, 1907: "I have used several bottles of Absorbine and I find it to work exactly as you say. The first I used was on a horse with strained tendons, and after using two bottles you would never know there was anything wrong with him. An expert horse buyer bought him and never notices his leg at all, where before we used Absorbine it was puffy and enlarged. Sold him for $150, and before he was not worth any more than $50 for market. Also took off bog spavin in about ten days, so it was as natural as could be. Wishing you every success." Absorbine penetrates to the seat of the trouble promptly and effectually without blistering or removing the hair. Does not require the horse to be laid up. Mild in its action, but positive in its results. It will give you satisfaction. Two dollars a bottle at druggists, or express paid. W. F. Young, P. D. F., 9 Monmouth street, Springfield, Mass.

Gimbel Bros., the Philadelphia department storekeepers, who have been caught by the "Grocery World" selling short weight prunes, will probably excuse themselves with the plea—if they make any excuse at all—that they were deceived by the prune packer—that they bought the goods in good faith and believed they were full pounds when they advertised and sold them as such.

Gimbel Brothers' Short Weights.

To a concern other than Gimbel Bros. that might be a good excuse or it might not. In most cases it probably would be. But in Gimbel Bros' case it is no excuse at all. With a great blare of trumpet and roll of drum they have called attention to themselves as the only store that made absolutely sure that everything sold was full weight. With statements that reflected upon other grocers as heavily as it flattered themselves they have posed on their little advertising pedestal as the embodiment of all things pure and holy in the grocery business.

The Gimbels probably did not sell short weight prunes wilfully. But if they did it carelessly and negligently they are just as guilty, and they must have been careless and negligent in this particular case if they told the truth about the extraordinary precautions they take.

The "Grocery World" wonders whether one carton of these prunes was short out of every three sold.

Forty Years Ago.

In an interview on old and new business methods last Sunday, Hetty Green, the richest American woman, said this:—

> Business is not conducted in the same way to-day as it was forty years ago. Then a man's word was as good as his bond. To-day, you should have good glasses when you inspect his bond.

This same suggestion has been several times made in the "Grocery World," and confirmation from such high authority is strong. The old days were best in that respect at least. In this day we deal with each other "at arm's length," as the law puts it, and men do to their fellows, on the principle that "business is business," things which in the old days they would be ostracized for. Only the other day a presumably upright business man who had given his verbal word to the writer refused to carry it out, after consultation with a lawyer, on the ground that it was not binding upon him, because not in writing! In the writer's mind, that closely approaches dishonesty, yet it is only one case out of myriads. A man who would have done such a thing half a century ago would have been an outcast among his fellows, trusted by no one and despised by all! Yet on the principle that in order to keep upright to-day men need to do only what the law compels, this man was wholly within his rights.

Imprisonment for Debt.

In a recent official report to the State Department, United States Consul F. W. Mahon, stationed at Nottingham, England, says something which will make many a beat-ridden American grocer envious:—

> A debtor here against whom judgment is rendered for debt may be summarily required to pay before a given date on penalty of imprisonment. This power of committal resides in the judge of the court. Some judges exercise it much more freely than others. In Nottingham County imprisonment for debt is rare. In other populous court districts with much court business the cases of imprisonment do not exceed 50 a year, while in some less populous districts with less court business the number reaches 500 a year. But it would seem that, on the whole, the indulgence shown to delinquent debtors is steadily decreasing, for the cases of imprisonment in the country have decennially increased as follows under the existing law: In 1876, 4,228; 1886, 5,486; 1896, 8,190; 1906, 11,986. Technically the imprisonment is for contempt of court. The judge orders the debtor to pay before a given day, failing which he may be jailed for contempt, not exceeding forty days, however, in any case, and he is released at once if he pays in the meantime.

In this country imprisonment for debt, formerly general, has practically been abolished. In Pennsylvania it was wholly abolished in 1845. If the imprisonment penalty could be administered with discretion it would be both wholesome and salutary, but its difficulty is that under most laws discretion, while usually possible, cannot be compelled. A creature without assets, but earning good wages, who will not pay a debt because the law will not compel him to, is a virtual thief and should be jailed. None but himself would complain at the enforcement of the imprisonment penalty against him. But the righteous poor man who does not pay simply because he is in distress and cannot, is not a fit subject for it, though under the general statutes covering the subject the imprisonment penalty can be and often is enforced against him. But no law has yet been devised to compel a judge to jail the first man and release the second, yet nothing short of that can make the penalty equitable. The English method approaches it as nearly as possible, but even there much is left to the discretion of a judge, which is not always a safe refuge.

Only Sellers in Fresh Meats, Etc., Need Be Licensed in Philadelphia

Philadelphia, October 15, 1907.

Mr. Elton J. Buckley, Attorney at Law,
730 Drexel Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

My Dear Mr. Buckley:—With reference to the matter of requiring licenses from grocers and other retail shops handling dried meats, canned meats, potted meats and cured ham, the Board of Health after deliberation and after consulting counsel on the subject, has decided for the time being not to require a license of such merchants as properly come within the group designated above. Trusting this may be satisfactory, I am Very truly yours,

A. C. ABBOTT, Chief of Bureau.

The above letter reports the final decision of the Philadelphia Bureau of Health upon a matter previously discussed in these columns. When the Act of 1907 was passed requiring all Philadelphia dealers in meats, game, shellfish, fish and poultry to procure a license and subject themselves to the supervision of the Health Bureau, Dr. Abbott, the chief of that department, announced that in his judgment the Act applied to dried beef and other provisions, canned meats, mince meat, canned products, sausage, etc., and that all dealers therein were subjects of the law. Elton J. Buckley, Esq., representing certain trade interests, filed a brief of argument to the contrary, which seemingly had persuaded the Bureau that their original attitude was wrong.

There is no specific mention in the above letter of mince meat, sausage, etc., but the decision unquestionably includes them.—ED.

Current Grocery and General Store Failures.

Figures of September and Third Quarter of 1907, Compared With Same Periods of 1906.

The figures covering the grocery and general store failures for the month of September, 1907 and 1908, show a considerable difference. The official figures obtained from the Dun agency are as follows:—

General stores, September, 1907, 65; liabilities, $428,967; September, 1906, 78; liabilities, $477,355.

Grocery stores, September, 1907, 210; liabilities, $594,323; September, 1906, 168; liabilities, $600,854.

The figures covering the third quarter of 1907 show less difference from the same quarter of 1906. The figures are reproduced:—

General stores, third quarter, 1907, 221; liabilities, $1,638,712; same, 1906, 217; liabilities, $1,240,033.

Grocery stores, third quarter, 1907, 529; liabilities, $1,715,113; same, 1906, 513; liabilities, $1,634,980.

Apples average $4.50 per barrel for fine fruit. Ordinary varieties range from $3 to $3.50. All these prices are at least $1 above normal.

CONCERNING PREPARED MUSTARD.

One firm engaged in the manufacture and sale of mustard complained about the rule which requires that prepared mustard shall bear on the label thereof a distinct statement of all the ingredients with the percentage of mustard contained therein. But this rule requires no manufacturer to give any of his trade secrets away. While the names of the various ingredients must be given, the quantity is not required. The percentage of mustard used must be given, but surely that is a piece of information to which the purchaser is entitled and it can do the manufacturer no harm, nor the vender either.

The truth is, this rule was brought into existence through statements made by two Washington County merchants who were on a grand jury that considered some milk prosecutions brought in that county. They complained to the agent of the division that a merchant in their neighborhood was selling a quart Mason jar of prepared mustard for 10 cents, whereas the ordinary price of pure mustard is 10 cents a glass. Besides the remarkable price the enterprising merchant was presenting each purchaser of mustard with a glass dish as a premium. They held that they couldn't compete with a man like that and wanted to know if something could not be done to protect the honest dealer and the purchaser. This led to the formulation of the rule, which is perfectly fair and just to all concerned.

The theory of the Dairy and Food Division is that the Act of Assembly contemplates the protection of the consumer from unscrupulous manufacturers. It likewise means that the man who purchases mustard shall obtain mustard. The most effective way to promote this aim of the law is to insist upon the observance of the rule which has been complained of. It may prevent the sale of cheap sham mustard, but it will promote the public health and tend to the increase of common honesty.

Another paragraph is also worthy of reproduction, because directly apropos of a slur recently emitted by Gimbel Bros., of Phila., against the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association, which organization it accused of having joined the ranks of the short weight frauds. The "Grocery World," in commenting upon this accusation, asserted that no concern in all Pennsylvania was more careful about the character of the goods sold—and few as much so—as the Philadelphia Association. The best source of information on this point is of course the Dairy and Food Department, which alone can speak by the card. The latest number of the Pennsylvania bulletin contained the following directly in point:—

> If every retail merchant in Pennsylvania would purchase his goods after the plan pursued by the Retail Grocers' Association of Philadelphia, through its secretary, William Smedley, there would be no prosecutions and the trade and the public would be well served. Mr. Smedley is the purchasing agent for about 750 retail firms in Philadelphia. He always lays down the rules prepared by the Dairy and Food Commissioner under Section 3 of the new law when confronted by an agent and says: "Do your goods comply with the requirements of these rules? If they do, I am ready to do business. If not, you can sell me no goods." Recently a firm making and selling prepared

Here's A New FALL IDEA

This is the season when you begin to get busy with new ideas. The summer lassitude is gone—it's a case of good, keen business now for six months anyway.

Let one of your new ideas be to put in German-American coffees. Why? Because they're new to you and will be new to your customers. You've never handled anything like them. They are grown on the Triunfo Plantations of Central America, which are known to every coffee connoisseur in Europe and many in America.

Smooth, mellow, rich and fragrant coffees that will be welcomed with delight by everybody who likes coffee at all.

mustard objected to the rule covering prepared mustards, on the ground that it should not be compelled to disclose the percentage of mustard in the preparation. Mr. Smedley declared that the rule was perfectly fair and added that if the firm wanted to sell any mustard to the merchants whom he represented, it would have to comply with the Act of Assembly. He added that the formula should be printed in plain type, so that everyone could see and understand just what ingredients the preparation contained. No man in Pennsylvania is doing more to compel manufacturers to comply with the rules of the Dairy and Food Division than Mr. William Smedley. Such service as he is rendering counts continually and forcefully in the right direction.

Only Rice Crop Equals Normal.

Corn, Wheat, Oats, Barley, Rye, Buckwheat and Potatoes All Below Last Year in Size of Crop. Oats Deficient Both by Size of Crop and Yield to Acre.

The Crop Reporting Board of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture finds, from the reports of the correspondents and agents of the Bureau, as follows:

The condition of corn on October 1st was 78.0, as compared with 80.2 last month, 90.1 on October 1, 1906, 89.2 on October 1, 1905, and a ten-year average of 79.6.

The preliminary estimate of the average yield per acre of spring wheat is 13.1 bushels, which compares with 13.7 bushels as finally estimated in 1906, 14.7 in 1905, and a ten-year average of 14.0 bushels. The total indicated production of spring wheat is about 216,067,000 bushels, compared with 242,372,966 bushels as finally estimated in 1906. The production of spring and winter wheat combined is about 625,567,000 bushels, compared with 735,260,970 bushels as finally estimated a year ago. These and other preliminary estimates of yield are subject to such revision and correction, when the final estimates of the bureau are made in December, as may be found proper through more thorough investigation.

The average quality of spring wheat is 88.8, as compared with 88.5 in 1906, 89.0 in 1905, and 75.7 in 1904.

An average yield of oats of about 23.5 bushels per acre is indicated, as compared with 31.2 bushels finally estimated in 1906, 34.0 bushels in 1905, and a ten-year average of 30.1 bushels. A total yield of about 741,521,000 bushels is thus indicated, as compared with 964,904,522 bushels finally estimated in 1906. The average quality is 77.0, against 88.2 in 1906, 92.4 in 1905, and 91.4 in 1904.

The preliminary estimate of yield per acre of barley is 23.9 bushels, against 28.3 bushels as finally estimated in 1906, 26.8 bushels in 1905, and a ten-year average of 25.5 bushels. A total production of 147,192,000 is thus indicated, as compared with 178,916,484 bushels finally estimated in 1906. The average quality is 88.1, against 89.1 in 1906, 86.2 in 1905, and 88.7 in 1904.

The preliminary estimate of yield per acre of rye is 16.4 bushels, against 16.7 bushels as finally estimated in 1906, 16.5 bushels in 1905, and a ten-year average of 15.7 bushels. A total production of 31,566,000 bushels is thus indicated, compared with 33,374,833 bush finally estimated in 1906. The av age quality is 91.6, against 94.1 1906, 92.6 in 1905, and 91.6 in 19

The average condition of bu wheat at time of harvest was 8 as compared with 77.4 Septem 1st, 84.9 a year ago, 91.6 in 19 and a ten-year average of 82.9.

The average condition of potat on October 1st was 77.0, as co pared with 80.2 last month, 8 October 1, 1906, 74.3 October 1905, and a ten-year average 74.7.

The average condition of ric October 1st was 88.7, as compa with 87.2 October 1, 1906, 89.3 tober 1, 1905, and 87.3 October 1904.

Dr. Wiley Says Reason Law Not M Actively Enforced Is from Lack Funds. New Decision on Label C rections and Collecting Samples.

Special correspondence of "Grocery Worl

Washington D. C.,
October 17, 1907

During the week Dr. H. Wiley, chief of the Federal Fo Law Enforcement Board, answe a large number of criticisms t after nearly a year no appar effort had been made to actua enforce the law, by the statem that the reason why the act had been more actively enforced was cause of scarcity of funds. coupled this with the statement t the board will ask the next C gress to appropriate $1,000,0 more for the carrying on of work. I quote the following fr Dr. Wiley's statement:—

> We have in the neighborhood o $650,000 available to carry on th work, but it has already been dem onstrated that that sum will not b sufficient to meet the needs. W expect to ask Congress to give us a appropriation of $1,000,000 for th next year. That will about carr us through. The amount seem large, but the results now bein achieved fully warrant the expense.

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

A Clever Coffee Window.

By C. H. Lockwell, Advertising Manager National Cash Register Company.

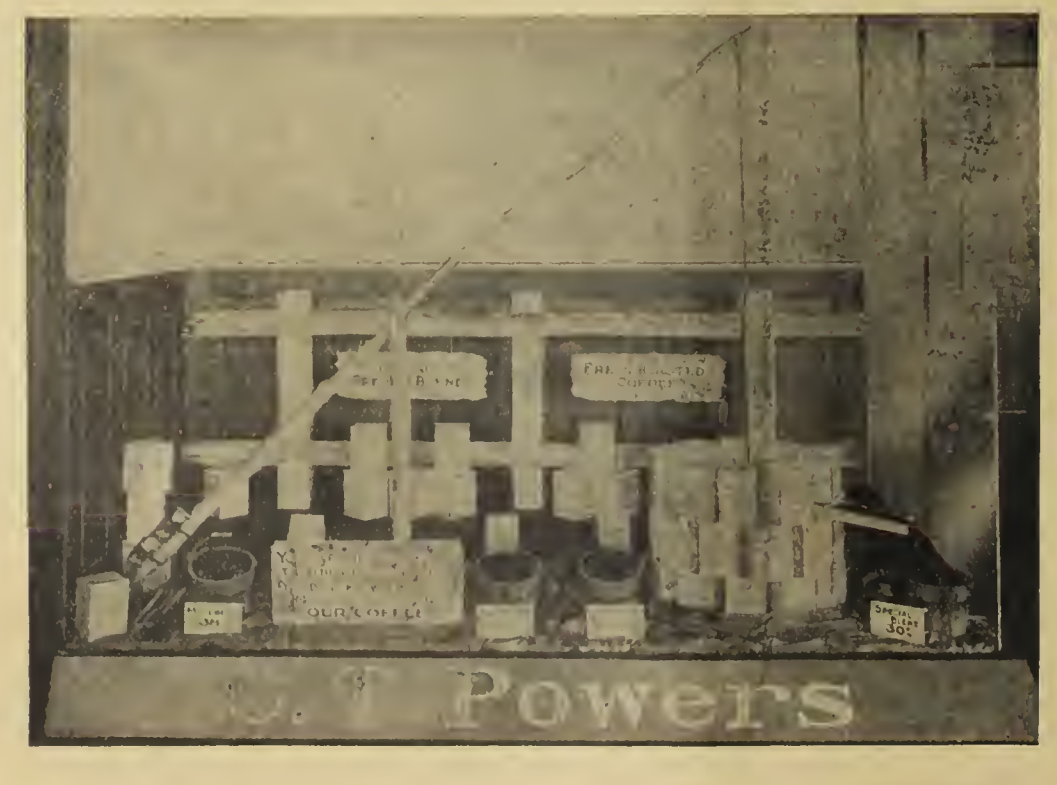
The background is made by taking two irregular shaped boards. Apply grey paint to them to make them appear weather-beaten. These are mounted on three posts composed of packages of coffee. Between the posts two signs are suspended, reading as follows: "Try Our Special Blend," and "Fresh Roasted Coffee."

In front of this fence, on one side of window, an old well is made of packages of coffee. Coffee beans are made to appear as running from the spout by gluing them to a piece of flexible cardboard. A bucket is set under this spout. The pole and support for the well can easily be secured. A rope is fastened to the end of the pole and leads into the well.

The floor is green cloth puffed. Coffee is displayed in small pails in the front of window, with a card stating kind and price.

The large sign in window reads:

> "You never miss the water
> Till the well runs dry.
> You don't know what you
> Miss if you don't try our Coffee."



sincere disposition to conform to ıe law and regulations. By so do- ıg they are promoting common nesty between themselves and the nsumers of their goods and lay- ıg a foundation for business in the ıture.

The Federal Food Board issued supplementary decision during week regarding the legality of d labels. The text follows:—

Attention is directed to the fact ıat misleading and deceptive state- ıents of the Board should be al- wed to remain on one portion of ıe label with a corrective state- ıent upon another portion of the ıbel. This principle of correction ill be waived until further notice ı case of decorated sardine tins hich were printed and manufac- ured prior to January 1, 1907. In hese cases the corrections may all e made in one label attached se- urely to one side of the package. ach invoice should be accompanied y a certincate from the exporter, howing the date of manufacture of he tins.

Still another decision was handed wn making a change in the pres- t method of collecting food sam- s under the Federal law. The cision is in the shape of a recom- ndation to the three Secretaries, t is now official as it has been ap- oved of by those officials.

The text of this decision is as fol- vs:—

The Board of Food and Drug nspection recommends that regula- ion 3, of the rules and regulations or the enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act, be amended to read as ollows, the amendment to become nd be effective on and after No- ember 1, 1907:—

Regulation 3, collection of sam- les. Section 4. "Samples of un- broken packages shall be collected only by authorized agents of the Department of Agriculture, or by the health, food or drug officer of any State, Territory or the District of Columbia, when commissioned by the Secretary of Agriculture for this purpose. Samples may be purchased in the open market and, if in bulk, the marks, brands or tags upon the package, carton, container, wrapper or accompanying printed or written matter shall be noted. The collector shall also note the names of the vendor and agent through whom the sale was actually made, together with the date of the purchase. The collector shall purchase representative samples.

A sample taken from bulk goods shall be divided into three parts, and each shall be labeled with the identifying marks. If a package be less than four pounds, or in volume less than two quarts, three packages shall be purchased when practicable, and the marks and tags upon each noted as above. When three samples are purchased, one sample shall be delivered to the Bureau of Chemistry or to such chemist or examiner as may be designated by the Secretary of Agriculture; the second and third samples shall be held under seal by the Secretary of Agriculture, who, upon request, shall deliver one of such samples to the party from whom purchased or to the party guaranteeing such merchandise.

"When it is impracticable to collect three samples, or to divide the sample or samples, the order of delivery outlined above shall obtain, and in case there is a second sample the Secretary of Agriculture may, at his discretion, deliver such sample to the parties interested. All samples shall be sealed by one collector with a seal provided for the purpose."

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XV.—Work for Good Roads.

Good roads mean good business. Few business men realize the loss business occasioned by poor ads. The goods wanted by the rmer to-day may be forgotten by morrow, and if he has good ads when the weather is such that cannot farm he will go to town d buy what he wants while he has nty of time. If the roads are d and he stays at home until they e good he then has something else do and the merchant loses.

This is a subject which should ve the best thoughts of merchants d trade organizations. It means uch to every town, big or little, d too much effort cannot be made this direction, but when you start building roads out of your town, not follow the customary plan of ilding from your town to the next one. That trip can be made on the train if desired. Be logical, and build your road from your town to the outer edge of your trade territory which is furthest from the railroad. Every road built from nowhere to your city will bring business to you. Every road built from some other town to your city will bring business to you and the other town, but if you are spending your money to develop road building you are not working for the other town, but want to broaden your own territory. It costs much money to build good roads, and this little point may help each town to make its investment a better one.

When States and counties begin to build roads they will run from one town to another. Each town will have to take care of its own territory still. F. A. P.

Must or May—Which?

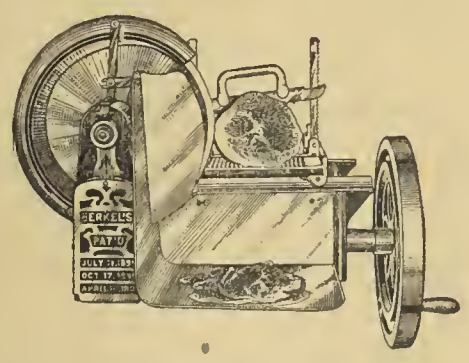
How many of your customers must keep coming to your store—because you're giving them something your competitor can't duplicate?

How many of your customers may keep coming to your store—until some other fellow happens to catch their eye? Then they'll go to him because he can give them just about the same grade of goods at the same prices.

Which kind of customers would you prefer?

Which kind pays best?

Don't all speak at once.



Well, then.

The American Slicing Machine makes trade for you that must keep coming.

Why?

Because you can give them dainty, delicious sliced meats just the right thickness and can give more slices for their money. Your competitor can only saw off uneven chunks by hand.

Besides, you save waste and make a better profit.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The demand for tea is still active, all grades participating. London continues to buy low grade Foochow Oolongs in this country, though no further advance has occurred in price. The week has brought no changes and no developments of any character. It is expected that the active demand will continue until toward the close of November, when the usual holiday dullness will set in.

Coffee.

The market for Brazil coffee has had some steady days during the past week, but at no time have values been firm. There have been some fluctuations of a few points both up and down. Mild coffees are steady to firm. Java firm. Mocha steady. General demand for coffee moderate.

Sugar.

The sugar market shows no change for the week. Raws have been fairly steady, though some sales are reported at a slight declinc. Refined sugar is unchanged, and gives no immediate prospect of any change. The demand is fair.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose is unchanged for the week. Compound syrup is in fair demand at ruling prices. Sugar syrup is steady to firm and in excellent demand. Molasses is quiet and unchanged. New crop goods have not yet become available in any serious quantity.

Canned Goods.

The tomato market vacillates between 87½ and 90 cents county, and shows very little demand in the East. The West, however, is a heavy purchaser. The situation in tomatoes will be rather uncertain until the size of the pack is definitely known. Some authorities contend that it will not be in excess of 8,500,000, which if true would doubtless mean $1 tomatoes at least. All estimates at this stage, however, are mere guesses, and it is impossible to form any adequate idea of the subject. There seems to be some reason, however, for doubting that the pack will fall as low as the above figures. Corn is stronger and indications point to higher prices. The week has shown more inquiry and the general undertone is strong. Out of the West comes the statement that the pack of Western corn is 2,000,000 cases less than last year, which is interesting, since it was the excessive Western pack which lay so heavily on the market. Indications point to a gradual advance in corn from now until next season though present prices are already somewhat above normal. Peas are unchanged. The market is firm with but few offerings. A heavy demand waits for a low price. Peaches are unchanged, Eastern grades being short, dull and firm. Apples have been sold at $3.50 for New York State gallons during the week, which is a concession of 25 cents. The demand is good. The Baltimore line is unchanged and broken. String beans steadily forge upward. The California canned goods line is unchanged and dull. Deliveries are expected to range from 50 to 95 per cent.

Fish.

The mackerel market continues very strong, with great scarcity and constantly advancing prices as the features. Norway fat mackerel are still very scarce, and prices are so uncertain and uneasy as to be hardly quotable. The effort on the part of buyers is to get the goods at almost any price in reason. The demand for shore mackerel as a substitute for Norways has shown an increase, on account of the scarcity of the latter. Prices show no advance as yet, but will if the demand continues. Irish mackerel are scarce also and bring high prices. New fish are particularly scarce. Cod, hake and haddock are all comparatively slow and unchanged in price. The advance of 15 cents per case on domestic sardines became operative last Tuesday, but caused no ripple in the trade. The demand is light. Foreign sardines are dull and unchanged at firm prices. Salmon is steady to firm and in moderate demand.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are still easy, but the market is about unchanged from last week. New fruit of all sizes is now in market, but the demand is light largely on account of the sulphur agitation. Peaches are the deadest line of all, as the sulphur campaign centres there, and the trade are chary of buying despite the official statement that no further prosecutions will for the present be brought. Prices of peaches are unchanged and stocks are still light. Apricots are dull and unchanged. Currants are in excellent shape and strong. The demand from first hands is slow, as deliveries of new goods are now beginning. The market is really a trifle higher, i

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for he right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" nd contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried everal, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, robably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of win-ow-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window isplays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new r original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are erhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an verage price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement hould be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If rawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink ot pencil).

uying be done to-day. The first ar of new California seeded rais-ns arrived on Wednesday, and sold eadily on a basis of 11½ cents, hich is 2¼ cents above the open-ng. The market for loose Califor-ia raisins is being greatly inter-ered with by imported raisins. he latter were delivered some time nd have been readily selling at omewhat below the California rice. In consequence California oose raisins can be bought to-day elow the opening price. Apples re firm and in fair demand.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans have now passed mar-ows in price, and are now quoted at 2.50 for York State and $2.40 for Michigan. The demand is good. Marrows are obtainable at $2.35 for old and $2.45 for new. California imas range from 5¾ to 6 cents for ew goods to arrive, late and rompt shipment respectively. Split eas are very scarce and firm, and he quotation for yellows is about 7.50 per barrel. Green splits are orth about $10 per barrel. The ituation is very strong.

Butter.

The butter market has declined 1 ent on all grades during the past week. The cause was the decline f consumption due to the ex-remely high prices. The make is bout normal and the quality is unning very good. The market s barely steady at present prices, nd if the coming week brings any hange it will probably be a further slight decline.

Eggs.

The egg market remains about unchanged from last week. Fresh new laid eggs continue very scarce, but prices show no change. The market for storage eggs also remains about unchanged. Stocks are decreasing satisfactorily and no special change is looked for during the next few days. The demand for eggs holds up very well.

Cheese.

The market for full cream cheese shows another ½ cent advance during the week, and on to-day's market the retailer will be charged about 17 cents per pound. No jobber has named this price yet, however, as most had bought ahead. The supply of cheese is still short and the consumptive demand good. Unless all signs fail the present high prices, as soon as they are felt, will curtail consumption, and thus stop the advance. Materially lower prices, however, can scarcely be expected.

Provisions.

The week has brought no change in smoked meats of any cut. Demand and supply are both about normal. Pure lard is very scarce and has advanced ¼ cent. The scarcity is likely to last until colder weather, when the local butchers will begin to make lard. Compound lard is unchanged and in good demand. New crop cotton oil will be available soon, and this will steady the price of compound lard. Barrel pork is firm and has an upward tendency. Canned meats and dried beef are both firm and unchanged. There is a good demand for the season.

Produce.

White potatoes, Pennsylvania, 70 to 73 cents per bushel; York State, 63 to 68 cents; Jersey, 40 to 45 cents, good demand; sweet potatoes, primes, 50 to 55 cents per basket; seconds, 30 to 35 cents, good demand; turnips, yellow, 35 to 40 cents per basket; white, 30 to 35 cents, good demand; cabbage, 20 to 25 cents; Savoy, 75 cents per barrel, demand fair; string beans, 30 to 50 cents per basket, demand good; corn, 75 to 90 cents per basket, good demand; carrots, 40 to 50 cents per basket, demand good; peppers, 20 to 25 cents per basket, demand good; lima beans, improved, 90 cents to $1 per basket; flat, 50 to 60 cents; shelled, 18 cents per quart, demand good; yellow onions, 60 to 70 cents per bushel, fair demand; yellow pickling onions, 75 cents to $1 per basket; white, $1.25 to $1.50 per basket, demand fair; beets, $2 per 100, demand fair; horseradish, 10 cents per bunch, demand fair; salad, $2 per barrel, demand fair; celery, Pennsylvania, 10 cents per bunch, demand fair; pumpkins, $3 to $8 per 100, demand fair; tomatoes, 15 to 50 cents per basket, demand fair; York State celery, 35 cents per bunch, fair to good demand.

Green Fruit.

Bananas, firsts, $1.25 to $1.75 per bunch; 8-hands, 85 cents to $1; 7-hands, 60 to 85 cents; 6-hands, 40 to 60 cents, demand poor; pineapples, $3 to $5 per box, demand poor; lemons, $2.75 to $4.50 per box, demand fair; limes, 80 cents per 100, demand fair; Bartlett pears, $6 to $7 per barrel; Seckels, $6 to $7.75 per barrel, demand good; Jersey apples, 20 to 50 cents per basket; 20-ounce, $3.50 to $4 per barrel; Kings, $4 to $5; Baldwins, $3.50 to $4; Hulberson, $3.75 to $4; Greenings, $3.75 to $4, demand fair; quinces, $5 to $5.50 per barrel, demand good; California oranges, $6 to $7 per box, demand good; Florida grapefruit, $6 to $6.50 per box, demand fair; Jamaica oranges, $5 to $5.50 per box, demand fair.

Nuts.

Almonds, 21 to 22 cents per pound; Brazil, 11½ cents; filberts, 10½ cents; pecans, 16 cents; marbot walnuts, 12 cents; mixed nuts, 11½ cents, demand poor; green peanuts, jumbo, 8 cents; fancy, 7 cents; choice, 5¾ cents; roasted, jumbo, $1.65 per bushel; fancy, $1.50; choice, $1.25, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Coffee.

Santos coffee, of which there is no doubt a considerable shortage in the production this year as compared with the requirements for consumption, has been ruling very firm, and at no time during the present crop season were any large quantities on offer such as we have been used to see on the market in past years. The premium paid for Santos coffee over the price ruling for Rio exceeded in a great many cases 1 cent per pound, grade for grade, and this premium is likely to be increased still further.

The government holdings are apparently kept intact, and it is the general impression that none of that coffee will be sold unless a much higher price is reached. There is, however, enough coffee to go around for all purposes at the present time, but these conditions will only govern as long as the receipts are large. It must not be overlooked that the available visible supply will be cut into perceptibly towards the end of the fiscal year. If we are not entirely mistaken in our ideas with regard to the size of the crop, higher prices are bound to rule later on, unless the Sao Paulo Government is willing to meet some of the trade demand.

In making this assertion, we have in mind only actual Santos coffee. Options, which are based on the import cost of Rios and Bahias, and primarily on the prospects for the growing crop, may not respond to the same extent. Furthermore it is almost certain that speculators will not enter the market for a bull campaign with the present enormous visible supply, no matter how small they believe the current crop to be. Even the trade is not willing to stock up; it has shown remarkable powers of abstention for over a year past; but this makes the position so much stronger, as it insures an uninterrupted and steady demand distributed throughout the year.

Importers and jobbers who have sold against their stock (and there are many of them) will buy, and are buying back their options as they make sales of the actual coffee, thus lending some support to values on the Coffee Exchange.

With regard to the growing crop, reports have reached us that the flowering up to the end of September was very moderate. The trees, however, have a splendid appearance, being full of leaves, and we have received news recently that the flowering so far this month shows some improvement, which may extend, in fact, promises still better results during the rest of this month. The weather is fine, the trees are strong, and whatever flowering takes place will most likely turn into fruit. A larger crop than was produced this year may therefore be reasonably expected. How much larger depends entirely on the extent of the flowering during the next two weeks.

Pending the above-mentioned developments, it seems advisable to pursue a conservative course. Cables will no doubt reach here, off and on, reporting conditions as the respective senders may construc them. These cables are often sent for the purpose of influencing the market and should be accepted with due allowance.

With regard to mild coffee crops, we can only reiterate our previous estimate of 3,000,000 bags (exclusive of Bahia and Victoria). This estimate, although seemingly a low one, is based on the shortage of the crops in Central America, Venezuela and East Indies, as reported to us by reliable correspondents.

Washed milds of prime quality continue to be in good demand, with available supplies down to a minimum. Unwashed of medium and low grades remain neglected, although the supply of these is only moderate.

Spices.

The market continues active and the principal feature of the week has been a decline in peppers. We are advised, however, by cable that the decline in peppers has suddenly stopped. The decline in the past two years is about 5 cents. The crops last year were large. This year, however, they are below normal. The consumption has been very large.

Peppers.—We think that the market has reached bottom and the present should prove a most attractive time to make purchases.

Cayennes.—Mombassas are about closed out. Bright Japans continue scarce and in good demand.

Cloves.—Spot stock is scarce Large consignments are en route, prices for import being low. This is for new crop cloves. This stock, however, is not as satisfactory as good old dry cloves.

Pimento (Allspice).—The crop is exceedingly small, in fact, smaller than during the past twenty years. The market, therefore, is strong, with upward tendency.

Nutmegs.—Low prices continue to rule. The demand is very good.

Mace.—Prices firm, the demand good and prime stock continues scarce.

Gingers.—Prices remain steady, but unchanged. It is reported that Cochin stock will be very small.

Seeds are very active, especially Caraway and Celery. The import cost of Caraway to-day is about 8 cents. Celery is also much higher, and no decline is anticipated. Mustard seed is exceedingly scarce, especially good grades.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

Though less spectacular as to the size of the orders to buy tomatoes, the aggregate sales were but little under the total of the business done in that article in this market in the previous week or the week before that. Heavier frost on three nights, and the first appearance of ice in the mountains near us, hurt corn more than tomatoes, the latter escaping it almost unhurt. The crop is about cleaned up anyway, so that it won't make very much difference how soon a killing frost comes. The tomato statisticians are already at work and the first "guess" is that the output for the whole country will total 8,500,000 cases this year, as against a little over 9,000,000 in 1906. Regardless of figures in that direction, there is a strong market ahead for the canned article, and those who are still awaiting lower prices before buying their winter supply may have to pay a premium before long. There will be no famine in tomatoes before the next canning season rolls around, but the character of the present buying indicates a steady if not a rising market, especially in view of the high prices of all other vegetables.

From out of the depths, within the span of only one season, canned corn has again risen to a place of respect and esteem in the list, and to-day it is one of the strongest articles in the market and quite active at the top prices of the year so far. String beans are strong and active and there is a good demand for sweet potatoes, spinach, baked beans, peas, etc.

New pears are fairly active and apples are in excellent demand, the advanced prices not hindering the sale of them very much. It looks like there will be a very small supply of those two articles this winter, and the same remark applies to all canned fruits here without exception.

The fall canning season for cove oysters in Baltimore is at hand and shipments will commence shortly.

No. 2.

Though the tomato pack in some sections has been comparatively good and is still going on to some extent, offerings are light. None of the packers will probably have much of a surplus, and there seems to be a disposition to wait until the season is entirely over and all orders already booked are shipped before taking any further business. The heavy sales of futures has been keeping packers busy during the season and there has been so much additional business right along that there cannot be much of a surplus left over in this section. This, together with the shortage in the West, makes the market look healthy. Our business has been good. There has been a heavy demand for unlabeled tomatoes at 90 cents Baltimore, though it is a difficult matter to buy them.

Maine style corn is selling freely. There is very little of it lying around under 80 cents per dozen.

The market on country pack sweet potatoes closes very much stronger. We are paying 90 cents Peninsula, against 85 cents last week.

Packers are being pressed to take business for future spinach, but very few of them are quoting. There has already been considerable business booked at $1.10 for No. 3 and $3.50 for No. 10.

We are quoting No. 3 standard apples at $1 and No. 10 standard at $3.35 per dozen for prompt shipment. These prices are being firmly maintained. As the season advanced there has been a steady upward tendency and the predictions of a break have so far been pretty wide of the mark. The fact is that the market was so bare that the demand is naturally good, and orders which packers are taking are keeping them pretty well sold up most of the time.

Imported Fish Products.

Holland Herring.—Market is unchanged. Supplies are coming in freely, but demand has improved, so that prices are about same. They are likely to go higher when the cold weather sets in.

Norway Herring.—First shipments have come in and show beautiful quality. Prices are so extremely low now that they are likely to advance shortly.

Stockfish.—Shippers in Norway not having received orders as freely as they expected have now reduced the prices, but not sufficiently to induce buyers to come into the market freely. They will have to go down further before they will stimulate the demand.

Imported Oil Sardines.—Absolutely no change. There is no catch and no stocks, and an excellent demand which cannot be satisfied. The trade has turned to Norwegian smoked sardines as a substitute for the French and Portuguese. We are advised by cable from Norway that not more than half of contracts for brands of smoked sardines will be executed this season. It is only natural that prices for smoked sardines should go higher.

Norway mackerel are now coming in. Catch will be about 7,000 barrels less than last season. The prices for Norway mackerel are extremely high, but this is a natural consequence of the keen competition amongst the American buyers in the Norwegian market. The prices paid to the fishermen for the fresh mackerel have never been equalled. Norway mackerel are today a luxury and still they sell and sell freely at present asking prices, which are several dollars per barrel higher than when the market opened up when the first shipments arrived here. There is no chance of lower prices for Norway mackerel this season and there will be hardly enough to satisfy the demand.

MARKET NOTES.

The tomato season is gradually nearing its close. A few tomatoes are coming forward and jobbing from 15 to 30 cents, but the quality is mostly poor.

A few peaches are coming in from New York State, but they are mostly small and poor. The range in price is $2 to $2.50 per case, and the demand is light.

Black wine grapes average $2.50 per 100 pounds, and Niagaras about the same. Small baskets range from 12 to 14 cents, and large from 23 to 25 cents.

Sweet potatoes range from 50 to 55 cents per basket, which shows an advance of about 20 cents in a week. Shortage is the cause.

White potatoes promise to be high. The range is 80 to 85 cents and prospects point to $1. A normal price at this season would be 50 to 60 cents. A heavy proportion of the crop has rotted in all growing sections.

New Florida eggplants are in ranging from $1.50 to $1.75 per crate. Jerseys are about yet, ranging from 30 to 40 cents. The latter however, though cheaper, have very poor keeping qualities.

The first new crop Florida beans have come North, but scarcely brought expressage. Virginia beans average $1.25 per half barrel. Jersey beans are still hanging on at 40 to 50 cents.

What Soap Powder Are You Selling?

It is easy for anyone to tell you that their soap powder is the best, but it is not so easy to prove it. Few of them will invite comparisons and submit to tests such as Chas. W. Young & Co., of Philadelphia do, with their Pearl Borax Soap Powder. This powder is the purest and whitest on the market, and cleans without injury, either to the fabric or the hands. It is put up in full pound cartons and the cartons are redeemed by gifts.

"See here," howled the grocer, "does it take you four hours to carry a basket three squares and return?"

"W'y," said the new delivery boy, "you told me to see how long it would take me to go there and back and I done it."

THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

his Department is devoted to the criticism dvertising matter sent in, to the devising ew advertising ideas for special occasions, n request, and to the suggesting of original ertisements when data is supplied. All mmunications sent in for this Department uld be addressed to the Editor of Science Advertising. They will be filed in their er and taken up according to strict rotation.

I may have bored the readers of s department by the frequency th which I have reproduced the vertisements of Lehman & Co., e Trenton, N. J., grocers, of late, t they are so far above the average that I have deemed them particularly good as examples of what good grocery advertising ought to be. I want this week to reproduce just one more, and then I am through with Lehman & Co. for a while.

The advertisement which appears below I consider just about as good a retail grocery advertisement as I ever saw. If it is possible to guarantee an advertisement to get results I would consider it safe to guarantee this one, always provided it is placed in good mediums. In the original it measures 10 inches double column, and I reproduce it slightly smaller than the original:—

"You Get It Cheaper at Lehman's"

A Little Chat About Things That Break the Sameness of the Dinner Table. By Lehman.

Apple Butter

Find out what Apple Butter is. What it tastes like. What it looks like. It can be done for 12c and that gets you a pound. No more wholesome, no more palatable preserve is made. Smooth as a little ball of butter, that clean, melting, dreamy taste. It's hard to quit it. It's an effort to say "That's enough, thanks."

Peanut Butter

The world is just discovering the nourishment that is hidden away in the little, common, every day, often-despised peanut. Science is a wonderful revealer.

Now, we have the very essence of the peanut in the form of Peanut Butter. It, too, is sold at Lehman's by the pound for only 20c. Think of that. The poorest of us can afford the richest. The richest of all nut foods for about half the price of creamery butter. Makes a rare sandwich. 20 cents

Salt Mackerel

Did you ever see the day you could not enjoy a piece of new salt mackerel? Boiled a little and broiled a little, served with a boiled potato.

No other October breakfast dish can touch it.

Here you'll find the real Irish coast catch. Here, too, you'll see laid out the big Norwegians with their shiny blue-black backs and their thick, meaty sides—Oh, they're a picture even as they lie dripping here into the barrel. By the pound, 12 and 18 and 20.

The Grapes

More Grapes.

More Concords and Niagaras packed in handle baskets, at the foolish price of 14 cents.

Every one of you that reads this can afford a basket. 14 cents.

Why, you've paid 25, yes and 30c, many a time and thought nothing of it. Our ear is at the phone. How many?

Peach Perfection

Peaches were aggravating this past summer. They were like Dan Dawson's pumpkin, "Good and handsome lookin', but nothin' doin' inside."

Friends, we have a California canned peach on our shelves at 25 cents that for color, for size, for flavor and for general perfection beats all records and is a credit to the man who sells it and a joy to the home that buys it.

Yellow as gold. Without a blemish. Preserved to the most finished nicety in the finest of heavy syrup. It really isn't fair not to try even one can. 25.

LEHMAN'S DEPARTMENT FOOD STORES

In matter, this is an extremely ell written advertisement. Perps the writer of it let his imagiation gambol too freely when he eferred to apple butter as having a dreamy" taste, still I have never asted apple butter and cannot speak exactly. Practically throughout, however, the wording of this advertisement is seductive, persuasive and just as sure to get results as anything can be sure. The appearance, however, is spoiled in my judgment by those heavy pieces of rule that have been used beside and below the heads. There was absolutely no need of anything so black—a light rule about half that thickness would have made a much better appearance. The type in which the headlines appear is also a little heavy but not enough to do much harm. The trouble is with those rules—they are out of all proportion to the necessities of the case.

I am waiting for more matter.

Bad Eggs and the Food Law.

In the last issue of the "Egg Reporter" a correspondent writes the editor as follows: "Would you kindly send me particulars concerning the sale of rotten eggs as described by the National Pure Food Law? We want to publish this in the county papers, as most of the farmers around here do not know it is unlawful to sell rotten eggs and are acting accordingly. We candle our eggs and find lots of bad ones. It would be a fine thing if all the newspapers in the country would publish this law and stop the enormous loss of which some of the 'easy' dealers are now standing and letting sellers 'gouge' them. We think this particular egg law is one of the best in existence and should be enforced, which will be the means of saving the produce dealers thousands of dollars, as an egg will then have to be tested direct from the farmers and the proper parties will then have to stand the loss." The paper's reply was as follows: "There is a clause in the National Pure Food Law which reads that any food will be considered adulterated 'if it consists of the whole or any part of a deceased, filthy, decomposed or putrid animal or vegetable substance, or any portion of an animal unfit for food, whether manufactured or not.' This law is plainly applicable to eggs and is being so construed. But there are no facilities for enforcing it to any great extent, and, although the law is now in force, it is not being enforced vigorously, though it ought to be. The suggestion you make of having the county papers publish this information is certainly a good one. Write the Agricultural Department, Washington, D. C., for a complete copy of the law. In it you will find this clause with penalties."

Snider's catsup is thoroughly sterilized after being bottled. None of the good qualities can get out—no impurities can get in.

Make 'Em Show.

You know it's always been a favorite idea of mine that a man ought to be compelled to show some fitness for business before he's allowed to go into it.

Not so much for his own protection as for other people's.

It might be done by some sort of a licensing scheme, and it ought to be done.

As it is now, any lunkhead can go into any business he likes, except of course lawyer, doctor or druggist. He can go into business with no sort of fitness for it, without any brains, and he can simply turn things inside out in two weeks. Cost his competitors hundreds of dollars and simply run amuck generally.

And when he's done that, nobody can get back at him. Even the men that he owes money to can't get back at him, because the collection laws were made to protect him and not them.

Surely we have a right to be protected from a man like that. I hold we have a right to say to the Government, "either you make this man show that he's fit for business before you let him go in business, or if you let him go in without the slightest idea whether he's fit or not, then give us laws that will let us get back at him after he's hurt us."

I heard of a case the other day that I can cite right here. The fellow chiefly concerned in it used to be a clerk in a fancy grocery store on Walnut street, Philadelphia. I understand he was a pretty good clerk, too.

He got the idea he wanted to go into business for himself, and he borrowed the money from a brother and bought a store in West Philadelphia.

It was a good store when he bought it, but its own mother wouldn't have known it six months after. The fellow fell down completely, proved obnoxious to a big slice of the trade, and in a very few months he wasn't making expenses.

He blamed it on the location, though the location had supported the store for six years before he bungled it. He rented another store in another part of the city and moved his remnant of stock there. He did a little better there, but not enough to keep going. People who kept in touch with him told me he was the most lamentable failure as a manager of his own business that ever came down the pike. He soon petered out in the second place and went back to clerking. He owed a lot of money when he went out, and still owes it. I was told his brother lost all he lent him, too.

Clerking wasn't exciting enough for this man, after running two businesses of his own, so pretty soon he got itchy again for his own store. The failures he'd made didn't daunt him at all—he blamed 'em both on other things than his own fatheadedness.

Belonging to this man's church was a good old widow lady with a little money to invest. He got after her, swelled her all up with a story of how much she could make in the grocery business, and the poor innocent old soul finally agreed to back him. I believe she put up about $2,200 to buy another store—a first-class place out in Germantown.

He proved by the way he ran his third store that he hadn't learned a thing. Prosperous for twenty years, that store began to go down the day he took hold. Customers left, all the system the store had ever known disappeared out of the window, and the store was sold again last month. He had had it four months!

The widow lost over $800 by that deal.

Our friend himself has gone back to clerking, and let's all pray he'll stay there.

His brother whose money he lost can't get back at him.

The creditors that he left unpaid can't get back at him, because he has nothing but an unmitigated gall, and you can't levy on that.

The poor widow whose money he blew in can't get back at him.

But if they had all had the right to compel him to show his fitness for business before he went in, he wouldn't have gotten in, and they'd all have their money to-day.

By showing fitness for business I don't mean show information about goods. He had plenty of information about the goods. Anybody can have it who goes after it. I mean brains—common sens gumption!

As a matter of fact, many a r has gone into the grocery busir without the slightest informat about it and got along from start.

While others who knew all ab it went plumb to the bottom.

Horse sense is the thing. say it would be hard to find whether a man had that or no no, it wouldn't. I'll bet I could up some questions that would sm a lunkhead out in half an hour

Of course the minute you be to talk about putting hindrances the way of a man's going into bu ness you hear howls of interfer with "personal liberty." Well, interfere with the personal libe of a lunatic or a drunken man, do we? Why? Because they n hurt the rest of us.

And that's exactly why I w to interfere with the personal l erty of a lot of fellows who n be perfect gentlemen, but are sim exaggerated asses when they into business. They do a lot people harm. In fact there's limit to the harm they can do.

A. W. Johnson, a retail grocer, invented, patented, and is now manufacturing Johnson's "EVERSHARP" slicer, the only machine that ever did slice soft, moist, cured beef to perfection. In less than a year's time his retail sales of sandwich sliced beef increased to 300 pounds a week in warm weather and 250 pounds a week in the cooler season. While his full size slices, so smooth, broad, thin, moist and glossy cheerfully sell for 36 cents a pound, affording him a handsome profit of $38 to $45 a week on dried beef alone, with a pleasing increase of trade in other goods.

Edward M. Fithian discarded a much advertised rotary cutter and installed a Johnson's "EVERSHARP" more than a year ago. His being the only store in Bridgeton, N. J., able to slice dried beef to perfection, he acquires distinction, prestige, increased trade and profits.

Lehman & Co., Dover, N. J., equipped with a circular knife slicing machine, discontinued cutting dried beef because the time, trouble and waste meat counterbalanced the profit on their sales. They have just installed a Johnson's "EVERSHARP" and are advertising sandwich sliced beef in full size slices, broad, smooth, moist and delicious.

This as a leading article to draw trade and incidentally yield a profit of 60 per cent.

Send for a sample of sandwich sliced beef and cease to wonder.

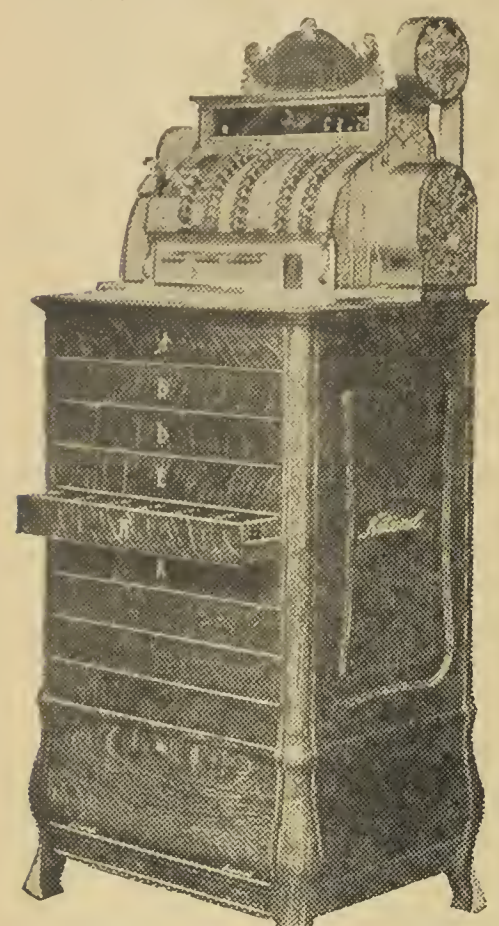
Adding machines, computing scales, adequate filing systems, typewriters, telephones and the rest are as necessary to the modern storekeeper or business man as the chair or counter.



For the man who sells groceries, perhaps the most modern and the greatest money saver has not been mentioned—the cash register. One of the most infallible proofs of the value of this system is the fact that it is practically impossible to find a grocery store of any size which is not provided with a cash register system.

A cash register system is more than a cash register. A cash register system, when used to its fullest extent, not only will guarantee that every customer will be satisfied, but it will bring new customers to a store. Every storekeeper is well aware that "good will" is a very tangible asset. It is also certain that a satisfied customer personifies this quality known as "good will." When the customers of a certain store are convinced that they not only will be treated courteously, but that every transaction which occurs in the store is absolutely mechanically correct, they will not only continue to trade at the store, but they will also recommend it to their friends.

The receipt issued by the National cash register and given to the purchaser indicates that the record has been made in the register exactly as it appears on the receipt, and that there will be no question regarding the payment or non-payment of the bill. In almost every grocery store it happens that a large per cent. of purchases are made by children. When a mother gives her little boy or girl a quarter with which to buy 12 cents' worth of goods, she knows when her child comes home with a receipt for 12 cents and the 13 cents change that both the storekeeper and the child are honest.

Perhaps the chief value in this particular instance is the fact that temptation has been removed entirely from this little child. For if the storekeeper had not given the child a receipt for the amount of the purchase, it would have been posible for this young child to buy 10 cents' worth of goods, spend the 2 cents for candy and begin a habit which might eventually land him behind the bars. Thus it is evident that mechanical accuracy is not only a business good, but a moral good as well.

Another important value of this receipt is its advertising value. By this you actually place an advertisement in the hands of every customer. It does not matter whether the person purchases 2 cents' worth or $200 worth of goods in your store, he takes home with him a neatly printed card upon which is the advertisement of your store.

One of the most important characteristics of this sort of a system is its assistance in making clerks more efficient. Every sale made by each individual clerk, that is to say the register shows at the end of the day the number of sales made by each clerk and the exact amount of money which each clerk handled for that day. If there is any mistake, however small this register places the responsibility and furnishes proof in the smallest possible space of time. The result of this is that each clerk knows exactly what every other clerk is doing, as well as the business he himself has done. He knows that if he makes a mistake, he must assume the blame. It is impossible to shirk the responsibility or blame it on some other clerk. By placing a premium upon the efficiency of his clerks, it is very easy for the storekeeper to stimulate them to better work. When a careless or lazy clerk discovers that everyone else in the store knows his carelessness and laziness, it is pretty safe to say that he will put forth greater efforts and that he will sell more goods.

One of the most trying departments of any store, unless the storekeeper has an entirely adequate system, is the credit business. Unless there is some mechanical device which will ensure a record of every charge sale, there is sure to be a dispute regarding bills; there are sure to be a lot of credit sales which the clerks fail to charge. Storekeepers who do a considerable business are well aware that many goods get out of the stores for which they receive nothin They also know that disputes over bil invariably result in loss of custome To eliminate this trouble and loss money, the mechanical accuracy of t National cash register system is perfect and entirely adequate.

The proprietor of every store has t right to know exactly how every det of his business is conducted, and mu keep in close touch with it or sm leaks will grow into large ones.

Bad system or the lack of system ha caused more failures than any o agency. It's the little leak, which b comes a great one, or multiplies into number of little leaks, which sap a bu ness of its profits.

The sales strip, upon which is aut matically printed a detailed stateme of every transaction of the day, giv the owner of a cash register system t information which he must have if would get the greatest possible bene out of his business. The sales strip m be detached each night and mailed to t storekeeper. When he is away on bu ness, he can keep in absolute touch wi every transaction that occurs in h store. The information on each sal strip indicates whether each transacti is for cash, money received on accou or charge sale, or money paid out, whether the cash drawer was opened change coin or bill and the initial of t clerk making the transaction.

The register gives the storekeepe along with this detailed statement, t total business of the day, total sales each clerk. With this information hand the storekeeper will spend a fe minutes balancing up his affairs for t day, when he would spend hours a fe years ago, before cash register syste were perfected to the extent they a now.

Every storekeeper places a mon value on his time. The time sav

Paid-out memorandum issued by Clerk K showing advertisement

They are printed by the register on white or tinted paper about as thick as a postal card. They are handed to the customer as a receipt or voucher for the sales.

Each receipt shows the date, the consecutive number, amount and kind of transaction, with the initial of the clerk who made it, together with any desired printed matter. This printed matter can be quickly changed.

The receipts can be used as a medium to draw cash trade by offering a discount, for which they give the cheapest, quickest and safest plan known. They can be used as a general advertisement of your store, or of special goods you want to push.

These receipts cost about 8 cents per 1,000.

Judge a Grocery Store by Its Butter

Ever think that people are more apt to judge a grocery store by its butter than by anything else? Possibly that's because badness in butter shows more quickly than badness in most other things. Whatever the reason, the shrewd grocer is just a little more careful to see that his butter is all right—and always all right—than he is about other things.

If he will adopt

Gurnse Butter

as his leader, he can relax his vigilance.

Gurnse Butter is doubly inspected and isn't sent out unless it is perfect—perfect in taste, smell, body, color and everything else—that's why it's always uniform.

Gurnse Butter is the finest creamery butter produced. It is all right and always all right.

As Staple As Sugar

GOOD soap powder is as staple as sugar. If you sell a good brand it is certain to sell in sufficient quantity to make itself profitable.

Soap powder would sell even better if some manufacturers hadn't used a lot of harsh alkalies that ate off the skin.

Snow Boy Washing Powder is little more than the purest soap, powdered for greater convenience, and rounded out with some other innocent and effective ingredients. It is a safe and splendid cleanser.

And the premiums your customers get with it are just as good.

The Inside of a Grocery Peddling Scheme

Interesting Data Concerning Chicago Concern's Prospective Effort to Sell Groceries Direct to Eastern Consumers Through Agents. The Drop Shipment Plan. "Can I Make Any Money Out of the Grocery Business?" How the Business Is Analyzed That the Last Drop of Profit May Be Squeezed Out. Sample Grocery Order from Agent.

The following want advertisement, which recently appeared in several Eastern daily papers, attracted the attention of a "Grocery World" representative:—

SELL GROCERIES TO CONsumers in towns and country; pays 35 per cent. profit; weekly advances; write for "drop shipment plan." Loverin & Browne Co., 1716 State street, Chicago.

Upon preliminary investigation, the concern whose name was signed to the above advertisement proved to have a mercantile rating of $75,000 to $100,000, which means that its fight for the Eastern peddler trade will not be hampered by lack of funds.

A "Grocery World" representative wrote for the details of the scheme and received a large batch of literature which makes very interesting reading. The concern operates entirely through agents or peddlers, and has two schemes. One it calls the drop shipment plan and its own description of it is as follows:—

OUR "DROP SHIPMENT" PLAN.

YOU SEND US THE ORDERS—"WE DO THE REST."

On this plan salesmen have nothing to do with collections or delivery of goods. They simply take the orders and mail them to us with their selling prices and shipping directions filled in. Each customer's order is packed separately and shipped C. O. D. and draft and bill of lading mailed to the bank or railroad agent for collection.

On this plan the customer cannot examine the goods before paying for them, because the railroad company will not allow the goods to be opened until the bill of lading is presented and, of course, the customer cannot get bill of lading until he pays the amount of the draft. We, therefore, send instructions to all collectors to hold the money five days, to give the customer a chance to take the goods home and examine them and if not satisfactory, all that is necessary is for them to notify the collector or ourselves and we adjust satisfactorily.

The invoice is mailed to the customer and a carbon copy to the salesman, showing his profits. We pay all collection charges on orders that amount to $5, wholesale, besides sugar, and add 10 cents to cover collection charges on orders below $5. Some salesmen feel that they can make more money by paying the freight, as they can sell more goods at better prices. We will prepay the freight, if mentioned on the order, and deduct from the salesmen's profit.

On orders shipped, we will advance commissions to pay salesmen's weekly expenses, in amounts not to exceed one-half of the profits, and make a statement monthly, or at any time desired, of all paid shipments and send check for all commission, less cash advanced.

We are the originators of this plan and our salesmen have sold goods in this way many years in the same locality. It suits the farmers, as they have their mail delivered every day, they receive their invoice and notice from the railroad company, and instead of having to go after their goods on a specified date, as on the delivery plan, they can go any day during the week that is convenient, and it does not interfere with their work. It pleases the salesman, as he does not have to spend his time delivering and collecting and can devote all of his time selling goods; furthermore, if he needs any expense money to carry him through, he has no trouble in obtaining an advance from us on his orders shipped. It suits us because we know just what we are delivering to each customer and can adjust anything not satisfactory. Not so on the delivery plan—customer and salesman both get tangled up and we cannot well adjust a transaction which we did not handle.

The other scheme is the ordinary one which has been so fiercely opposed in the West. The salesman gets the orders, bunches them in a carload order and when it arrives distributes their purchases to his various customers.

With both schemes it is the salesman who makes the selling price to the consumer. The concern says in one of its statements: "We do not pay any salaries or commissions, but we do what is better for good men; we make a net cost price on the goods and they make their own selling prices and profits, which gives them a chance to make from 10 to 15 per cent. better profit than they could make on a commission."

With this literature came a long statement headed "How Much Can I Make Out of the Grocery Business?" which reveals, better than any matter which the "Grocery World" has been able to present before, how these scheme peddling concerns and their agents analyze the grocery business and apply proper pressure so that the last drop of profit may be squeezed out. A number of self explanatory extracts are taken from the statement referred to:—

The following statistics have been taken from the records of our salesmen and a careful study of them in your own way will give you a better idea of what is practical than any comments we have made. No attempt has been made to select extraordinary or unusual examples, we have selected the average of these salesmen. To be sure, we have not selected poor salesmen, that would not be fair either to you or ourselves. It will be our endeavor to show you the average of a good salesman, that you may determine whether or not you wish to take up the work with us.

Our largest and best business is written in the rural districts among ranchmen and farmers. They buy in larger quantities and usually the best goods in the market; they will repeat their orders and be glad to see you again. These large ranches are usually long distances from railway stations, they cannot afford to send their supply teams in often, and they must make liberal purchases, in order to carry them through.

PAYS 35 PER CENT. PROFIT, OR 26 PER CENT. COMMISSION.

Our drop shipment plan is popular, as many of them come 150 miles, and it is not easy for them to calculate to be at a delivery on a certain day. There need be no doubt in your mind as to these men taking their orders and paying for them, as they make their preparations to pay for these supplies at such time. All they need is fair treatment on the part of the salesman. Loverin & Browne and the ranchman will do their part. They will give a large order, especially in the fall, when laying in their winter supply, depending upon the size of the ranchman and the amount of heavy staples ordered, seldom under $50, usually from $100 to $200, many in the $300 and $400 mark, and some above that. The largest order we remember shipping to any individual ranchman was $875. These large orders are only obtained by driving long distances, and a salesman many times will see but one customer in a day. While the expenses of the team may be heavy, living expenses are low, as you live with the ranchmen.

The total cost of the ten orders, $821.35, total selling, $1,107.71, net profits or commission, $285.36; 35 per cent. profit on the cost, or 26 per cent, commission on the selling, the average size of these orders being $110 with an average commission of $28.50 on each order.

EARNS $6,000 PER YEAR.

We also have before us one of his orders, No. 4761-6, costing $295.38, selling $390.78. This same salesman also makes delivery shipments for his trade in and around the town. In one year we paid this salesman $3,000 in commission to be collected by the house, and he advises us that he made over $3,000 off of his delivery shipments. Out of this must be taken his expenses to determine his net earnings for the year.

PAY 54 PER CENT. PROFIT, OR 34 PER CENT. COMMISSION.

In reference to the following orders, 5899, 5356 and 4851, will give you an idea of what one salesman is doing selling this trade. His orders usually range $25, $50, $75 to $100. We have selected three of his orders in those figures. You will notice that 5356 does not pay as large a percentage of profit as the other two. You will also notice that one-third of his order is made up of sugar, on which he made no profit. You will also notice that he makes leader of soda, starch, clothes pins, aker's cocoa, candy and sugar. very salesman in every business as his leaders, on which there is no rofit. Sugar is a great leader with ie local merchant, as you probably ave observed. These three orders how a net profit of 54 per cent. on ie cost, or a commission of 34 per ent. on the selling price.

FARMING AND TOWN TRADE.

The farming and town trade when worked together we believe to be the most substantial and profitable trade in this business, as it can be worked every day and for twelve months in the year, and there is a good trade to be found in every community. This trade usually combines the small and the large farmer in the rural district with the hotels, restaurants, boarding-houses and much large family trade in the town. The following is a series covering this trade:—

PAYS 77 PER CENT. PROFIT, OR 44 PER CENT. COMMISSION.

The following shipments, 1795 and 1799, were selected from twelve shipments made to one point in the same week, ranging in size from $11.65 to $30.65. total selling, $270.50, total cost, $153.04, leaving a net profit of $117.48; a profit of 77 per cent. on the cost, or 44 per cent. on the selling price. These orders average $23.54 each, and pay a profit of almost $10 each. A thorough study of the character of these orders, kind of goods sold, will show you that there is profit in the grocery business. You will notice that theses shipments contain neither leader nor unprofitable goods of any kind whatsoever, and that he obtains a very large percentage of profit on everything he sells. He has been selling goods for us for several years, and he holds his trade against all competition, selling it over and over each year.

EARNING $2,000 PER YEAR ON 15 PER CENT. PROFIT.

Lumber and mining districts are not always as profitable as the farming and cattle districts or good town trade; one of our salesmen shows what may be done in such territory, and on a low per cent. of profit.

Referring to his last statem nt, we find that in July he sold 89 orders for $1,376.09, which cost him $1,209.28, leaving him a profit of $166.81; a commission of a little under 14 per cent. on his business for July. His 89 orders varied in size, ranging from $5 to $75, averaging a little over $15 each, and an average profit of $1.85 per order. This is the lowest average that a salesman is required to take. This low percentage of profit is due to the fact that these customers do not care for quality, but quantity is what they want, and at a low price, besides, they use a very staple article, on which there is very little profit Yet this point is counteracted by the fact that they buy often and use large quantities.

We give you below two of his orders, ranging in the $15 average. You will notice in the order No. B4299, that he makes but 1 cent a pound on his coffee, while other salesmen have been making from 5 to 14 cents, and that his $1.98 profit is made up in very small proportions on the five articles he sold, and referring to his order B4524, while he made $1.78 on this order, he was required to sell fifteen different kinds of goods to obtain this profit, and that his profit was very small in many cases. We consider this a good example of earning commission under the most adverse conditions that one could hardly meet in this business, and it also shows what may be done under such conditions.

That a good profitable business can be conducted on an average of 15 per cent. profit and that such profit can be realized under the most adverse conditions, these sales were all made on our "drop shipment" plan, the salesman had no time, trouble or expense in making the delivery or collection, and his $166.81 was a clear profit for the month, and the month of July is one of the quiet months in this business.

HOTELS, RESTAURANTS AND BOARDING HOUSE TRADE.

A good business may be done with the hotels, restaurants and boarding houses, particularly in the smaller towns, large towns usually have wholesale houses from which they can buy, the same as the local dealers. One disadvantage is the fact that such trade places your customers so far apart, and it would not pay to travel by rail to reach them, but it is well to work such trade in the territory you are already working.

The following is an extract from the record of one of our salesmen who has been selling for us for some twelve years. He also carries another line, usually clothing or some line which he sells to the consumers' trade in the smaller towns. His recent statement shows a report of 33 orders sold for $550.43, house cost $409.77; net profit $140.66 or 34 per cent. The two following orders among the lot show their character and style. Many orders contained only two, three and four articles similar to 6105. The cups and saucers in this order were given as a premium, he makes no charge for these, but we charge him. Many salesmen give away premiums in this manner. Larger and more general orders run like 7153. A careful study of these two orders will give you an idea of what may be done among restaurants, hotels and boarding houses:—

rong Scheme of Life Responsible for High Food Prices iladelphia Writer Says Wages Have Not Kept Pace With Food Prices and Cannot Under Present Method of Wage Earning. Several Staples as Examples.

here is probably not a day in ich the retailer of food products s not have to listen to the bitter nplaints of some of his customers regard to the high prices of al- st every article he handles. ese complaints are rendered the re trying to his patience from the t that he knows his business is s profitable than it was when ver food values were in force.

The consumer feels keenly every vance owing to the fact that ges have not advanced in pro- rtion to the value of the food ich he is obliged to consume to nserve his earning power.

Marx, the great German econo- st, some years ago announced at he called "the iron law of ges," which, summarized in a w words, amounted to this: ages, by an inexorable law work- g through the capitalistic sys- n, tended always to the point of bsistence; that is, an amount suf- ient to enable the worker to pur- ase food and clothing and repro- ce his kind. In other words, if a series of years wages advanced, would the price of those things cessary to support life.

This law he claimed would work ith positively automatic precision long as society lived under the ofit system. With our customary merican energy or hysteria we em anxious to more than prove Marx's law of wages, for we are ow engaged (or at least an all owerful, though infinitesimal mi- ority of our citizens is) in pushing rices upward with an ever acceler- ting speed, while wages lag hope- ssly in the rear.

There is a portion of our people hich seems to think that even the aw of gravitation does not hold good for the United States and that e can with perfect impunity vio- ate every economic law and still scape the penalty.

The highly organized trades have been able to compel an advance in wages most nearly approximating he advance in commodities, but have not succeeded in equalizing their wages with the enhanced val- ues. They comprise but a small portion of the wage earners, the vast majority of whom is compelled to curtail its purchases in either quantity or quality at the prevailing prices.

Take a commodity which is looked upon as a cheap diet, such as beans for an example. Crop reports on this article showed 15 per cent. below normal, while the price is over 40 per cent. higher than last year. It is claimed that the high price of other foodstuffs has or will force the people to use a greater quantity of beans, and hence the advance. This is true also of some other commodities which are classed as cheap diet. With the exception of tea, coffee and sugar the entire list of food products has advanced out of proportion to the purchasing power of the consumer. While glib-tongued and ignorant political spellbinders announce from the stump that we are living in an era of prosperity the thoughtful citizen knows that yearly his burden becomes heavier whether he belongs to the wage-earning or the so-called middle class.

Has the jobber been benefited by the constantly enhancing values? Under date of October 11th the New York "Commercial Bulletin," in speaking of the general grocery line, said: "While it may appear to the outsider the jobber must be growing immensely wealthy out of the prevailing prices, many a jobber finds himself in anything but an enviable position as respects earnings."

The era of high prices for foodstuffs has been of no permanent benefit to either retailer or jobber, but rather a detriment. Why is this? An intelligent answer to this would seem to be that the intensity of competition has forced an ever-increasing concentration of capital so that an ever-decreasing number of people must reap the benefit of the profit system. Yellow journals may indulge in personal attacks on the Rockefellers, the Harrimans, the Rogers, the Havemeyers, etc., but to what useful end? They are not demigods, but merely creatures of the same race and blood as ourselves, and is not their success proof that our present economic system favored their development? Are they not the most fit to survive under the competitive system?

The "fittest" does not always mean the "best." Place a man and a tiger in a cage and the tiger is the most likely to survive, as he is the most fit for the environment. Can the conditions be changed so that the best will survive? Is it possible that a majority in place of a small minority shall reap the benefits of our enormous productive capacity? Unlike the sphinx of the ancients, who knowing the answer to the riddle of life refused to utter it, modern economic science will solve the riddle and a true economic democracy will insure to all our people at least equality of opportunity.

CHARLES W. ERVIN.

Phila., Pa., Oct. 17, 1907.

Manufacturers who have adopted premium schemes to create a demand for their products, have always given the premiums to consumers. Where manufacturers have offered an incentive to grocers to push their goods, the incentive has always been small. It had to be small, because no individual manufacturer could afford to give a grocer from his individual profits anything more important than a silk hat, an umbrella, etc. But when twenty or more prominent manufacturers, whose products are sold by grocers everywhere, set aside a part of their advertising appropriations to put into a fund to buy something substantial for the merchant, that something represents an article of sufficient value to make it worth the grocer's while to take a real interest in pushing the goods of the manufacturers who take this means of showing their appreciation of the grocer's services. That the importance of this matter may be plain to you, figure out the following: The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., New York, gives you a quantity of Universal coupons with their Hasty Lunch Chocolate, Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoa. No better goods ever came into this market. Add these coupons to the ones you get with the products of the following firms and you will find you can save enough coupons in three months to entitle you to a first-class set of harness, a platform scale or a roll-top desk. In six months you can save enough to get a good runabout, in a year a good piano:

The American Premium Co., Philadelphia; Wrigley Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia; Franklin Baker Co., Philadelphia; the Porcela Co., Philadelphia; McCanna & Fraser Co., Philadelphia; John Scott & Co., Philadelphia; Weber & Loesch, Philadelphia; Wm. Dreydoppel's Sons, Philadelphia; J. W. Beardsley's Sons, New York; Dixon Crucible Co., Jersey City; Sea Foam Baking Powder Co., New York; Flodon Manufacturing Co., Boston, Mass.; Potter & Wrightington, Boston, Mass.

Within a month a number of other big local houses will join this enterprise. Don't you think this matter is important enough for you to push the goods of these firms? Don't you think the manufacturers who have been been first to recognize the grocer's right of consideration should have the grocer's hearty co-operation?

How Shall Grocers Raise Their Prices?

National Secretary Green Says It Is Highly Necessary to Do It, Since the Grocer's Own Buying Prices Have Increased. Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 17, 1907.

The time has now come when a serious problem presents itself to the retailers of the United States, and that is the raising of prices on almost every staple article in the line. For years the consumer has been in the habit of paying 10 cents per package for cereals of almost every description. The price to the retailer has increased, with no increase to the consumer, and if there has been an increase in the price of any single article it has been met with criticism and unjust censure.

The cost of operating expenses, as well as the cost of the articles sold has increased very materially.

Help and rents have increased 25 per cent. or more.

Articles that were bought and sold for 10 cents a few years ago were put on the market at 75 cents to 80 cents per dozen. To-day those same articles are put into the hands of the retailer at from $1 to $1.10 per dozen, and horse feed, cost of wagon equipment, new outfits, and indeed every possible channel of operating expenses has increased so much that the condition now presents itself to the retailer in so forcible a manner that many are being financially crippled, and many more forced out of business.

There is but one way to remedy the situation, and that is a steady increase in the price to the consumer for goods all along the line.

It has been our purpose during the last few years to inform the retailer as to the cost of doing business and the absolute necessity of securing for himself a profit that will insure him a fair remuneration for the time and labor put forth in the efforts to satisfy the trade.

If there ever was a time that association was needed and an attendance at the meetings, that time is now. There is no dearth of questions to be considered, and it is only by a coming together and a unity of opinion, which unity of opinion can only be brought about by constant association, one with the other, that conditions can be improved.

Let the secretaries of the different associations make an extra effort to get together the retailers and take up these questions which are of such vital importance and provide for them information which should be brought very forcibly to their attention.

The summer is over. The time for taking up these questions is now, and the opportunity for increasing the membership and doing good for all concerned was never more apparent than at the present time.

Let there be a general renewal of interest all along the line.

The president of the National Association of Retail Grocers has addressed the following letter to President Roosevelt apropos of the parcels post agitation:—

His Excellency, Theodore Roosevelt, President.

Honorable Sir:—I have noticed by the daily papers, and it has also been called to my attention, an interview supposed to have been had between your honor and Postmaster-General Meyer in which it is stated that in your next annual report you will recommend a domestic parcels post.

The retail merchants of the country have studied this matter carefully for several years past and are fully convinced that the enactment by Congress of a parcels post law will have the effect of putting out of business a large number of the smaller merchants and enlarging the business of a few in the large trade centres. The retail merchants do not feel that the Government should be a party to creating such a condition as this, and we sincerely trust that we have been misinformed as to your intention to make such a recommendation.

We humbly beg your earnest consideration of the position of the retail merchants in this matter, and beg to remain,

Yours very truly,

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF RETAIL GROCERS.

C. J. KRAMER, President.

Using Sulphur in Corn Starch.

Dr. Edward Gudeman, consultin chemist and chemical engineer o Chicago, has made representation to the Federal Food Law Board o behalf of Douglass & Co., of Ceda Rapids, Iowa, and also in the in terests of the National Confection ers' Association, relative to the manufacture of corn starch and th chemicals employed therein. Dr. Gudeman contends that the decision the Board would affect the meths of manufacture used in pre-ring the product of some 70,000,- o or 80,000,000 bushels of corn.

ie special point made by Dr.
ideman is the present use of sulurous acid. This he claims is roduced simply for the treatment the grain, loosening the tissues d rendering possible the separan of the starch granulates from other portions. In no way is sulphurous acid employed for purpose of bleaching or preserv-the corn starch. It has been arged by some that the object of use of the acid was the prevenn of processes of fermentation
m setting in. This Dr. Gudeman iolly denies, and he argued that asmuch as the sulphurous acid not a bleach or preservative it did t fall within the scope of the pure od law and that no cognizance of employment should be taken by Board of Food and Drug Inection.

Dried Fruit Case Appealed and Ready for the Courts

Jobbers Hold Another Conference at Pittsburg. Trade Still Unnecessarily Uneasy Concerning Their Position. Under Commissioner's Agreement Dried Fruits Can Freely Be Sold Until Test Case's Decision. Experiment Showing Effect of Stewing to Reduce Percentage of Sulphur in Dried Fruits.

Little of note has transpired in the sulphured fruit situation during the past week. The test case brought against Charles Kephart, of Altoona, Pa., was appealed, and is now in shape to permit the case to be fought on its merits. Representatives of the various jobbing interests involved held another conference on the situation at Pittsburg on Tuesday, but nothing was done beyond discussing the plans for defending the test cases already brought. It is likely that the star expert witness for the defense, as to the effect of sulphured food upon the human system, will be Prof. Blouin, who is in charge of the Government Experiment Station in Louisiana. Prof. Blouin conducted the recent molasses test, in which sulphured molasses was fed to negro convicts. It will be remembered that the subjects all thrived and some gained 14 pounds. The object of this testimony will be to controvert the theory of the prosecution that sulphurous acid in any quantity is injurious.

In the meantime the grocery trade of the State is having great difficulty to place confidence in the statement that no more cases against dried fruits will be brought until the test cases are decided, which means in all probability a year at least. Food Commissioner Foust has declared in the presence of many witnesses that no attempt would be made to molest dealers until the final decision of the court in the test cases gave him authority to do so. That leaves the trade absolutely free to sell all the dried fruits they like until that time, and it is difficult to understand why they are still uncertain of their position. In order to quiet the retail trade, some of the jobbers have sent letters to their salesmen, to be communicated by the salesmen to their retail customers, guaranteeing all buyers against prosecution, and agreeing to take back unsold fruit, if any were on hand after an unfavorable decision from the court.

The Philadelphia Grocers' and Importers' Exchange will probably retain James Scarlet, Esq., the State's attorney in the Capitol investigation, to represent them in the test cases.

As convincing proof of the statement that much of the sulphurous acid contained in dried fruits is dissipated by the operations of soaking and stewing, one of the Pennsylvania State chemists has just made a series of analyses on samples from a carload of dried peaches. The sample was thoroughly washed in cold water, and another in warm. Both showed, upon subsequent analysis, the presence of 41-1,000 of 1 per cent. of sulphurous acid, there being no apparent difference between the effect of hot and cold water. Next the sample was stewed in the way dried fruit is invariably prepared for the table, and a third sample taken and analyzed. This showed only 13-1,000 of 1 per cent., or about one-third the percentage allowed by the Federal Government.

Where You Should Buy Coffee.

There are so many varieties and grades of coffee that the only safe way for you to buy is to deal with reliable coffee houses. One of the best and, at the same time, the oldest coffee house in America is Saml. Wilde's Sons Co., of 11 Dutch street, New York City. This firm is one of the pioneers, and for nearly a century has been under the one name and in the one family. It has passed from generation to generation, and the knowledge of the fathers has been given to the sons. The founder of the house believed that every buyer should receive the goods he bought without misrepresentation or substitution, and the same policy is followed to-day. There has in nearly a century of business never been any change in policy, but as improved systems were discovered they were instantly adopted, so that to-day the most advanced methods are employed. Being direct importers, they are able to furnish you with the same grade and variety at all times and at prices below that of their competitors for similar goods. They are always pleased to send samples or have one of their representatives call on you.

Here Is Something New

The Durham Display Cake Cabinet was invented and perfected by a grocer to do away with the sample fiend, who makes a lunch on cakes and crackers—at your expense. It not only does this, but here are some of the other things it does:

It displays cakes and crackers to the best advantage, acting as a standing advertisement by keeping them constantly before your customers.

It saves time and labor and prevents mistakes in filling orders, each tray being numbered.

It protects your cakes from dust and moisture.

It prevents the breakage of cakes, caused from removing and jostling your cans around—the saving from this alone will soon pay for a Cabinet.

The Durham Display Cabinet is made of highly polished oak, is light in weight and occupies but little floor space.

It is made in sizes to hold 12, 16, 20 and 24 cans of standard size. Special sizes to order.

The cans rest upon pivoted, elevated roller trays, being easy to slide in and out and cannot get out of order.

You need and can afford to have one.

Heart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED.]

PEANUT BUTTER.

The food reform people are giving peanut butter a boost by showing the large per cent. of nutriment it contains.

Just the time to talk peanut butter.

Then you have the argument of the price of regular butter, whereas the pure peanut article is only 20 cents a pound. You'll have a pail of it at your hand this week and some sandwiches made up. Dig in and sell some.

TUB BUTTER.

People can't afford print butter at the price we'll have to ask. Sell renovated at 32 cents and tub creamery at 37 cents. Don't lose any sales on account of price. This renovated is good, sweet butter and you'll find it will suit lots of people. Of course you'll use discretion about the class of customers you're dealing with.

Laurelvale print will be 40 cents till further notice. Fox River will be 45 cents.

PUT YOURSELF OUT.

The writer has often heard the women remark about the obliging clerks at such and such a place. Let us get this reputation. It's a magnet. Appear to "put yourself out" for people. It's the little courtesies in business life as well as social life that please. Requesting a woman with three or four bundles to allow you wrap them up for her. Permission to get an article we are out of or don't handle. Instructing the store operator to get her party on the phone. Handing her a chair. Things like these leave a splendid impression.

FLOUR.

We'll put flour up Wednesday morning from $6.75 to $7.20 a barrel. It's so advertised you'll observe. Mention this fact to every man and woman you do business with Monday and Tuesday. We'll see who will sell the most and we'll see a record-breaking flour sale too. Go at it in earnest. We want you to feel the truth of things. We want you to be downright interested to all business transactions of this nature.

ASSOCIATION NEWS

Little Rock, Ark.

The annual meeting of the Retail Grocers' Ice Co., operated by the Little Rock (Ark.) Retail Grocers' Association, was held last week. The report of the officers showed that the company is entirely out of debt and it was decided to commence work at once on the addition to the plant to increase its capacity 100 tons per day, making a total capacity for next season of 160 tons per day. The history of this company shows what can be done by co-operation and standing together.

AMONG THE TRADE.

Hanscom Brothers have established a new grocery store at 19 South Second street.

George D. Woodside, president of the Philadelphia Freezing Co., was, during the week, appointed receiver of the corporation in an amicable suit in which it was declared that the company was insolvent. Mr. Woodside, with Benjamin A. Hazell, also a stockholder and director of the company, instituted the proceedings individually and as executors of the estate of John W. Woodside, who was indorser on promissory notes issued by the concern for $93,221.02. The company is a Pennsylvania corporation, capitalized at $700,000 and with a $550,000 stock issue.

Come and Visit Us.

Louis Burk, of Girard avenue and Third street, Philadelphia, announce in this issue the formal opening of Burk's Abattoirs and Sausage Kitchens, and cordially invite the readers of this paper to visit and inspect the finest, cleanest and most sanitary establishment of its kind in the world on Wednesday and Thursday, October 23 and 24, 1907, from one to five o'clock P.

The writer, the advertising manag of the "Grocery World," has never se its equal and there is no equal at t present time of this magnificent und taking, which reflects great credit, n alone to Mr. Burk, but to the city Philadelphia as well. To those of y who are interested in seeing things their best, it will pay you to take a vantage of this opportunity and exam this plant. You will all agree that no ing has been left undone to make the modern plant it is, and in ma ways money has been lavishly spent insure the perfecting of Mr. Bur ideas. It can be truthfully said that is the home of the purest and best meat and pork products.

Mrs. Knowsitt—"This is the se ond time you sent me this bill, a I paid it once."

The Grocer—"That's the boo keeper's fault, ma'am. He kee his books by the double entry sy tem."

Inclosed find check for $3, which please send me the "Groce World" for one year. I inte opening my new store about t 15th of this month and I feel though I can't do business witho the "Grocery World."—W. Bauer, Lyons, N. Y.

Thomas Martindale & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

WE HAVE THE BEST OF REASONS FOR TALKING ABOUT IT

We make a point of exploiting the fact that you will find "The Bottom as Good as the Top" in Apelpi Evaporated Apples, simply because usually the top is very much better than the bottom. We pride ourselves on this particular brand, have built up a big demand for it on its quality alone—you can do the same thing.

Ritter's Guaranty

In compliance with the rules and regulations for the enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act published by the Commission appointed for this purpose, we have filed a guaranty covering all our products with the Agricultural Department in Washington under the serial number 1017.

In the future all our products will be labeled in accordance with Regulation Nine as follows: Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906, No. 1017.

This guaranty is sufficient and covers every sale we make and no individual guaranties are necessary.

It has always been our aim to manufacture pure and wholesome food, to comply with existing laws and to protect all who buy our products, and we shall carry out this principle in the future.

We hope to deserve your continued confidence and patronage.

The Money You Save Is What Counts

If you spend a large part of your PROFITS in doing needless work, your BANK ACCOUNT will be correspondingly smaller.

THE McCASKEY ACCOUNT REGISTER SYSTEM takes care of all your accounts giving you COMPLETE DETAILS of every transaction, and every transaction is completed at the time it is made.

Cash sales, credit sales, cash on account, C. O. D. or exchange sales, money received on account or money paid out—all done WITH ONLY ONE WRITING. Credit sales handled as fast as cash sales. No forgetting to charge goods. No disputes with customers. No night work. It is a collector and a trade getter.

HERE IS YOUR QUESTION ANSWERED

Why put in Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa when you are selling five brands now? Well, because it is different from the rest, for one reason. It is the only cocoa packed in glass. It stands alone, and you know how novelty helps a thing to sell. The grocer who infuses a little novelty into his business is the grocer who succeeds.

Another thing, Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa is better than the rest. That isn't a bluff, honestly. We take out of our cocoa, in the making, a substance which other manufacturers allow in, greatly to the injury of the flavor of their goods.

Now do you know why you should sell it?

Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

Judge Us Sharply

You must sell some cereals, Mr. Grocer—you are selling some—how shall you decide whether you have the best?

First consider quality, and as you go along apply your test to RALSTON HEALTH FOOD and PURINA WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR. Are they good? We guarantee them of the highest producible grade, pure, wholesome, splendid foods! Nobody can give any higher guarantee of quality than we give.

Second consider ease of selling—and here RALSTON HEALTH FOOD and PURINA WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR are especially strong, for we have simply advertised them into a solid popularity. Both are half sold when you put them in, because so many of your people have read our advertisements and know about them.

What other cereal products can meet these tests so well?

Ralston Purina Mills

HOW TO SEASON POULTRY

Cool weather brings the demand for poultry, and the demand for poultry brings the necessity of seasoning it with something. Will it be with home-made seasoning—a few herbs and spices thrown in and mixed at random, never twice alike, or will you sell our Spiced Poultry Seasoning?

Spiced Poultry Seasoning is composed of garden herbs and spices, blended always the same, in precisely the proportions needed to produce the acme of savoriness. It is safe to say that home-made seasoning can never be half as good as Spiced Poultry Seasoning. Just tell your customers this.

LOOK AT THE CUT STORES AT NIGHT

Grocery customers are like flowers—they turn toward the light. As between two grocery stores—one brilliantly lighted, the other only indifferently—eight out of ten people will seek the light store. There is nothing gloomier than a half-lighted grocery store after dark. People enter it only when they must.

Put nothing ahead of light in your store because nothing is more important as an after-dark business getter. Look at the cut stores—not one of them but glows like day the minute it gets dark.

Do the cut stores spend all that money for electric light for the fun of it? Scarcely, they know its power.

No light is so brilliant or inexpensive as electric light. Write us.

Don't Plunge

Don't get into the cash register business by buying a $250 machine. You may not like it at all. You may even prefer the old-fashioned money drawer.

Buy a Standard Cash Register, which costs but a small sum, first. See what you think of that. If you decide that you like the cash register idea and are dissatisfied with the Standard, buy a more expensive one.

But you never will be dissatisfied, for the Standard does everything you want a cash register to do. Keeps your cash and credits straight, keeps tabs on your clerks—simply does almost as much actual work as a bookkeeper. Write.

Make Your Jobber Tell You

If you, Mr. Retailer, have signed any future canned goods contracts, ask your jobber what per cent, of your order he will absolutely guarantee to give you.

In most cases he will make no guarantee whatever. He can't, since the packer has made none to him.

In no case except one will he make a guarantee to deliver you all you ordered, or 100 per cent. That one case is where he buys Blue Bell or Clover Farm canned goods, for we, who sell those brands, always give a jobber 100 per cent. contracts on them, and the jobber can therefore give it to you.

The moral is to buy the brands you can get what you buy on.

Anker's
Bouillon Capsules

SEE THEM MELT!

Put a package of these on your counter, with a little card telling what they're are good for, and they'll melt away like snow. ANKER'S BOUILLON CAPSULES make bouillon, soup or beef tea, and everybody likes one of the three, especially when they're so delicious as they are. Ten capsules in a box—drop one in hot water. Good goods and a good profit.

For Pickles Alone

Here is the T. & S. Pickle Cabinet, made revolving or non-revolving, as you like. Has no banana tree and is for pickles exclusively.

A handsome fixture. Solid oak or cherry, ball-bearing casters, with four three-gallon clean glass jars with covers. Dirt and insect proof and occupies only two square feet of floor space. Keeps pickles clean, fresh and inviting. A silent but effective salesman.

Do you know how cheap Electricity is? Ever think of using it to Grind Coffee? Ask the Manager of the nearest Power House. He will post you on the convenience and economy of Electricity in your business. An will save your clerks' time, your customers' time, and advertise your store. Write for catalogue describing our various Electric Mills, with capacities for granulating from four ounces to nine pounds of coffee per minute.

The illustration shows our double mill No. 08712, with motor for direct current; one mill fitted with grinders for granulating, and the other for pulverizing. Each iron hopper holds six pounds of coffee. There are two speeds, fast and slow, which can be instantly changed from one to the other; at fast speed this mill granulates three pounds of coffee per minute. Fitted with ¾ H. P. motor for direct current, or with ½ H. P. motor for alternating current. The latter for slow speed only. Can be regulated while running for grinding either fine or coarse.

We will gladly give any information desired about these mills.

Your Profit on ARIOSA

The idea some grocers have that they can't make a good profit on Ariosa Coffee is incorrect.

Ariosa Coffee is the largest package Coffee seller in the world. As with all widely-sold things it is sold closer than things that sell in one quarter the quantity.

Which is better—to sell twenty-five pounds of your own package Coffee a week and make 10 cents a pound profit, or sell 100 pounds of Ariosa and make 5 cents a pound profit?

Not to speak of the Ariosa vouchers that are practically like finding several hundred dollars a year.

Don't forget that we have already created the demand for Ariosa Coffee; there is nothing left for you to do but satisfy it.

If you could see some brands of rennet made, you'd never offer them to your customers in a thousand years!

Filthy, unclean and nasty! We wouldn't sell such rennet if we had to work in the streets!

James T. Shinn's Liquid Rennet is guaranteed to be perfectly and absolutely clean. It's the best in other ways, too—strongest, purest and most profitable.

It makes you 100 per cent.

SHINN & KIRK, 1400 SPRUCE ST., PHILA., PA.

L & S Pickles

L. & S. Pickles are only one of many brands of sweet pickles on the market—why should you push them instead of the others?

A natural question, and here's the answer: L. & S. Pickles are preserved with granulated sugar. Many, many brands—it wouldn't be fair to specify—are sweetened with saccharine, a harmful chemical substance made from coal tar! Besides the harmfulness, saccharine only sweetens on the outside anyway; sugar goes clear to the heart of the pickle and preserves it through and through.

That's why you should choose L. & S. Pickles.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES

—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

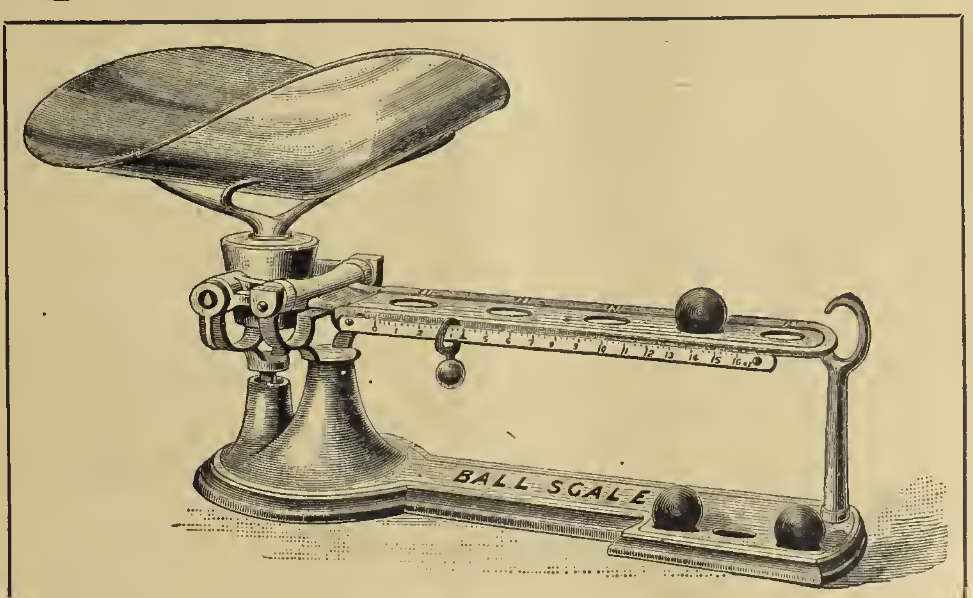
Losing Your Weights?

Get a Troemner No. 24 Ball Scale



Greatest Improvement in Rapid Weighing

Does away with weights absolutely. The balls are placed in the holes, thus weighing from one to fifteen pounds, with the sixteen ounces in fractions on the side beam, giving a total weighing capacity of sixteen pounds.

GOOD TIME TO PUSH A GOOD THING

"It's All in the Shreds"

The prices of foods of all kinds are soaring skyward. Your customers naturally "squeal."

If you carry

you can always please a dissatisfied customer. Shredded Wheat contains more muscle-building, strength-giving material than meat, eggs or vegetables, and is always the same price, always pure, always clean, always wholesome. It's a good time to push it.

THE NATURAL FOOD COMPANY, NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.

If 1000 Retailers in Philadelphia Recommended Us, Would YOU Believe in Us?

One of the hardest propositions which confront the retailer is to turn their bad debts into cash. Lots of them have tried different collection agencies, paid retaining or subscription fees and got no results; so it is hard to convince them that any one can help to bring the beats to book.

We show you how to collect your own accounts; nobody handles your money but you. We can give you the names of a thousand merchants in Philadelphia whom we have shown how to get money due them which had been charged off long before they heard of us.

It costs you nothing to find out what our plan is—can you afford not to?

Match Trust Backs Down From North Carolina Contracts

Recent Arrest of Its Salesman on Ground That Its Wholesale Grocery Contracts Violated Trust Laws, Has Caused It to Cancel All North Carolina Contracts. Offers New One Which It Claims Is Legal.

In a recent issue the "Grocery World" reported the fact that a salesman of the Diamond Match Co. had been arrested in North Carolina, on the ground that the contract through which the Trust tied up wholesale grocers was in violation of the North Carolina anti-Trust laws. In order to set itself straight with the trade, the Match Trust has now cancelled all of its contracts with North Carolina jobbers, and has substituted another, which its attorneys say does not violate the law.

The cancellation of the North Carolina contracts was announced through the following notice, sent to all North Carolina grocery concerns with which the Trust had relations:

Gentlemen:—Referring to your agency contract with us, our attention has recently been called to Chapter 218 of the 1907 laws of North Carolina, which may possibly be construed by some to invalidate such contract. While we do not admit or believe that such is the case, yet we are unwilling that you or this company should be placed in seeming opposition to the policy of the State of North Carolina, as indicated by such act; we have, therefore, concluded to cancel all contracts of the nature of that held by you, and until the statute in question has been construed by the Courts.

Your above-mentioned contract with us is thereby hereby revoked and canceled.

We are inclosing you herewith a form of contract which our attorneys and leading counsel in your State advise us is entirely unobjectionable from any possible standpoint under your laws.

Will you kindly sign and return to us at your earliest convenience and oblige,

Yours truly,
THE DIAMOND MATCH CO.

The new contract, through which the Trust hopes to evade the trust law, is as follows:—

Dear Sirs:—As requested, and until further notice, we will ship your our matches to be cared for and sold by you upon commission, subject to the following conditions, to wit:—

First.—All matches consigned to you must be sold by you at the price designated in the price-list as issued from time to time by this company, and if not sold must be returned to us.

Second.—You are to indemnify us against any loss incurred between the time of receipt of the matches by you and the sale of same, it being expressly understood and agreed that your responsibility commences when we have made delivery to you in good order.

Third.—You are to assume the risk of and guarantee the payment of all the sales made by you.

Fourth.—As full compensation for the services rendered by you as above provided, we will pay you a commission of 10 per cent. on the 15th day of January, April, July and October, on all matches sold by you during the preceding three months ending December 31st, March 31st, June 30th and September 30th; and a further commission or interest allowance of 2 per cent. from price-list for cash advanced against the value of any shipment at any time within ten days from the date of same, which commission shall include and shall be in full for any expense incurred by you as commission merchant in and about the matters herein provided for.

THE DIAMOND MATCH CO.

Food Commissioner's Campaign of Education.

In Pursuance of It He Addresses the United Business Men's Association Upon the Enforcement of the Food Laws. Summary of the Address.

The Dairy and Food Commissioner of Pennsylvania, James Foust, in pursuance of his campaign of educating the general public in the details of food laws, delivered an address before the regular meeting of the United Business Men's Association of Philadelphia last Friday evening. The organization referred to is one of the most important in Philadelphia, representing over 40 of the largest subsidiary organizations of the city.

Commissioner Foust was the main speaker of the evening and the salient portion of his remarks follow:—

I was appointed an agent of the Dairy and Food Division in April, 1900. My work was to purchase samples, seal and label them so that they could be identified, and deliver them to the chemists for analyses. My territory covered all of Western Pennsylvania. I also had charge of the work done by other agents in preparing cases, employing attorneys and expert witnesses when necessary. Western Pennsylvania had more prosecutions than any other part of the State. One-half of all the revenue sent to the Department came from Allegheny County. About one year ago 114 candy cases were instituted in one week in Pittsburg and were all terminated in a short time. The candy supply of the State has been revolutionized.

The new Pennsylvania Food Law, approved June 1, 1907, is modeled very much after the National Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906. It provides that the Dairy and Food Commissioner shall make uniform rules and regulations for its enforcement. These rules are for the information of the trade, and I am very happy to say the trade is doing everything possible to compel the manufacturers to comply with the requirements of the Commissioner. The new law has not been tested to any great extent. While several cases have been brought under it, they were of a local character and in all but two or three the fines were paid without any contest. There are, however, a few pending that may be contested.

Since my appointment, on April 15, 1907, between 8,000 and 9,000 samples of milk, cream, ice cream, various kinds of meat, catsup, jelly, jam, olive oil, pickles, oleomargarine renovated butter, vinegar and other food samples have been purchased and many prosecutions have been instituted.

From April 15 to October 12, 1907, there have been terminated 112 pure food cases, 100 oleomargarine, 22 milk, 3 renovated butter and 3 vinegar, making a total of 240 cases terminated.

The total amount of fines received from April 15 to October 12, 1907, inclusive, was $10,804. The total amount received from oleomargarine and renovated butter licenses during the same period was $2,211.02, making a grand total of $13,015.02 turned into the State Treasury for the use of the Commonwealth from April 15 to October 12, 1907, inclusive.

The Dairy and Food Division of Pennsylvania has in its employ one commissioner, one assistant commissioner, five clerks and one messenger in the office; fourteen special agents, whose duties are to purchase samples and deliver them to the various chemists for analyses. The agents have all been with the Division from four to eight years, with the exception of three. Four attorneys are also employed.

The six chemists employed are as follows:—

Prof. Charles H. LeWall, Philadelphia, who is known to many of you, and stands high in his profession.

Prof. C. B. Cochran, West Chester, Pa., who is connected with the Normal School and has had many years' experience in analyzing food products.

Dr. William Frear, Professor of Chemistry of State College, and also President of the Food Standards Commission, acting under the authority of the Government of the United States. He is also the chemist who now has in his hands samples of practically all the different brands of cereals sold and consumed in Pennsylvania. His report will be an interesting one, not only to the people of our State, but throughout the entire country, as I have received numerous letters from many sections desiring to know the result of this investigation.

Dr. F. T. Aschman, Pittsburg, Pa., Professor of Chemistry of the Western University.

Dr. H. C. Steifel, Pittsburg, Pa., who has had years of experience in analyzing food products in the United States and Germany.

Prof. James A. Evans, Erie, Pa., was employed for many years by the Dairy and Food Department of the State of Ohio; so you can see the State has a corps of experienced scientific men who do the analytical work.

The oleomargarine work in Allegheny County is important. This county is a bee-hive of iron works and there is a great demand for cheap butter. We have many oleomargarine cases in that section. We are compelled to use different methods to secure the samples. In the mill districts sometimes we have an agent dress up in mill clothes, hobnail shoes, with face blackened and a towel around his neck, dinner pail in his hand and a corncob pipe in his mouth from four until six o'clock in the afternoon when the mill men are going home from work. The agent then enters the different stores and in this way we get oleomargarine for butter, which results, of course, in prosecutions. When the hearings take place, then all the facts come out as to how and in what way the samples were obtained. Sometimes we have a lady with a basket containing some groceries enter the stores in the mill and other districts; the agent in charge waits a short distance away, sees the lady go in and come out and she delivers the sample to him; he prepares the label, has the lady sign it and then he takes absolute charge of the sample and delivers it to the chemist. So, you see, we have to use many methods in performing the work of our Division and in protecting the consuming public and honest dealer from fraud and deception.

In conclusion I desire to say that the new Pennsylvania Pure Food Law is, as yet, untried. It is my duty to uphold it in every possible way. The courts are to interpret it, not the Commissioner. The purpose of food legislation is, first, and above all, to protect the health of the public against impure and injurious foods. If the new law will do this, then that is all that can be asked.

Following the Commissioner's address various members of the Association asked a number of questions bearing on the food law work. William Smedley, secretary of the Philadelphia Retail Grocers' Association, who is also secretary of the United Business Men's Association, made a brief address, emphasizing the need of co-operation between the consumer and the dealer and manufacturer, if the food supply is to be kept pure. Elton J. Buckley also made a brief address, expressing gratification that the apparent intention of the present Pennsylvania food administration was to avoid sensationalism in reporting the food work, and to keep the public well informed along food lines.

S. B. Goff & Sons Co., of Camden, N. J., are offering a 25-cent bottle of their cough syrup free to any dealer sending for it. They have a special offer that will interest you; better write to-day. You get in good company when you stock Goff's remedies, as more than 14,000 grocers are handling them.

hicago Mail Order Houses Strike Back cure Indictments Against Nineteen of the Concerns Who Worked the Little Black Book Scheme of Sending Fake Requests for Expensive Catalogue. United States Government Appears as Prosecutor.

n a recent issue the "Grocery orld" discussed at some length latest method of fighting the il-order houses of Chicago, nota- Montgomery Ward & Co. The n was known as the "little black ok plan," and was worked by a ge number of lumbermen and nbermen's associations of the est, in collaboration with several ail merchants' associations. In ef the scheme comprehended an ort to cripple the mail-order uses by sending in hundreds of ce requests for their catalogues ich cost $1 each to print. Also involve them in making many nplicated estimates for mill work ich never came to anything. The ter is where the lumbermen came

It is understood that the plan suc- eded admirably and was the direct cans of having sent out and rned thousands of costly cata- gues. Up to last week the mail- der concerns affected did nothing yond issuing some warm protests ainst the imposition.

Now, however, they have struck ck. In Minneapolis, Minn., last eek nineteen retail dealers in lum- r were arrested by the United ates District Attorney, and in- cted by the Grand Jury, charged ith conspiracy and intent to de- aud through the use of the mails. everal officers of lumbermen's as- ociations are included. The pen- ty is a fine not exceeding $10,000 imprisonment for not more than vo years. Up to the present time one of the retail merchants' asso- ations who aided and abetted the heme have been attacked.

The scheme to defraud, as harged in the indictment, is that he mail-order houses "were then nd there engaged in the business of uying and selling lumber, millwork nd builders' supplies, by means of hat is commonly known as a cata- gue mail-order system, and that he classes of lumber, millwork, etc., ere set forth in certain catalogues, rice-lists, etc., issued by these com- anies."

The catalogues were valued at ap- roximately $1 apiece and the in- ictment charges that the persons named as conspirators "well knowing the plan and system by which these corporations were selling and conducting their business, combined to fraudulently solicit and obtain from the said corporations, through and by means of the post-offices established in the United States, catalogues, samples of merchandise and their descriptions and in like manner put in requests for estimates and prices in fictitious and spurious bills of lumber and building material." Both Montgomery Ward & Co. and Sears, Roebuck & Co. appear as plaintiffs.

The facts concerning the "little black book," which was the cause of the investigation by the Federal authorities, are well known. The idea is said to have originated with the lumbermen, but has been carried on very extensively by retail merchants in all lines of trade throughout the Northwest, and has undoubtedly proved a serious menace to the business of the catalogue houses.

Oil Trust Afraid of Indianapolis Short Weight Ordinance.

The temporary restraining order issued against the city of Indianapolis, Ind., on the petition of the Standard Oil Co. to prevent arrests of its employes and for giving short-measure gallons of oil and gasoline has been dissolved and a permanent injunction denied. The court held that the ordinance of the city fixing penalties for short weights and measures can be enforced and that the Standard Oil Co. was not entitled to the relief for which it prayed, as it would be a practical exemption of the company from the terms of the ordinance. The court further held that the question as to whether the cans in which the company delivered oil contained a gallon is matter for proof, and that the case must originate in a prosecution in its proper court. Within a few days it is expected that the manager of the canning department will be arrested on a charge of violating the ordinance, and his case will be a test case. If it is decided in police court that he is guilty of a misdemeanor, other arrests and prosecutions will follow.

Spice Men Want New Standards.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Durkee, Weiker, Greidanus and Wesley, representing the spice manufacturing interests of the country, went to Washington last week and appeared before the Board of Food and Drug Inspection in a hearing at the Department of Agriculture. The ground covered related to the establishment of new spice standards in place of some of those which are now in effect. The standards desired to be changed are those relating chiefly to peppers, both cayenne and black, and in a subordinate way to other classes of spices. Much attention was paid to the question of nutmegs and mace and the committee submitted a brief in which argument was presented in detail. No definite standards were suggested and the board requested that a specific representation be made to it as soon as the manufacturing interests should find it possible to do so. This Mr. Durkee and his committee undertook to do.

Spent $75,000 Booming An Olive Oil Brand

One Example of the Strenuous Task Which Confronts One Trying to Introduce a New Brand of a Staple Product. How One Man Tried to Put a New California Olive Oil on Its Feet.

The introducing of a new brand of food products, in this day when the markets are crowded and overcrowded with ten times as many brands as there are any real need for, is a strenuous process. Unless the promoters have unlimited funds they are apt to grow weary in well doing long before the enterprise begins to show returns.

The "Grocery World" has had related to it the story of a California olive man who not so long ago attempted to put a new brand of California olive oil on the market; not on any local market, but on the markets of the entire country. This little story gives a vivid glimpse of the task before any man who sets out to induce the general public, or a goodly share thereof, to use a new brand of a staple product. From the story, as it comes to the "Grocery World," the following extracts are taken:—

Twenty-five salesmen were sent out over the country to sell this first season's output. They were the best salesmen that could be hired, and—not one man of the twenty-five sold enough olive oil to pay his traveling expenses. Not satisfied with their efforts, the manager of the company went to Chicago and New York, and these are his words:—

"I begged men, I tell you I begged them to take our oil delivered in New York at a dollar a gallon, when older oil was bringing from one and a half to two, and they would not take it.

"I went to the buyer of the best-known hotel in New York, became well acquainted with him, and asked him if he would let us send him some of our oil. He sampled it, found no fault with it, and said: 'If I put your oil into this hotel, what is there in it for me?' To which I replied, 'There's nothing in it for you.' He did not buy.

"I went to the manufacturers of the best-known brand of salad dressing and offered them our oil and was told they would not accept it as a gift. I afterwar learned that they were using fift per cent. of cotton-seed oil in thei salad dressing and they had to kee up a big bluff.

"I went to the best-known manu facturer of pickles and asked him i he was in the market for olive oi He told me he was always in th market for anything he used. I reply to my question as to whethe he knew anything about our oil h said: 'I don't know anything abou it and don't want to know any thing about it. We use two o three thousand gallons a year, bu we don't want any California oil He did consent finally to take small quantity at $1.25 a gallo delivered at the factory, and a yea and a half afterward, when i didn't mean anything to us, h wrote for more.

"I had started out to deal wit jobbers, and on the way home visited the leading jobbers in variou large cities, and afterward wrote t those I had not seen. If I ha this reply from one, I had it fro a thousand:—

"'What do you suppose we wan to handle your product for? Yo have no market. When you get market, come around!'

"We advertised in the leadin magazines and in many newspaper We bottled gallons of oil in smal bottles and distributed samples fre to everybody that wanted them an to many that didn't. We offered t prepay express on orders receive from any part of the United State By and by orders came for a bottl or two, or a gallon, sometime accompanied by a money orde sometimes on the conditions offered that the money need not be pai until the oil was sampled and foun satisfactory. These orders wer filled with the nicest care, and th

Soap that to women endears itself without prizes, premiums, stamps, cards and endless other botherations to the grocer, deserves to be pushed and well pushed by the dealers.

uyer was asked to write his opin-on. If it was evidently a house-eeper, she was asked in case she ked the oil to tell her neighbors bout it. Always we believed ab-olutely that the person who once sed our oil would never use any ther.

"When we had secured two or iree orders from one town we ould take one of the big business irectories and pick out two or iree grocers in that town and write iem that these people were sending the factory for the oil—would not be to their interest to put it stock and supply these and other ossible customers? About seventy-ve per cent. of such letters re-ilted in an order for a case of uarts. If the housekeeper ordered gain she would be told she could et the oil from her home grocer. erhaps she would insist that she referred to get it from the factory, nowing it would always be the ime. If so, it was shipped from ie factory, through the grocer, who as credited with her remittance nd the express charges.

"While thousands and thousands f cases were being sold in this way, ie company again made a test of ie jobbers. A hundred pint bottles ere mailed to the leading jobbers f the East. There was just one cknowledgment, and that was from man who wrote that he did not uy olive oil."

This advertising campaign cost 5,000! And when this enormous ount of money was gone, not a gle dividend had been declared to ow for it. In fact the concern ose story this is, while now pros-ous, has never yet declared a idend, and those who contributed $75,000 and other moneys have not received a single penny on their investment! Very probably there will be dividends, but the concern is coming up to them through great tribulations.

Perhaps the above is an extreme case, yet there are hundreds of others of similar character, in many of which the promoters have disheartedly withdrawn long before they were even in sight of success.

Government Seizes Trust Tobacco Under Anti-Trust Law.

A $7,000 shipment of leaf tobacco and cigarettes in transit from factories of the British-American Tobacco Co. at Petersburg, Va., and Durham, N. C., to New York and foreign countries has been attached by the Government at Norfolk, Va., and is now being held by the Customs authorities. The action was brought following a conference here last week between Collector of Customs Hughes, United States District Attorney L. L. Lewis and a representative from the Department of Justice at Washington. The tobacco seizure at Norfolk was made under Section 6 of the Sherman anti-trust law, which provides that any property owned by a combination in restraint of trade in course of transport shall be forfeited to the United States.

cial correspondence of "Grocery World."

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 24, 1907.

The fight against high food prices l wages in this city, and by far most important step yet taken in course of it was taken last week en an amended bill in equity was d here, including a large number local produce concerns, several lroads and a number of large ppers and receivers of produce. The new complaint covers much re ground than that previously d. By the new bill all the persons o were formerly mentioned as ving been placed on the alleged cklist of the trade association ve been made complainants in case and many of the largest uit growers of the country gether with all the railroads leading into Pittsburg are defendants.

Among the concerns named in the bill as defendants are the Erie Grape Growers' Association, National Produce Distributing Co., California Fruit Growers' Exchange, the International Apple Shippers' Association, the Elgin Board of Trade and John Fite, the Pittsburg agent.

In the latter part of the bill there are several pages which contain photographic copies of the advertisements some of the defendants named, in which the claim is made that they "own or control" the entire output of a certain class of products. An answer to the amended bill will be required in thirty days, when arguments will be allowed.

The Hotel Patrons' Demand

A coffee that satisfies on a hotel table is a good coffee and will stand up under any test you can give it.

That's because hotel patrons are supercritical. They expect more than they get at home; in fact they expect perfection.

Hotel Astor Coffee is the year-in-and-year-out brand of some of the most exclusive hotels in New York City. They never think of buying anything else — they wouldn't dream of it.

The success of this coffee under this exacting test is really the reason that led us to push it through the grocery trade. We have a plan to increase your high-grade coffee trade. May we tell you about it? A postal request is enough.

Finis of the Black Book Scheme.

The "Grocery World" notes with healthy satisfaction that the Federal Government has secured indictments against nineteen of the ringleaders in the notorious black book scheme of fighting the mail-order houses of Chicago. Throughout the West hundreds of retail merchants have worked the plan, and to-day they sit in fear and trembling lest the lightning shall descend upon them also. And well they may, for they have been guilty of a mean crime both against decency and against the law.

The black book plan gets its name from the fact that instructions for operating it were circulated throughout the West in a thin black pamphlet. In brief the scheme comprehended inducing thousands of retailers—who agreed because they considered themselves injured by the mail-order concerns—to send for the bulky mail-order catalognes and burn them. Since they cost $1 each to print, the extent to which the scheme might get in on the victims can easily be seen. The plot had other phases, but this was chief. It is said to have mulcted the mail-order houses in thousands of dollars.

The "Grocery World" has several times expressed its opinion of this scheme. It is contemptible sneak thievery of the worst sort and that the operators of it will surely be severely punished will find no regret in any honest breast. In dishonesty and disregard of all commercial ethics it transcends anything else ever tried in this country.

Germans and Patent Medicines.

The German Government has just taken a step regarding the sale of patent medicines which will probably be eventually followed in the United States and all other civilized countries. It has passed a law surrounding the sale of these fakes with such restrictions that from now on the business will be practically dead. Yet the law contains not a single provision which is not dictated by common sense and common prudence.

A brief summary of the new law follows:—

> It enacts that the exteriors of bottles, tins and other vessels containing medical compounds shall bear conspicuously printed upon them (A) the name and address of the firms manufacturing them and (B) the name and address of the retailer who sells them. (This does not apply to wholesalers.)
> It forbids the use of any written or printed statement in praise of the article or compound, any testimonial or recommendation or anything in the nature of an advertisement or an inducement to buy.
> Chemists and other retailers are required to know the ingredients of the compounds if they sell them on their own responsibility. Where they do not or cannot know the ingredients of the articles and compounds they are forbidden to sell them except by order of a qualified doctor, dentist or veterinary surgeon (in the latter case the article must be for the use of animals only), and a separate order, duly signed and dated, must be received for each separate supply. The retailers must also see that medicines, which they can only supply to the order of one of those qualified practitioners, bear labels which conspiculously state their condition.
> Lengthy lists of patent medicines governed by these restrictions have been officially circulated, and it is enacted that public advertisements of the articles mentioned is strictly prohibited, the term advertisements to include anything and everything whatsoever in the nature of an advertisement, directly or indirectly, such as an announcement offering to supply on request printed matter, the object of which is to further sales.

No legislation was ever more sorely needed than this. These birds of prey, selling their alcoholic or narcotic compounds through the most flagrant falsehoods and misrepresentations, ought to be made to suffer the torments of all the complaints they have falsely promised in their advertising to alleviate.

The whole patent medicine idea is illogical, since the successful administration of any remedy depends wholly on accurate diagnosis. This cannot be accomplished by the patient himself. The most stupendous outrages are committed under the cloak of the patent medicine business! One of the most widely advertised catarrh remedies proved on recent analysis to be composed of 26 per cent. of alcohol, 74 per cent. of water, and less than one-half of 1 per cent. of remedial agents! The stuff is simply a tipple and while it will stimulate because of its alcohol, can never cure anything.

There are probably a hundred other patent medicines on the market, just as widely sold, which embody frauds every bit as glaring. The time has come to scotch the thing!

The Philadelphia Oil Inspector Case.

In Philadelphia we have just been treated to another illustration of the Oil Trust's corrupt control over the reins of Government. The city oil inspector, Frank G. Edwards, admittedly the only straight inspector the municipality has had in years, has been removed by Mayor Reyburn, only one cause being alleged: The fact that the Atlantic Refining Co., which is the Philadelphia end of the Standard Oil Co., had complained against him! The burden of the Trust's complaint was that Inspector Edwards misrepresented it before the last Pennsylvania Legislature, when the Trust vainly tried to lobby through a much looser inspection law than now exists.

An honest man or corporation libelled, as the Oil Trust declares itself to have been here, would have brought an action against the libeller. Not so the Trust, which prefers the underhanded method by reason of infinite experience with it. The Trust goes through devious political channels to the appointing power, and thus robs Philadelphia of the best oil inspector she has ever had.

In this case one's mental attitude is divided between righteous rage at the Oil Trust for its continued defiance of all decency and honor and bitter contempt at the windy donkey who rules Philadelphia, for his arrant cowardice in removing a good official for such a cause.

North Dakota Food Commissioner Tied Up.

The validity of the ruling recently made by Commissioner E. F. Ladd of the North Dakota Food Department, against the sale of bleached flour in North Dakota is to be tested in the courts of that State. The Russell Miller Milling Co., owner of several mills in North Dakota, has been granted a temporary injunction restraining the Food Commissioner from publishing or circulating bulletins condemning flour manufactured by the plaintiff, and also from seizing goods of that company for alleged violation of the pure food law. The order is returnable October 29th.

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XVI.—Don't Knock.

No business man can afford to be a knocker.

Some men feel that they are not doing justice to their own goods unless they are showing the weak points in the goods of a competitor. Nine times out of ten such a knock is a boost for the competitor. No man likes to hear another knock. He may even know that the knock is largely truthful, or possibly entirely truthful, but he resents it just the same. On the other hand, if all the good points of your own goods are set forth, there is no reason why the customer cannot absorb enough of your ideas as to what makes value to make him feel prejudiced against other goods which do not show the same good points as yours.

A knocker generally has few friends, no matter what he is knocking against, and the habit grows upon him, and the longer he knocks the harder he knocks and the less justice there is in the knock ad as a result his friends become fewer and fewer, until none are left.

Young men who are inclined to edge in a little knock now and then should refrain, for the habit will grow, and it does not take long to acquire a reputation which will make promotion a slow possibility. Find the merit in your own goods and then always be sure to make the customer thoroughly appreciate every point they have, and your case is in the best possible condition for good business.

dvance in Only One Line of Food Products

List of Figures Showing the Heavy Advances Which Have Occurred in Bread, Cake and Pastry in the Last Ten Years. Advances in Same Items Over 100 Per Cent. General Advance in Materials Over 70 Per Cent. and in Operation Nearly 40 Per Cent.

As showing the course of adncing prices in only one line of man food—bread, cake, pastry, :., the "Grocery World" has had statement prepared showing the ry heavy increases in all the elents of raw material and operatg expenses which enter into the oducts mentioned. Bread, cake d pastry have been selected, beuse they are perhaps more genally consumed than almost anyng else.

The following figures show the urse of the market in the last ten ars :—

	Per Cent.
Patent flour has risen	47.8
Rye flour has risen	71.4
First clear flour has risen	75.5
Lard compound has risen	110.0
Pure lard has risen	115.0
Cooking oil has risen	130.0
Chocolate icing has risen	130.0
Raisins have risen	190.0

The lowest increases in this line c in

	Per Cent.
Molasses, which has risen	25
Corn starch, which has risen	22
Orange peel, which has risen	15
Lemon peel, which has risen	10

Lemon peel, of which so small an nount is used that it is scarcely orth figuring upon, has gone up per cent. But the rise on the ticles which are mostly used, mely, flour, lard and cooking oil which form perhaps 75 per cent. the ingredients used in baking—91.6 per cent. Rye flour alone is .4 per cent. higher than ten years go.

As to fruits used in the products med,

	Per Cent.
Blueberries have gone up	90
Canned apples have gone up	95
Peaches have gone up	100
Apricots have gone up	100

It is alleged by bakers that beuse of the above mixed bread sts 56½ per cent. more to make -day than it did ten years ago.

But the manufacturer of bread, ke and pastry has been plagued y other advances even outside of e above—advances which have ffected other lines of business also the general conduct of his busiess. For example, take the folwing :—

	Per Cent.
Horses have gone up	50
Rent has gone up	45
Wages have gone up	40
Feed has gone up	40
Wagons have gone up	30
Ovens have gone up	20
Maple cord-wood has gone up	30 and hard coal has gone up 20.8 per cent. The average percentage of these nine factors or elements of equipment for operation is 37.97 per cent. The cost of operation and equipment then is to-day almost 38 per cent. higher than it was in 1897.

There are listed in the following table twenty-eight various commodities which are necessary in the manufacture of the products referred to, and practically all of which also touch the grocer somewhere, and nine elements or factors of equipments and operation which also affect the grocer. There has been a rise in these ingredients of over 70 per cent., and in the matter of equipment and operation of 37.97 per cent. Taking them together, we find an increase of about 55.87 per cent. :—

INCREASE.

	Per Cent.
Lemon peel	10.0
Orange peel	15.0
Hard coal	20.8
Corn starch	22.0
Molasses	25.0
Almond paste	26.0

In itself, and by itself, that fact is significant.

Nothing but a superior article could last so long, and none but a very superior cracker could retain its leadership as the "EXTON" Oyster Cracker has done.

It MADE the standard of quality by which all other oyster crackers can safely be judged, and by which they HAVE been judged.

It's the Cracker King now as it has always been, and makes its sixty-first annual bow to the trade with a vigor that's growing steadily.

It's ready for the fall business whenever you are, and guarantees the same ideal quality which has made the name "EXTON" famous wherever oysters are known.

Karo
CORN SYRUP

Why?

Anybody who knows will tell you that Corn Syrup has almost completely supplanted sugar syrup in some sections of the country.

Why? Because it is smoother, mellower and lacks the sharp twang that makes sugar syrup disliked by many.

Karo Syrup is the acknowledged best of the Corn Syrups. Its superfine quality never varies, and all jobbers handle it—two important things to remember.

On the Road in New York State.

Some Incidents of a "Grocery World" Representative's Flying Visit to Some of the Big Food Manufacturing Concerns of New York State.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 24, 1907.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—In the course of a flying trip through the West and Northwest, I stopped at Johnstown, N. Y., to see the great gelatine man, Charles B. Knox. I found that he was so worn out trying to fill twice as many orders as his big plant could turn out that he had been forced to take a month's vacation. This put the conduct of this big business on the shoulders of Charles B. Knox, Jr. He was laid up in bed So much for the "Knox" these gentlemen had to contend with.

Then I went to Oneida to see the Burt Olney Canning Co. You should see the Olney plant! I learned from Mr. Olney that last season they only filled about 75 per cent. of their orders, and that they would be even worse off the coming season. The magnitude of their establishment would lead one to believe that they could put up more goods than it would be possible to sell.

I went from Oneida to Oswego. What a gloriously clean place! Mr. Murdock, the general manager of the Oswego Maize Products Co., took me over their plant, and when I saw how they made corn and laundry starch, the work they did to rid their products entirely of gluten, I understood why there was such a demand for their goods.

In Rochester I met some of the finest fellows in the world. I inquired for Mr. Michael Doyle, of the Mohawk Condensed Milk Co., whom everybody in Rochester seems to know, and when I presented myself to him I found him the busiest man in town. An advance in the price of milk of 20 cents per case had made it necessary for him to long-distance the big cities all over the country, but he was cordiality and graciousness personified between his phone calls.

Nothing can compare with an Irish welcome. He has two clever young men with him, a Mr. McGrath and a Mr. Foley, who are his right and left bowers. I felt like staying with them a week, to learn, if I could, how to be fearfully busy and smile a welcome at a stranger at the same time.

I also called on Curtice Bros. Their place looks as big as Baldwin's Locomotive Works. Mr. Badger, the secretary, cordially invited me into his office, handed me a box of good cigars and regretted that I called too late in the day for him to take me over the works. Mr. Badger is another man I'd like to spend a week with. I feel as though I would learn something. Curtice Bros. are away behind with their orders this season, can't get the raw material they need at any price.

Stopped to see Mr. Glidden, of the D Zerta Co., another good fellow. He has a great new product. It is called "Our Pie." The housewife makes the crust, adds a little fluid to the new D Zerta product, puts it in the oven and she has a pie like mother used to make. It is selling to beat the band wherever it has been introduced, and I guess it won't be long getting on the Eastern market, for it's too good a thing to keep out of sight long. Yours fraternally,

C. M. Wessels.

Many catsups have similar outward appearances. It's the delicious flavor found only in Snider's catsup that makes it the most popular brand in the world. It's a perfected product of twenty-five years' experience. Try it.

Grocery Interests Not Affected by Banking Troubles. How Jobbers Are Handling the High Prices. Callanan's Views of Labor Unions. Current News of the New York Market.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, Oct. 25, 1907.

Grocery interests have not been shaken by the banking developments, as far as known, and both wholesale and retail dealers say that business is proceeding about as usual. It is said that the jobbers are quite conservative in making purchases and that, in fact, they have been pursuing a most careful course in this respect for some time past, which puts them in the better condition now. In the changes in the directorates of banks several jobbers are mentioned. The most notable instance, perhaps, was that J. E. Nichols, of Austin, Nichols & Co., was placed in the new directorate of the Mercantile National Bank on its reorganization.

Higher prices being the subject of discussion among retail grocers, a number of letters which Francis H. Leggett & Co. have printed in their circulars of instruction sent to salesmen are of interest. The letters were addressed to J. C. Juhring, of the company, and were written by some of the salesmen themselves, so that their dissemination is for the purpose of reaching the others and getting all to act together. The idea is for the salesmen to encourage the retailers to ask higher prices and thus get a greater percentage of profit.

When your correspondent saw Mr. Juhring to-day, he said that the subject is of much importance and he did not hesitate in saying that the time has come when retail prices must go up. The wholesaler, having to pay more for nearly everything that he buys, has to get higher prices from the retailer and the only way that will enable the latter to pay such advances is to put them up to the consumer.

The writer of one of the letters said:—

"I have been preaching this for some time as hard as I can to my trade, in many cases arranging between merchants to receive a raise in prices. They must do it or we will have failures on our hands. Every element of cost has increased—wages, horse feed, wagon repairs, paper, twine and packages. Our percentages of profits are rapidly shrinking because the grocer does not raise his prices. In many cases he cannot reflect every advance. A 10-cent article cannot be put to 11 cents (in this section), and the price must move to 12½ cents to move at all. I have urged this move in many cases, and especially the raise in the price of all held articles that have advanced.

"The proper economic effect of an advance in prices is to reduce consumption or to throw the demand to some substitute which has not yet advanced so much. But if the grocer absorbs the advance and pockets the loss the demand for the high-priced article still continues unimpaired. Many a grocer will invoice this winter, and after having had an apparently good business, i. e., large sales, he will find that he has made no money.

"We want to keep our trade in business and our salesmen should make a point of urging advances in prices at retail. The slogan 'put up your prices or put up your shutters' expresses it all."

Among retailers with whom the writer has spoken opinions vary. Some say emphatically that there should be higher prices in many lines, in order that reasonable profits may be made. Others say that the situation is adjusting itself in a natural way and that there is no occasion for any special agitation of the subject. One large grocer said that with the exception of fruits and vegetables food is not costing more than a year ago. He admitted that the two exceptions are pretty broad.

A jobber said that the national food law has been one of the factors that has put up prices, but that natural laws of trade are chiefly responsible. "Wheat and oats and everything made of them costs more," he said, "so do most of the vegetables and fruit that we can, the tin cans cost more, the expenses of doing business are higher in a hundred ways than they were."

It is not usual for a retail dealer to throw down the gauntlet to labor unions, but L. J. Callanan, of Vesey street, always speaks his mind without fear. When somebody returned to him copies of his house organ with a paster, saying that this was done because of the absence of the union label, he was indignant all the way through. He did not know who returned the copies, so he expressed himself in the next issue just out, and gave several pages to telling his opinions of labor unions and their methods.

Among other things, he told of a movement to organize the grocery clerks into a branch of the Knights of Labor. One of his clerks, who was drawing a good salary, asked Mr. Callanan if he had any objection to the boys joining the union. The grocer said that he had none.

The clerk was asked a few questions, however, by his employer. This brought out the fact that this particular clerk knew that he was getting much higher pay than some of the others, and realized that this was because he was worth more to his employer than the others were. He also agreed that there was no possibility of all getting as high a salary as he got. He was told that the union would insist on all getting the same pay. The conclusion was that if the union was formed and had its way he would find his pay reduced so as to bring all to an average level. This broke up the movement among these clerks.

Mr. Callanan in his article criticises the unions for putting all men on a level, for not permitting the workman to do his best work and for allowing demagogues and political lobbyists to conduct the organizations, often to the injury of business interests and of the workingmen themselves. He gave numerous illustrations and urged that it is time for business men to stand firmly together in opposition to the claims of the professional labor agitators who assume to represent the workingmen at sessions of State Legislatures and even at meetings of Congress.

Agitation for another daily call in the butter market is in progress. It is said that the absence of any kind of official quotations is quite unsatisfactory to many receivers as well as to shippers. The secret premiums that existed under the old system have not disappeared to the extent that was expected. It is argued that the evil of the old sysn was in the fact that the quota-ons were false, but that a daily call ould give true prices based on tual transactions. A new trick in e trade, it is said, is to give secret emiums and then juggle the class which the butter is placed.

Opening of Burk's New Plant.

An event of considerable importance
ook place on Wednesday and Thursday,
October 23d and 24th, when Louis Burk hrew open his mammoth new plant for nspection to the trade and general pubic.

Visitors from at least a dozen States locked to see what has rightly been ermed the model abattoir and pork acking establishment in the United States. Nothing but words of praise could be heard and some of those who spoke most highly were men who have plants of their own and could recognize he thoroughness, care and lavish expenditure that were everywhere apparent in all parts of the establishment. Some idea of the size of the plant can be best obtained by these figures:—

It has a frontage of 115 feet on Girard avenue and 256 feet on Third street, extending 200 feet to Orianna street. The entire first floor of this magnificent building is practically all glass, another one of Mr. Burk's ideas being that having nothing to conceal he could readily take the public into his confidence and allow them to see from the streets how his work was done.

The power plant is of the most modern type and is operated by two 250-horse power Fitchburg engines, with 160 K. W. direct connecting generators. Every piece of machinery in the entire plant is driven by a direct connected motor. The refrigerating and ice plant is run by two 75-ton refrigerating machines, giving an enormous chilling capacity. One of the most interesting branches is the sausage department, the main room of which is 250 feet long by 70 feet wide. The walls are tiled porcelain and the ceiling and columns are white enameled. The machinery consists of cutters, grinders, mixers, all of which are white enameled. The sausage stuffers are operated by water power. The tables connected with them are Tarara glass; the whole room has that sanitary, appetitizing appearance that appeals so strongly to one's sense of cleanliness; one would know that the product of such a place must be pure and wholesome.

Another innovation is found in the curing room, which is done in tierces and concrete vats, this again is a great advancement over the old methods still employed in many places.

In conformity with the rest of the building is the stable, here again the most modern sanitary methods were employed. The stalls are made of iron and there is room for 75 head of horses.

Everywhere throughout the establishment are toilets and shower baths, all of white marble.

An innovation that was first introduced in this establishment is the laundry. All the employees are compelled to change their uniforms daily, the washing and ironing being done in the place.

The office and salesroom occupy the first floor and are finished in the most attractive manner, the columns being concealed with art marble. Adjoining is the beef salesroom, being finished in white enamel and, as stated before, the entire frontage being glass, making an inviting room.

For the accommodation of the neighborhood there is a retail store, which is conceded to be the finest in Philadelphia. The electric design is original and catchy, having a candelabra effect. The counters and wall cases are all refrigerated.

During the two days not less than 15,000 people were entertained, being shown how cattle are slaughtered and how sausages are stuffed, besides the elaborate repast that was served to them, comprising all of the products of the establishment.

The visitors were taken through by the employees of the place, all of whom wore uniforms of immaculate white. It was interesting to see how Dr. C. A. Schaufler, the inspector in chief, and his assistants of the Bureau of Animal Industry at their various stations, all of them in their neat uniforms and wearing the official badge, showing that every part was under Governmental authority.

"When in Need of Fish Consult Me,"

That is what Carl Wilde, of 357 N. Second street, Philadelphia, said recently in response to a question about Holland and Scotch herring, Norway mackerel and anchovies, "as I have a complete stock of the very finest fish that is brought to this country. The same is true as to summer Ementhaler Swiss cheese and all kinds of delicatessen."

Questions Answered

In installing an American Slicing Machine three questions come up. Let us see how users of the machine answer them:

1. WILL IT PAY?
"The American Slicing Machine paid for itself in less than a month's time."—Boston Beef Co., New Bedford, Mass.

2. WILL IT LAST?
"The machine shows absolutely no signs of wear from the long use it has had in my store. You have apparently built it so there is nothing to wear out."—Frank J. Gaume, Troy, Kansas.

3. WILL IT INCREASE TRADE?
"It has increased my trade 50 per cent. People who buy other meats at other markets come to me for their cold meats."
—I. B. Jones, Watseka, Ill.

Eight thousand users enthusiastically endorse it.

It will save waste, time and labor; increase your profit on each sale and bring you all the best trade of your locality.

Progressive stores right in your town have proved this for themselves.

May we show you the proof?

The tea market is still healthy and active. The demand continues better than it has been for many months. There is an excellent demand for all grades and the market is steady to strong. No changes of any description have occurred during the past week.

Coffee.

The market for Rio and Santos coffee has been groggy during the greater part of the week, showing an apparent undertone of weakness. The bull element made some effort to maintain it, but had no conspicuous success. Consumptive demand fair. Mild coffees were firm and active, washed coffees especially. Java firm, Mocha steady, demand fair.

Sugar.

The sugar market has remained about in statu quo during the past week. The raw market shows practically no change. The refiners are buying sugar in moderate quantities only. Refined sugar is unchanged and in fair demand. There seems to be no reason to expect any change in the near future.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose remains unchanged. Compound syrup is steady at ruling prices and in fair demand owing to the fall weather. Sugar syrup is moving out well at unchanged prices. Molasses is unchanged and in fair demand. The receipts of new molasses have practically amounted to nothing up to the present time. The first receipts will probably be late this year.

Canned Goods.

Tomatoes are practically unchanged. The price averages 87½ cents f. o. b., as it did last week. Several packers are holding out for 90 cents, but practically no sales have been made at that in this section of the country. If the pack is as small as some authorities seem to think, the price will doubtless go to 90 cents and beyond. The demand for tomatoes is only fair. Even the West is now buying more moderately. It is believed that Eastern jobbers average smaller stocks of tomatoes than for many years. Corn is dull, but strong. Offerings are light, and the outlook is firm. New York standard corn is not now quoted below 85 cents. Peas are scarce, strong and active. Apples seem to have settled down on a basis of $3.50 for New York State gallons. Some holders still ask $3.75, however. Peaches are unchanged, both Eastern and Western brands, and the demand is light. The California line of canned goods is well broken up and in light demand. Baltimore small canned goods are unchanged and in light demand. String beans are a notch higher, and baked beans, by reason of the firm bean market, are high.

Dried Fruits.

The prune market is easier on the coast, though no further decline has occurred during the past week. The easiness seems to be particularly notable on large sizes. The demand is light both in primary and secondary markets. Peaches are beginning to sell again, though no brisk demand has developed as yet. Prices are unchanged. A few apricots are selling on an unchanged basis, ranging from 22 to 25 cents in first hands. Currants are moving out well, mostly on contracts, at unchanged prices. Raisins are in good demand. Loose raisins are easy, largely because there is a surplus, due to the fact that the seeding capacity is sold up and loose raisins are therefore pushed for sale. Four-crown loose muscatel raisins opened at 8⅜ cents delivered in the East, and from various reasons the market has declined ½ cent. Even further declines will probably be necessary before the California loose raisins can compete with imported Valencias, which sell at 7 cents delivered. Apples are steady and in fair demand.

Fish.

Mackerel continues firm and active. Norway fat fish are still very scarce, and are snapped up whenever they are offered. Prices are maintained on the former high basis. Irish fish are wanted also, but are scarce and high. The only grade of mackerel which is reasonably plentiful is shores, which range from $22 to $26 per barrel. The demand is fairly good, owing to the scarcity of other mackerel. Cod, hake and haddock are in fair demand at unchanged prices. Sardines are unchanged, but it is reported that goods can be bought at a somewhat lower price than before the last advance. Imported sardines are firm and moderately wanted. Salmon is unchanged and in fair demand.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans show another sharp advance to $2.60 to $2.65 on spot. The cause is extreme scarcity. To come forward the quotation is $2.30

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

to $2.40. The demand is good. New marrows average $2.35 and old $2.30. The demand is fair. California limas have advanced ¼ cent on the coast by reason of bad weather. In the East the market is unchanged, demand light. Split peas are in light offering and show no change for any grade. The market is stiff throughout.

Butter.

The butter market is unchanged from a week ago. The supply is about normal for the season, and the quality fancy. The consumptive demand for butter is good considering the price, and the market is in a fairly healthy condition, with all prospects of remaining so. An unchanged situation is looked for during the coming week. As the season advances the supply of fresh butter will fall off, and the price will depend on the consumptive demand.

Eggs.

The market for fresh eggs is very firm at an advance of 1 cent per dozen over the week before. The supply of fresh eggs is very short and the few that are getting in are selling at top prices. There is a firm outlook for the coming week. Both fresh and refrigerator eggs are in good demand.

Provisions.

The market on everything in the smoked meat line is steady and unchanged. There is a good supply of hams, bacon and dried beef. Pure lard continues scarce; compound is unchanged. There will likely be a falling off in the consumptive demand for everything in the smoked meat and lard line, and any change which takes place will therefore probably be a decline. No change seems likely, however, for several days. Barrel pork is firm and in fair demand. Canned meats are unchanged and dull.

Cheese.

The cheese market is firm and unchanged. The consumptive demand is good considering the extreme prices. The supply of cheese is still very short, being fully 40 per cent. below a year ago. This is due, as has previously been explained to shortage of milk in the cheese producing sections. No relief in prices is likely as long as the consumptive demand continues.

Produce.

White potatoes, Pennsylvania, 68 to 73 cents per bushel; York State, 65 to 70 cents; Jersey, 40 to 45 cents, fair to good demand; sweet potatoes, primes, 40 to 50 cents, fair to good demand; cabbage, 15 to 20 cents per basket, demand fair; yellow turnips, 40 cents per basket; white, 25 to 30 cents per basket, fair demand; carrots, 50 cents per basket, demand fair; peppers, 20 cents per basket, fair to good demand; lima beans, improved, $1 per basket; flat, 65 to 75 cents; shelled, 15 to 18 cents per quart, good demand; yellow onions, 45 to 55 cents per basket, demand good; beets, $1.50 to $2.50 per 100, demand fair; horseradish, $5 to $7 per barrel, demand fair; salad, $1 to $1.50 per barrel, demand fair; celery, 8 to 10 cents per bunch, fair demand; pumpkins, 15 to 20 cents per basket, fair to good demand; York State celery, 30 to 40 cents per bunch, fair demand; parsnips, $2.25 per barrel, demand fair; cauliflower, $2 to $3 per barrel, demand fair.

Green Fruit.

Bananas, firsts, $1.50 to $3.50 per bunch; 8-hands, $1 to $1.50; 7-hands, 60 to 85 cents; 6-hands, 50 to 60 cents, demand poor; pineapples, $4 to $5 per box, demand fair to good; quinces, $5 to $5.50 per barrel, fair to good demand; California oranges, $6.25 to $7.25 per box, demand good; Florida grapefruit, $5.50 to $6.50 per box, good demand; Jamaica oranges, $5.25 to $5.50 per box, slow demand; lemons, $2.75 to $4 per box, fair demand; Bartlett pears, $6 to $8 per barrel; Seckels, $6 to $7; Duchess, $3 to $4; Sheldon, $3.50 to $4.50, demand good; apples, 20-ounce, $4 to $4.50; Kings, $4 to $4.50; Baldwins, $3.50 to $4; Hulberson, $3 to $3.50; Greenings, $3 to $3.50, good demand.

Nuts.

Almonds, 21 to 22 cents per pound; Brazil, 11½ cents; filberts, 10½ cents; pecans, 16 cents; marbot walnuts, 12 cents; mixed nuts, 11½ cents, demand poor; green peanuts, jumbo, 8 cents; fancy, 7 cents; choice, 5¾ cents; roasted, jumbo, $1.65 per bushel; fancy, $1.50; choice, $1.25, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Imported Fish Products.

Norway Mackerel.—According to reports received from our Norwegian agent, the catch this season available for the American market will not amount to more than half the quantity of last season.

Bloaters are almost unobtainable. No. 1 are very scarce. Altogether just a very small percentage of large fish has been cured. The competition amongst the buyers in the Norwegian market has been keener than ever before and the prices paid to the fishermen for the fresh fish were higher than ever before. Although high prices are asked for Norway mackerel here, they nevertheless hardly cover first cost. Notwithstanding high prices there has been a good demand for all Norway mackerel, and especially for the finest quality white fat fish which is held in a few very firm hands. There is not the least doubt that supplies will be exhausted very shortly, so that buyers will find the market entirely bare if they wait too long before securing their wants for the season.

Irish mackerel are scarce and in good demand. A few have been caught in Ireland, but the quality is so far inferior to the Norways that the asking price for Irish is really in no proportion to the Norways of the same size considering difference in the quality.

Sardines and sprats are scarce and the market is very scantily supplied. In Norway the catch of smoked sardines has proved to be a failure and some of the best brands are all sold out for the season. There is very little, if anything, available in Norway except brands which are not at all known and not wanted in this market. Prices in consequence have been advanced all around and supplies are short.

Holland and Scotch herring are in fair demand; prices unchanged.

Spices.

The market continues unusually active. The demand is better throughout the list. Pepper is firmer and we look for a slowly but steady rise in values.

Pepper.—After the low price reported last week, the market is more steady and much firmer, in fact has advanced to about ½ cent per pound. We believe that at present prices this article is a safe buy.

Cayennes.—The market is unchanged. Bright Chillies are scarce and very firm.

Cloves.—The demand is unusual and all arrivals are quickly taken up from the wharf. The crop is no doubt large, and we do not anticipate higher prices at present. It is, however, hard to predict the future on this spice.

Pimento (Allspice) is in steady demand at unchanged prices. We, however, look for a slowly rising market.

Mace.—Demand continues exceedingly good. Prices are steady and prime stock continues scarce.

Nutmegs are rather active. Prices, however, continue unusually low, in fact lowest on record.

Cassias.—Demand continues exceedingly good. Prices steady, but practically unchanged during the week.

Gingers.—very firm and moving in a satisfactory way. Reports predict a failure in the crop of Cochin for 1908.

Seeds are very active and the demand is big. Caraway is steadily advancing. Import cost is much higher than 8 cents. Celery has advanced about ¼ cent during the week. Poppy is in good demand at steady prices, and good grades of Mustard are scarce.

Sugar.

The raw market has been quiet this week. Prices are five points lower, sales being made at 3.90 cents.

Business keeps along upon a normal level and prices are not much affected. Each week some raws have passed to the refiners, lessening the small quantities still to come forward. There don't seem to be anything in the near future that would help in establishing prices upon a higher range, but along toward the end of the season it is possible that the few sugars then remaining may bring a little more money. Europe has been having a rather hard time with her quotations, not being able to maintain them. They were based largely on weather conditions and speculation as to how the growing continental beet crops would outturn. Good weather meant only a small shortage from last year. They've had good weather for three weeks and prices have suffered. Europe's quotation has come down to the equivalent of 3.96 cents New York. We didn't get above 3.95 cents, so the drop there has not hurt us much. Mr. Licht's estimate has been published. Judging from the present condition of the fields and plants he believes the crop will be 6,580,000 tons, 130,000 tons less than last year's yield. That is a little too much sugar for high prices. Quotations have been adjusting themselves to such a tonnage. It isn't too much sugar, combined with the cane output, for the world's needs. Consumption has been going along all right, and from such a crop there won't be much to carry over. Europe should be able to hold her present price of 9/3½ for two months yet. At any rate they shouldn't lose much from that price. Here we have a market for the cane supplies still to come in. Those supplies are limited and will look better later on. The refiners have good stocks, but their meltings are reaching 41,000 tons a week and a great deal of refined sugar must be got ready to ship out to the Western consignment points before rail and lake navigation closes. The orders for prompt shipment refined show no abatement. There isn't a big business, but the demand is normal for this time of year, and there will be trade in refined and room for the raw supplies right up to the end of the season. To-day's prices of both raw and refined are upon a reasonable basis.

The arrival of the bark Foohng Suey from the Hawaiian Islands is reported. She brings a cargo of sugar. Many Java steamers are afloat, expected within the next six or seven weeks, and one or two lots from the Philippines. These supplies, in addition to the little left in Cuba and Porto Rico, with perhaps some from Brazil and a shipment or so from Demerara, are the sugars to be used in carrying us along until new crop Cubas arrive.

Refined Sugar.—The American Sugar Refining Co., Howell, and Arbuckle, quote a basis of granulated at 4.80 cents, less 1 per cent. cash, privilege of prompt or thirty days delayed shipment. The Federal is taking orders at 4.70 cents, less 1 per cent. cash, subject to shipment within two weeks.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

Continued buying of tomatoes on a large scale has been encouraging to the canners in this section. The demand came from all parts of the country, but the Western canners and jobbers were the largest buyers, and their orders embraced all three sizes, though chiefly for No. 3 standards. It is thought that the canners in Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey will have this season a smaller surplus stock to carry for the winter trade than in several years after they have filled their contracts and delivered their recent sales. At all events, they do not appear to be bothered about the outlook, and they think the market is in good position to take care of itself. The demand for tomatoes this season for buyers' labels has been larger than ever and to secure really choice quality for that purpose a small premium has to be paid above the market price for same grade under the packers' own labels. They are worth the attention of all buyers, especially those who are interested in having shipments made before freezing weather commences or lake and rail navigation closes.

Corn, string beans and sweet potatoes, next to tomatoes, were the most active articles in the line of vegetables this week, but there was scarcely an article, from the cheapest to the highest-priced goods in the list, that was not wanted. Baked beans were again fairly active and stronger. It looks like the entire list of vegetables is safe to buy at to-day's prices.

New pears are in demand and shipments can be made promptly. Up to this date the pack has been very small, just as expected, and the prices are firm. Apples were active again this week and the orders for them increased. There was the usual demand for small lots of berries of all kinds and pineapples for shipment in assorted carload lots.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 25, 1907.

MARKET NOTES.

The first new crop Florida oranges reached Northern markets during the week and jobbed from $2.75 to $3.50. The quality, however, was extremely poor, the fruit being very green. The demand was good considering the quality.

A few eggplants are coming forward from Florida and average $1.50 per crate. There are a few Jerseys about, but scarcely enough to quote. The season is about over.

Virginia beans are coming forward and average $1.50 per half barrel. New Jersey beans are also still in market at an average of 60 cents per basket. The demand is good.

New crop Florida tomatoes are ready for shipment and are expected to open at about $2 per crate. The first shipment is expected to be in Northern markets in about ten days.

The grape market is about unchanged. Small baskets range from 11 to 12 cents, and wine grapes $2.50 per 100. The price of grapes is holding up well considering the quality. A normal price for wine grapes would be $1.25 to $1.50.

Definition of Java Coffee Soon Forthcoming.

The Bureau of Chemistry in the Department of Agriculture has just received the report from the Government of Holland, for which it has been looking for a good while. in connection with its attitude on the coffee situation. This report deals specifically with the extent of territory which is considered by the Dutch Government as being included in the word "Java" and will be of great weight in determining the position to be taken by the Bureau of Chemistry in the matter of branding coffee as "Java" or otherwise. The position has been taken by coffee interests that the term "Java" was a trade name of sufficiently definite meaning, and that it didn't have a distinct geographical significance. A food inspection decision on the branding of coffee will probably be issued in the near future and along with it will probably go a determination of the questions relating to the "glazing" of coffee beans.

Big Fish Concern in Trouble.

A bad fishing season, caused by the presence of large schools of dogfish, which drove away the menhaden, is claimed to be responsible for the failure of the Fisheries Co., a New Jersey corporation, whose offices are in the Drexel Building, Philadelphia. Application was made in the United States Circuit Court in Trenton for a receiver last Saturday, and Garrett D. W. Vroom and Orlando J. Delaney were appointed. As the company also owns considerable property in Rhode Island, another application was made in that State on Wednesday, and Mr. Delaney was made receiver, with William P. Sheffield, of Newport. Robert R. Haydock, vice-president of the company, made both applications. The concern is capitalized at $3,000,000. It maintained a fleet of fifty vessels.

How to Get a Roll Top Desk Free.

The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., of New York, have made an arrangement with the Manufacturers' Trade Mark Association, the big premium clearing-house of New York, which enables them to substantially reward retailers who show an interest in increasing the sale of Barker's Hasty Lunch Chocolate, Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoas.

These goods are so fine that it is hard to sell anything else to consumers once they have had them; so besides the reward the Knickerbocker Chocolate Co. give grocers for pushing them, they are certain to please their trade.

Suppose, for example, a grocer needs a new roll-top desk, a safe, a cheese cutter, a computing or platform scale; instead of drawing on his bank account to pay for them he pushes the sale of the Knickerbocker Co.'s goods with his customers, saves the Universal Coupons packed in every case for him and adds them to those coming to him from other manufacturers, and in a short time he will have collected enough to entitle him to any of the articles named.

The Manufacturers' Trade Mark Association issue a handsome illustrated catalogue which they send free to grocers, showing an almost unlimited array of useful articles of merchandise which they will send grocers in exchange for the Universal Coupons, together with a list of all the manufacturers throughout the country who give these same coupons to the grocers.

The Knickerbocker Co. is the only manufacturer of chocolate and cocoa from whom a grocer can get these Universal coupons; so grocers who want valuable free merchandise as well as their regular profits will concentrate their efforts on the sale of the Knickerbocker Chocolate Co.'s goods.

Magazine Notes.

A New Mystery Story—"Under the Black Cassock."

One of the best mystery stories we have read in a long time is Edith Morgan Willett's novel, "Under the Black Cassock," which is published complete in the November "Lippincott's. The opening scenes are laid in New York, after which the action shifts to Charleston, and the characters are society folk of the intelligent, well-bred kind which really exists, and not at all the hysteric, exotic, little-short-of-idiotic sort that are pictured so often in the so-called society stories. The plot is an ingenious one, and the dénouement is quite unexpected. Among the shorter fiction is a charming story called "The First Hurdle," by John Reed Scott, who won recognition with his two novels, "The Colonel of the Red Huzzars" and "Beatrix of Clare." "The Blood o' Innocence," by George L. Knapp, is a strongly dramatic story of a feud in England in the days when men wore swords. "The Old Folks at Home," by Sarah Chichester Page, is a delightful sketch of Virginia life. Other noteworthy contributions in the fiction line are by Mabel Nelson Thurston, George Brydges Rodney, Joseph M. Rogers and Mrs. E. Ayrton-Zangwill. There is another of Mrs. John van Vorst's excellent Parisian articles, this time on "French School-Girls of To-day." Other papers are "A Canadian Heronry," by Bonnycastle Dale; "The Brutality of the Matinée Girl," by Julict Wilbor Tompkins; "The Vehicle of Discase," by Lewis B. Ely; "Madame Nazimova—A Comparison," by Anna McClure Sholl, and "Apprenticeship in Letters," by René Bache. Some exceptionally good verses and the usual department of humor, "Walnuts and Wine," complete the number.

Please find herewith check for $3, for which please send to my address the "Grocery World" one year (renewal). Would be very sorry indeed to be without this journal, as statements and information it contains are to be relied on.—J. W. Walters, Pulaski, Va.

THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

This Department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent in for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be filed in their order and taken up according to strict rotation.

————, N. J., Oct. 21, 1907.

Editor Science of Advertising.

Dear Sir:—I have a grocery store in a small village of about 500 people within two miles of the county seat of ———— county. There are two other grocery stores here beside my own. I have never done any advertising, being contented with the share of the local business which naturally came to me but of late I have been solicited to advertise in one of the county weeklies, published two miles away and circulating all over the county. The paper claims 2,000 circulation and I am free to say is a bright newsy sheet. The editor has called on me several times wanting me to advertise, and says he is making a specialty of advertising by the merchants of the surrounding towns. He makes all manner of inducements, offering me three inches of space each week for $15 a year, and being willing to take same out in trade. He also promises to write the advertisements himself and to see that they are properly displayed in good position in the paper.

To many merchants this might seem like a trifle, but to me, who has never done any advertising, it seems like entering a new field, and I want to be sure I am right before I go ahead. So I ask your advice, Mr. Editor, and have no objection to your answering through the "Grocery World" provided my name and address are not used.

Yours truly,

If I were this correspondent I should not accept the proposition he describes. Fifteen dollars a year in trade looks like a small sum, but should it be thrown away on that account? I have had some experience with country newspapers. This one may have a circulation of 2,000. I am of course not in position to doubt it; nevertheless not one out of a hundred has that circulation or anything like it. If this paper had twice 2,000 circulation, however, the proposition would not materially improve for this correspondent. It is easy to see why. His is a local store. He can expect trade only from his own village people, together with what few farmers make the village their shopping centre. It is utterly impracticable for him to advertise in such a way as to bring people to him from the county seat, or from towns beyond the county seat, or from any towns but his own. While people all over the county might see his advertisement in the county paper, they would not come to his store because it would be too inconvenient. They have their own local stores, which sell everything this correspondent would sell, and sell it as cheap or cheaper.

So that while my friend is paying his $15 a year for a weekly circulation of 2,000 subscribers, the greater part of that circulation is wasted as to him, and he cannot hope to get from it a single cent's worth of business. The only part of the circulation of this paper which is of the slightest use to him is that part which is distributed throughout his own town and the territory for which his town is a centre. I should suppose one hundred a large estimate for that part of the circulation, so that it is for that, and not for the 2,000, that the correspondent is paying his $15 a year.

In my judgment nothing is clearer than that merchants situated like the writer of the above letter cannot profitably advertise in any way except locally. That means circulars or a little store paper of his own, preferably a good circular in this case, as it is a question whether the territory is large enough to pay the expense of the paper. A good, clean circular, advertising seasonable things in a chatty, enthusiastic, persuasive way, at attractive prices, and sent to a carefully compiled list of all the desirable people in the place, together with the farmers who come in or could be brought in, would surely produce results. Such a circular could be issued once a week, and the campaign would almost surely cost more than $15 a year, yet it would stand to get direct results, while the newspaper campaign could not.

More matter, please.

Minnesota Food Department Pursuing Bad Eggs.

Already its results are apparent. Merchants are exercising greater care in marketing eggs and are disposed to be much more particular about the eggs they buy from farmers. It is the intention of the department to maintain its activity in the endeavor to put a stop to the marketing of eggs which are absolutely unfit for consumption. Heretofore the department has been disposed to show some leniency towards retail merchants who blame the farmers for having sold them rotten eggs, but in the future the law will be enforced strictly, and while every retail dealer will get an absolutely "square deal," there will be no excuses accepted. Retail merchants will be held responsible for the condition of the eggs they offer for sale, and it is their business to know what that condition is. A Minnesota merchant was recently find $50 for selling eggs which were not fit for market, and the only reason why the farmer who sold him the eggs was not proceeded against in a criminal action was that some three days after he sold the eggs he removed to North Dakota. A civil action to recover costs and damages for injury to his business will be instituted by the merchant against this farmer.

Your Shelf Room.

Many a worrisome moment have you put in wondering where you were going to put the goods that you just received because you had no more room on your shelves. A great deal of this trouble can be avoided if you were to support your shelves with Baines' brackets, manufactured and controlled by the Piqua Bracket Co., of Piqua, Ohio. These brackets are made both adjustable and fixed, and will insure about 25 per cent. more space on your shelves over the ordinary kind usually used. They are so constructed that there are no obstructions, giving you a full sweep along the entire rows of shelving. It gives your store a neat, inviting effect and are a necessary fixture in every well regulated store. They are economical, because the space saved will pay for itself in storage. You will be interested if you will take the time to send for the catalogue the Piqua Bracket Co. issues.

Useful Facts About Groceries

The department which will henceforth be conducted under the above head is best explained by the letter which appears below, and which was recently sent to the "Grocery World." In the hope that a little such matter may be of interest and value to "Grocery World" readers, a short educational article along the lines indicated will appear under this head from time to time.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as near as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long-looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. BRECKENRIDGE.

Indigo.

An important and valuable blue coloring matter, mostly used by dyers and artists, but also sparingly by confectioners, etc., and very largely for making laundry blue. It is obtained from the leaves of several kinds of plants in the East Indies, and is a light friable substance of a deep blue color. Nine-tenths of it comes from India and is very powerful. The kind cultivated in Bengal and known as Indigofera tinctoria is considered the best, and next to it are the I. anil of the West Indies, and the I. guatemali of Central America.

The chief Indigo plant is nearly like that of tares, and the pods of similar shape. The seed, which much resembles gunpowder in size and shape, is sown in the spring in rows about a foot apart, and if kept free from weeds it grows very rapidly.

In about nine weeks after sowing and just as it is beginning to flower, the leafy stems, then three to four feet high, are all cut off with a pruning knife to within a couple of inches of the ground, another crop of leaves is ready in about six weeks, and even a third crop will grow in favorable seasons.

The leaves, similar in shape to those of the ash, are gathered into bundles, put at once into wooden vats and covered with water, where in fifteen to twenty hours they begin to ferment, turning the water thick and green and evolving bubbles of carbonic acid gas. The light green liquor is then drawn off into an empty vat, a little lime water is added to it, and well beaten up—this causes the green water to turn blue and settle to the bottom of the vat. The clearer water is next drawn off, and the pasty residuum is formed into small lumps or cakes, dried by the sun, and finally marketed.

Bob, the Butter-In.

I was home most of last week and was sitting in the "Grocery World" office one day when somebody called me on the phone. It was an old acquaintance of mine that I've knocked about with for about ten years.

He said he wanted to see me for a minute, so he came right around.

"Hello, Bob," I said, when he came in, "how's things? Still up at Jones?"

"No," said Bob, "I ain't been there since last month. That's what I want to see you about. Don't know of anything open, do you?"

Jones, of course, ain't the right name. It represents a wholesale grocery house where I helped to get Bob a job as assistant bookkeeper about six months ago.

"Good Lord, man!" I said, when he told me he had left, "you had to lose that too, eh? I don't know what to make of you Bob. That's the sixth good job you've had in three years, and most of 'em I helped you get. I'm afraid you're a hopeless case!"

I knew or thought I knew what the trouble was, but I wanted his version of it.

"Why, those people were darned fools!" he said, "nobody could get along with them. I think I know something about bookkeeping—I been at it long enough to, anyway—and I kept their books in a way I knew was right. The headbooker he thought he was Theodore Roosevelt and he tried to put it all over me. What worried him was that I'd forgot more about bookkeeping than he ever knew. I stood it as long as I could. He ordered me to keep the books wrong and him and I had a set-to about it. I'd a-gone to the boss, but he was away at the time, so I simply wrote him a letter and said I wouldn't come back until that louse was kicked out. I don't think I'd go back, though, even if I was sent for."

"Which you won't be," I observed.

"I reckon not," he said. "I don't give a ———! I ain't a-going to stay where I ain't comfortable. The thing is, do you know of anything open?"

"No, Bob, I don't," I answered, "but I'll keep looking and if I find anything I'll let you know."

This same thing has happened to me almost exactly at least four or five times before. I've helped that fellow get job after job. Good jobs, too. But though he's a mighty clever fellow and knows the grocery business thoroughly, he never holds jobs any time. It's always something. Either he can't get along with the other employees or with the bosses, or the business ain't run to suit him.

Bob is a type of employee that's his own worst enemy. Without meaning to be at all, he's a mischief-maker. A trouble-maker.

I got him a job once with one of the big Philadelphia chain-store concerns. He was a clerk in one of the branch stores, and he had a good future before him. I told him at the time there was no reason why he couldn't get to be store manager, and so on up to superintendent.

So he could, too, if he only had been willing to butt out of other people's business.

The manager of Bob's store was one of these sporty boys. He had a family, but it wasn't any secret, I believe, that he hung around with another woman.

This woman used to come around to the store occasionally, and of course all the clerks knew about her. Though it wasn't any of his business, Bob got exceedingly nasty about her. Snubbed her one day in the store, when the manager had gone out for a minute, and of course she told on him. The manager sat down on Bob fearfully and what did the chump do then but go to the district superintendent, or whatever the next highest official was, and raise an awful time. It came to a choice between firing Bob or the manager, and the manager had the bigger pull, so he stayed.

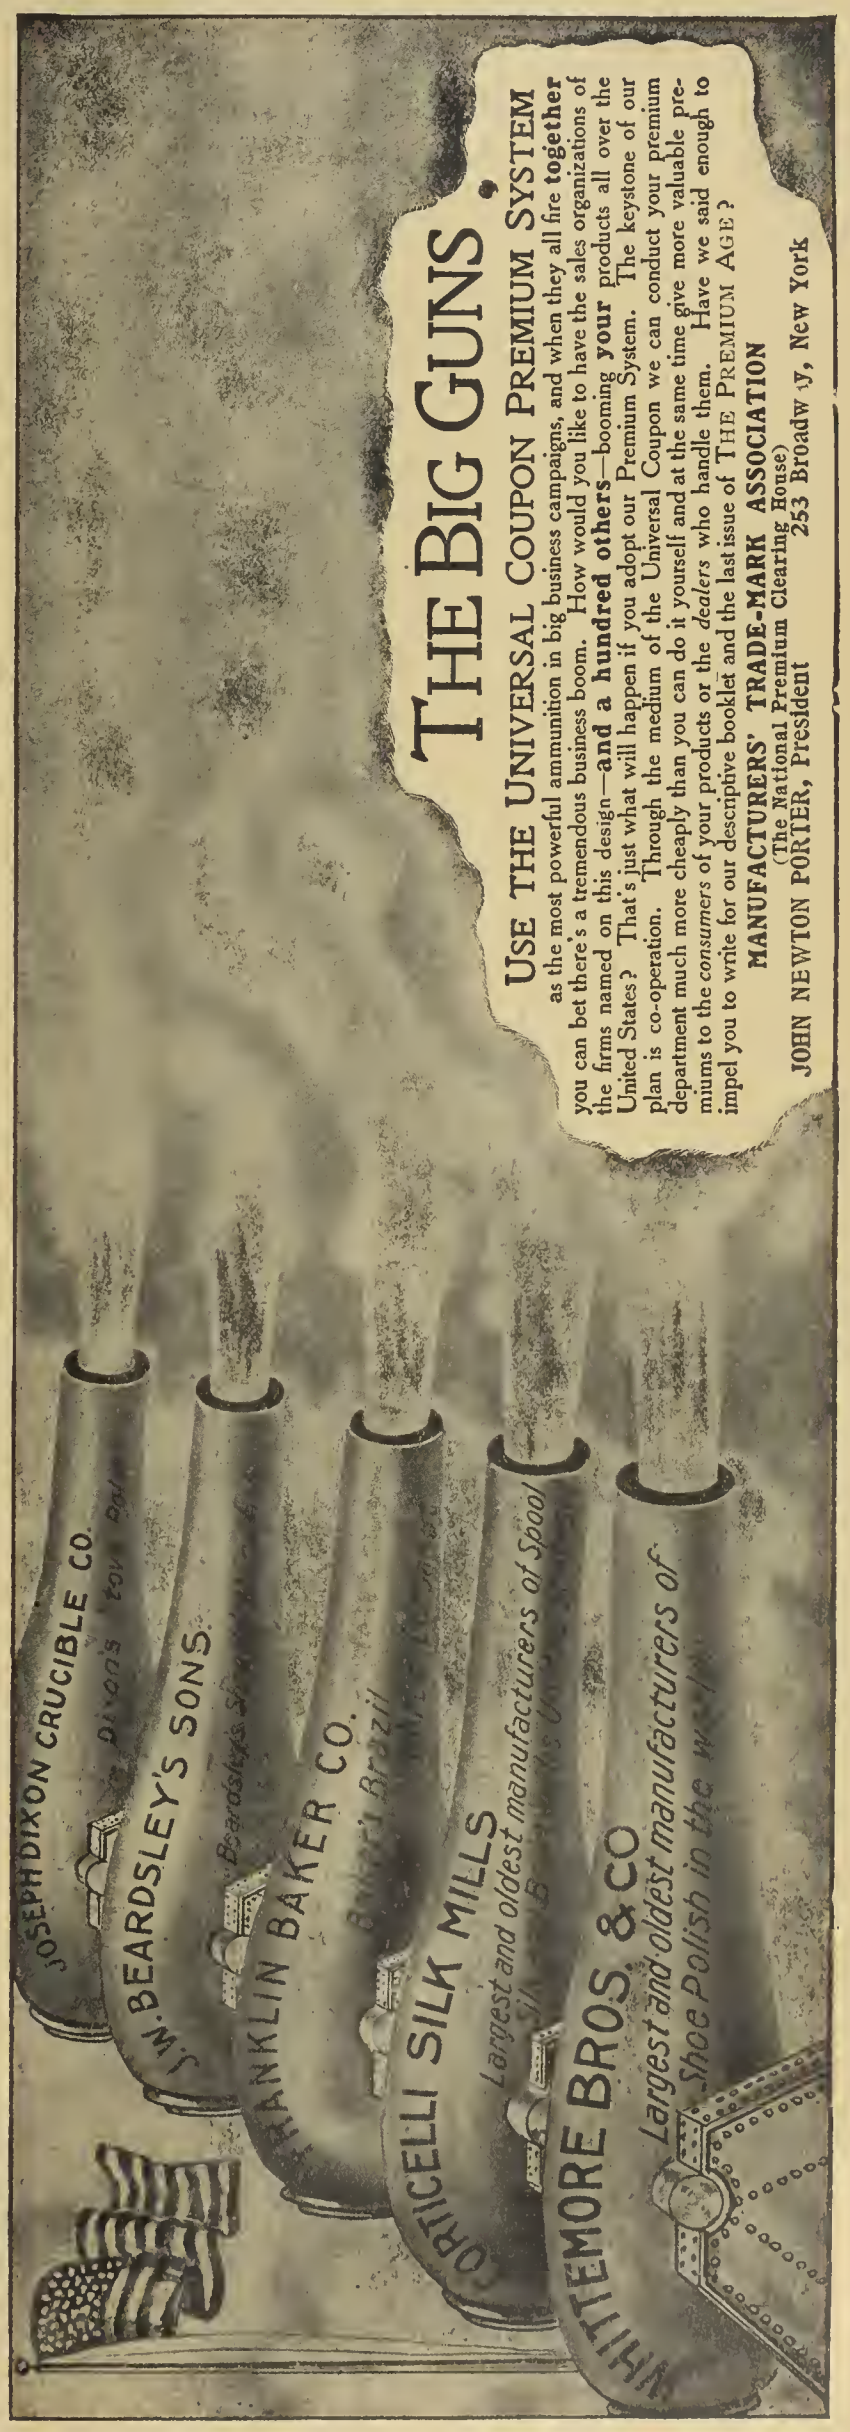
Bob came to me in an awful state. "Only did his duty!" "Fired for doing the right thing!" and all that sort of guff.

"But how in thunder was it your business," I demanded.

"It's my business because a dog like that ought to be shown up!" he said.

"Sure he ought!" I said, "but who appointed you to do it? He wasn't interfering with you, was he? Were you hired as a clerk or as a spy?"

"Well, he had no business to have his old tads coming around the store!" said Bob.



"Old man," I said—this was the second time he had lost a good job through butting in—"you've got to learn to mind your own business. You'll never get anywhere in the world if you don't."

Another time I got him a job as clerk in a regular retail store. It was a good-sized place and used a lot of people. Bob was in the wrapping and shipping department, and he had a good chance to get ahead there, too.

He lost that in three weeks. As usual he came straight to me with his tale of woe.

"What now?" I said as he came in.

"I've left ———'s," he said.

"I'm not surprised," I said dryly, "whose business did you butt into this time?"

"Didn't butt into anybody," he said. "A fellow simply tried to soldier on me and I wouldn't stand for it, that's all."

"Soldier on you?" I repeated.

"Yes," he said, "one of the fellows in the department there was the biggest loafer I ever saw. He could work more schemes to get out of his share of the work than anybody I ever saw! He worked right next to me and I stood it as long as I could. Then he and I had it. He called me an s. b. and I smashed him."

"Following which," I observed, "you were of course fired."

"Would you let a man call you that?" he demanded belligerently.

"Not if I could help it," I said, "but I wouldn't provoke him into doing it in the first place. I want you to tell me how it became your business how this fellow worked."

"For two reasons," he said (he had his defense all prepared this time). "I've got to protect my employer's interests, ain't I? And besides that, didn't it leave more work for the rest of us to do when that fellow shysted out of his share?"

"Of course it's your business to protect your employer's interests," I said, "but not in that way. You protect his interests by giving a decent day's work for your day's wages and not in spying on his other employees. It's his business to see if his people are working and not yours, unless you're hired for that purpose. You simply butted in again, that's all, just as you've done before. And his loafing didn't make you more work, either, for all you're there to do is a fair day's work, which you'd do anyway whether the other men worked or not."

"Well, I wasn't going to let him call me an s. b.," he reiterated weakly.

There's an awful lot of fellows just like Bob. One of the times when he got fired I went to his boss to see if I couldn't get him back.

The employer shook his head. "I wouldn't take him back if he'd work for nothing," he said. "Bob's a good clever boy and he can do anything in the grocery business, but nobody can tell him anything. He always knows it all, and his way is always better than anybody else's. And unless everybody else in the place does their work exactly the way Bob thinks it ought to be done, there's trouble. I never was so glad to be rid of a man in my life."

That's Bob. Ain't it a shame when a man's created such a dadburned fool?

ASSOCIATION NEWS

New Orleans, La.

The question of the present volume of high prices obtaining on almost all articles of food, especially those handled in the local retail grocery stores, was gone into with considerable detail at the last meeting of the New Orleans (La.) Retail Grocers' Association. It was shown that the grocers can in no way be held responsible for the advance in prices, which, it was stated, have been brought about by the manufacturers and the producers of the raw material.

"Three years back numerous articles sold by retail grocers for 10 cents were purchased at from 80 to 90 cents per dozen, netting a splendid profit and offsetting the loss on some articles which sold for cost or nearly cost," said President T. C. King, of the Retail Grocers' Association.

"Standard brands of domestic peas are bringing $1 to $1.05 per dozen, and yet the retail price remains the same."

Among other things Mr. King pointed out that French sardines, which sold at the beginning of last season at $15.50 per case, were retailed at 20 cents per can, but the same goods have advanced in price and are now bringing $19 to $20 per case, or nearly 25 per cent. advance in the wholesale price. Candles have advanced 2 cents per pound, Mr. King said, and hundreds of other articles could be mentioned to show how goods have increased in price to the retailers. Standard California peaches, for instance, which formerly sold at $1.80 per dozen, bring $2.25, and jams have gone up 15 cents per dozen within the past year.

Mr. King attributes the present high prices which the producer is getting for raw materials to the increased cost of labor. A great many retail grocers in the city, he declared, have not advanced their prices and are still asking the same for their goods as when they were from 10 to 25 per cent. lower than they are at present. The retail prices have been increased, he observed, because the jobbers are asking more money for their goods, and consequently the retail merchants have to make a profit in order to remain in the business. When the wholesale figures are reduced the retail price is also cut down in proportion, but as long as the manufacturers continue advancing their prices the retailers will have to do the same thing.

Status of Soaked Vegetables.

————, Pa., Oct. 19, 1907.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—Will the retailer or jobber have to relabel or in any way mark goods of the following on hand and on shelves bought and still unsold of the pack of 1906 or previous: Canned succotash with soaked lima beans, imported or domestic sardines (imported of the "Boat Race" or other brands, domestic ¼ oils and ¾ mustards), lima beans in cans called lima beans, but canned from dried limas?

Thanking you in advance for your kindness, we are,

Yours truly,

D.

The United States Department of Agriculture has ruled that under the Federal food law when soaked vegetables are canned they must be labeled soaked. There is no such regulation in Pennsylvania, though the Federal regulations are followed here wherever practicable. The writer's opinion, however, is that such a regulation could not be enforced, either under the State or Federal regulations. Soaked lima beans are none the less lima beans because they have been soaked, and a man who canned them and sold them canned as lima beans is not misrepresenting the character of the goods to the slightest degree, and in the writer's judgment could not be successfully prosecuted.

News of a Gold Mining Company.

Bridgeton, N. J., Oct. 22, 1907.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—Can you give me any information about the New Midway Gold Mining Co.? Some time ago I bought 100 shares at 40 cents per share. At that time it was a non-assessable company, but since it has been changed to an assessable company and I have paid $4 in four different assessments. Now, I have received this circular and I want to know if the thing is straight and if it is worth anything. I think the office is on Chestnut street. Any light that you can give me will be greatly appreciated by a subscriber to the "Grocery World."

Yours truly,

ELI T. ROBBINS.

The "Grocery World" knows nothing of the "New Midway Gold Mining Co.," the property of which, according to a circular which Mr. Robbins incloses, is about to be sold at judicial sale for the payment of its debts. It can be unqualifiedly said, however, that ninety-nine per cent. of these gold mining schemes are fakes. Any grocer who puts money into any of them is foolish in the extreme.

No non-assessable company can be changed to an assessment company without the consent of the stockholders, and any stockholder who bought full-paid and non-assessable stock cannot be compelled to pay one cent's worth of assessments.

Famous German Chemist Says American Sulphured Fruits are Harmless.

Prof. Hofman, of the German University of Liepsig, in a written statement declares American sulphured dried fruits to be absolutely harmless. The decision was rendered in the case of a German fruit dealer handling California apricots. The opinion is in part as follows:—

Farnsteiner has proven that the so-called American fruit, either raw or cooked, contains a combination of sulphurous acid with organic substances (sugar). That these combinations when united have an entirely different relation and an entirely different effect on the body than have the sulphurous acid and the common sulphite is proven by experiment. These fruits contain no or only small traces of free sulphurous acid.

From general medical considerations it can be accepted as certain that this combination, if not consumed in excessively large quantities, but in the usual quantities in which dried fruits are eaten, is absorbed by the blood, the same as other easily dissolved varieties of sugar, and is soon absorbed and oxidized in the body in an entirely unharmful way.

It is to be considered that sulphured fruits are rarely eaten raw, and then only in limited quantities, and that when cooked they swell up to two or three times their former volume, and therefore even in this condition are consumed in limited quantities only and not daily.

The undersigned is therefore unable on the strength of his medical experience to find any reasonable proofs that the consumption of California apricots sold by defendant containing 0.152 per cent. and 0.176 per cent., respectively, of sulphurous acid have been in any way injurious to health or even could be so.

On the other hand, it is possible to prove that sulphurous acid in the united combination as same exists in dried fruits, even in much larger quantities, and even if consumed daily, can be taken without the perception of any injury to health whatever.

The first man to whom we sold books, fourteen years ago, still uses them. Forbes' coupon books. See advertisement.

Your Holiday Profits

Holiday profits are fancy; but they're not as big as they CAN be if your costs are too high; or if you buy where your re-orders can't be filled.

May be you can get SOME holiday items lower than we quote. It will take comparison of prices and qualities to satisfy you on that point.

But not even comparison is necessary to be sure of our unapproached ability to fill re-orders.

Because with our catalogue we can cover the country in a period impossibly short for men—we can carry our immense holiday stocks COMPLETE long after the smaller lines are hopelessly broken.

We show everything in Our Just-out Santa Claus Catalogue.

And with it comparison is easy—in your own store, where the sole influence will be your own desire to make your own holiday profits as big as possible.

Shall we send YOU that Santa Claus Catalogue—D639?

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

An Express Wagon Display.

Several ways to use an express wagon in window display:—

First, to advertise your delivery of goods by fixing a wagon to represent an automobile. The wagon can be had free with one box of Eavenson's washing powder, or Ivins' cakes. Take a round stick (broom handle) and fasten wheel to end, which can be made out of a hoop, covering it with dark material, giving it the appearance of the steering wheel to an automobile. Select nice delivery boxes, fill same with groceries, such bottles and packages as are usually sent out with orders. Place a few boxes to side of window and a few in the wagon. Have sign in window to read thus:—

> Give Us Your Order.
> We Deliver Promptly.

Second, take the express wagon and fill same with your leading brands of corn, peas and tomatoes, using one brand for the entire window. Have three pyramids to the rear of window, one of corn, one of peas and one of tomatoes. Then have a sign to read thus:—

> Try Our Battleship Brand of Corn, Tomatoes and Peas. They Must Be Good; We Are Getting Loads of Orders for Them.

Third, to have a rebus display, using the canned goods to rear of window, the express wagon repre senting automobile. Then have card in window reading thus:—

> In the ——— We Will ——— > Our Orders Promptly.

Leave two or more words blan and give a doll to the person wh will be the first to fill out blan properly.

Give a trial with every purchas of canned goods in display, but sa the customer must bring a slip filled out when purchase is made so as not to take up any time. Have another card in window stating that you wish to advertise one line of your business and the display in the window represents the words to be supplied in the above ad., and the first one filling in the proper words will receive a doll (which should be on display).

Every purchaser of a can of goods to rear of window is entitled to a chance, but slips must be brought ready filled out when purchase is made.

You will find most persons to supply these words, "In the automobile we will deliver our orders promptly," while it should be "In the future we will deliver our orders promptly."

The canned goods represents the word "future," being bought as futures and just arriving at this season, the wagon representing the word deliver.

The McKeesport Merchants' Association held its annual meeting last week in the Chamber of Commerce Hall. It was a large and enthusiastic meeting of representative business men. President J. D. O'Neil presided. The merchants were entertained by vaudeville artists from the Altmayer Theatre. Charles Campbell was chairman of the Entertainment Committee. J. K. Skelly reported favorably on the poultry show project, and it was agreed that the rules be suspended and merchants be permitted to offer prizes for the various events if they so desired. Grievances regarding the Bell Telephone Co., which is demanding advanced payment of rentals at McKeesport, was a fruitful subject for discussion. J. Booker Ayres talked on "Boosting McKeesport." His remarks were greeted with applause. W. C. Cronemeyer, president of the Chamber of Commerce; R. E. Stone, J. W. Borland, J. K. Skelley also spoke. Election of officers resulted in the following selection: President, J. D. O'Neil, re-elected; first vice-president, J. W. Borland; second vice-president, R. E. Stone; secretary, Edward Haber; treasurer, F. O. Reed. An excellent luncheon was served. Another meeting will be held within the next week for definite action on the telephone situation.

As to the amended bill in the suits began by W. H. Arbour against the Pittsburg Produce Trade Association and its members, Attorney Anderson says the amended bill makes this suit national in scope and is literally a suit which involves all the produce companies and associations from the Atlantic to the Pacific who do business in the Pittsburg market. It is designed to stop the practice of these powerful combinations and prohibit them from carrying on a practice which practically amounts to a monopoly. These great fruit and produce shippers consign their goods to themselves, and although the goods arrive at their destinations, it is still owned by the shipper until released by wire when the price is fixed through a few telegrams sent to the different trade centres.

Chestnuts are extremely high—$12 per bushel. This is the highest price on record, and is caused by the scarcity. A few cold storage chestnuts held over from last year command $7, but they have practically no flavor whatever. The large cultivated nuts bring only $6. The curtailment of consumption will probably cause a decline in the price.

ies. The following circular, setting forth the objects of the new concern, has just been issued:—

The Salt Lake Co-operative Association is organized for the purpose of transacting a general mercantile and manufacturing business in Salt Lake City, Utah, but in accordance with the articles of incorporation, may be extended to any city, county or state. It is proposed at the outset to carry groceries, meats, fruits, vegetables, butter, eggs, etc., to be found in a first-class grocery and market.

The capital stock is $50,000, divided into 50,000 shares at a par value of $1 each, no person being allowed to hold more than 100 or less than five shares, the purpose and intent of the organization being that it shall always be a co-operative association, and to this end that its stock control thereof shall not be consolidated into the hands of a few, to the detriment of any stockholder, or otherwise; and further, with the intent and purpose that the stock shall always remain in small blocks in the hands of a large number of stockholders.

From present indications the association will be able to start with at least 500 subscribers, which, without doubt, will be doubled as soon as sufficient time has elapsed to demonstrate to the public what our association will do for its members.

"You're in business." In the first stage of it—remember that. Certainly you do not have to pay the bills, but that isn't the point.

You're in business and you can make a fizzle of it or you can make a success of it. It depends on how much hard work and how much earnestness and concentration you put into your duties. There is a whole lot of fellows that don't think enough. If you want to be in the second and third and tenth stage you'll have to study. And if you want to be a manager you'll have to know things.

TO-DAY.

To-day is grand, whether it rains or snows or blows. It's your day and our day. Make it count. Make it earn you something besides your pay. To-morrow will be too late. Learn some one thing to-day.

Get a bit of useful knowledge about your business and put it away with the fact you found out yesterday. Get two or three "bits" and put them away. Recall them to-night. Some day we may want you to begin putting them into daily use.

FALL THINGS.

The days for morning griddle cakes are here again. Push "our own" buckwheat. Mention the popular pancake preparations and the different syrups. You noticed our 100-case shipment of Karo a few weeks ago. Let us turn a lot of it into money this week.

There's a fairly good percentage in the genuine New Orleans molasses at 20 cents a quart jar. Get your farmer customer interested in it by the gallon at 60 cents.

It's these timely suggestions that count. If there's no response to them to-day there may be to-morrow. Anyway keep out of the rut.

"You're in business."

Valuable Secret Was Made Public.

In the household arts department of the State fair yesterday afternoon, Miss Sadie Abrams, of 714 East Clay street, won five blue ribbons or first prizes for her five cakes, which she had in a large competitive exhibit. The cakes were not only well mounted, but were delicious to the taste.

For some time Miss Abrams has been making cakes that were the favorites of customers of the Woman's Exchange, and she has carefully guarded her receipts until yesterday, when she surrounded each of her cakes with lemons, signifying the name of the ingredient to which the maker attributed the excellence of her cakes.

As everyone knows, lemons are sour, and Miss Abrams admitted that the great secret of her success is in using Sauer's flavoring extracts in all her pastries and confections. — Richmond, Va., "News Leader."

What's in a Name?

We'll tell you. We have picked out the name Apelpi for our Evaporated Apples, so that every time it is thought of particular people will think of the finest fruit of this kind ever put on the market.

We have adopted the sentence, "The bottom as good as the top," because that is unusual with evaporated apples, and we pride ourselves on the fact that it applies to ours. Put them in, and your troubles in this direction are over.

GET THE Butter Burden Off Your Mind

No retail grocer, except he who has had a lot to do with butter, has the time or the experience to properly judge butter.

It ought to be a comfort and relief to a grocer when he can get rid of the responsibility of having to inspect it, when he can buy under conditions which assure him positively that the butter is all right and needs no inspecting.

He can buy Gurnse Butter exactly that way, for it is doubly and trebly inspected—finally by the inspector of the Philadelphia Produce Exchange. We know every pound of Gurnse Butter is all right. You can rely on it absolutely and give it to your customer with the utmost confidence.

Ritter's Guaranty

In compliance with the rules and regulations for the enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act published by the Commission appointed for this purpose, we have filed a guaranty covering all our products with the Agricultural Department in Washington under the serial number 1017.

In the future all our products will be labeled in accordance with Regulation Nine as follows: Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906, No. 1017.

This guaranty is sufficient and covers every sale we make and no individual guaranties are necessary.

It has always been our aim to manufacture pure and wholesome food, to comply with existing laws and to protect all who buy our products, and we shall carry out this principle in the future.

We hope to deserve your continued confidence and patronage.

Money Thrown Away

Many merchants are positively throwing away money in the handling of their ACCOUNTS!

It is only a little each day and they do not notice it; it's like a little LEAK from a barrel, just a drop at a time, but if it is not stopped the barrel will soon run dry.

STOP THE LEAKS!

They amount to a great many dollars in the course of a year.

DOING USELESS WORK is a LEAK.

FORGETTING TO CHARGE GOOODS is a LEAK.

Errors and disputes cause Loss of Trade.

LOSS OF TRADE is a LEAK.

THE McCASKEY ACCOUNT REGISTER handles ALL YOUR ACCOUNTS with only ONE WRITING, showing EVERY DETAIL of the business.

Then why spend your time in copying and posting.

INVESTIGATE the GREATEST LABOR-SAVING, MONEY-MAKING device ever invented for the retail merchant.

How to Make Other Cocoas as Good as Ours

Take the average cocoa on the market and carry it through another process or two, and you may have an article about as good as Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa.

The trouble is that other manufacturers will not use that "other process or two," because of its cost. They prefer to send out their product half made, as it were—containing indigestible and ill-tasting ingredients which should have been eliminated—so that they can save a little on the cost of making.

Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa has everything taken out that should be taken out, and for that reason, among others, it has the smoothest, finest flavor of any cocoa made.

Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

It Is Spelled R-A-M-L-Y

If you want to sell a really delightful smoke, get the real Ramly, don't take something gotten up to look like the Ramly, because there the similarity ends.

No cigarette ever made has jumped into such immediate popularity. It has become famous on its quality alone.

If you put Ramly Cigarettes in stock you will be assured of the permanent patronage of every man to whom you sell a package.

Don't get confused on the name—it is spelled R-A-M-L-Y.

You May Think You Can't Afford an Automobile in Your Business, but, as a Matter of Fact, You Can't Afford NOT To Have One

A Rapid Motor Truck or Delivery Wagon will do more work than two teams at half the cost. If you can deliver twice as many goods at half your present expense with one of our machines, are you not making a mistake to stick to horses and wagons. Do you know that the trolleys don't cost as much to run as the horse cars? We are certain you know they do much better work.

Get our catalogue and we will show you the Twentieth Century method of delivering goods.

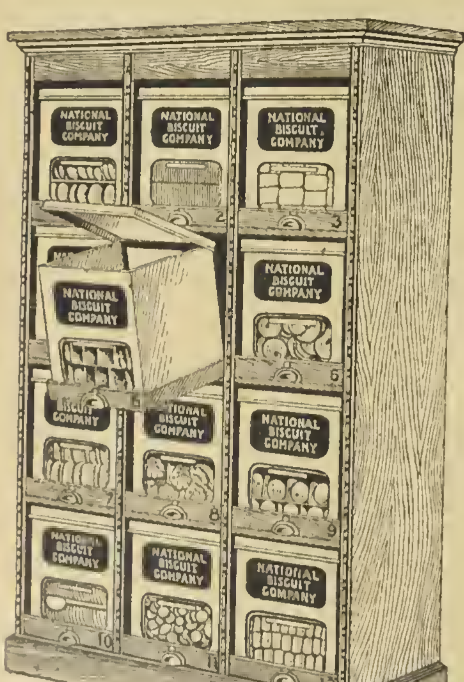
How to Make Your Cake Trade Pay



The easiest, cheapest and simplest way to make your cake trade pay a decent profit is to put in a DURHAM DISPLAY CAKE CABINET.

This cabinet is the most useful store fixture ever introduced to the trade. It prevents your most serious losses—those caused by sampling and breakage.

The saving on these items alone will soon pay for the cabinet.

It is made of highly polished oak, in sizes to hold 12, 16, 20 and 24 cans of standard size. It is light in weight and so arranged that the cans rest upon elevated roller trays, easy to slide in and out, and as each can is numbered you save time and labor in taking and filling orders.

Send for full particulars and prices.

Are There Any Black Shoes in Your Town?

Here are four more specialties from our list. Every one is guaranteed. Every oue will suit. Every one will bring repeat orders.
Three are for black shoes and one for white shoes.

BOSSOLA

This is a great seller—"Bossola"—a fine waterproof polish. For men's, women's or children's shoes. It blacks, softens and polishes leather, and the shine lasts phenomenally—that is the point about Bossola. The shine from this polish comes up instantly.

5c. size, gross $4.50
10c. size, gross $9.00

BOSTON WATERPROOF POLISH

This is a black liquid polish for men's and boys' shoes. A perfectly harmless preparation that gives a high patent leather polish without brushing. Brilliant and waterproof. Shine an old shoe with this, put it in your window aud see it sell.

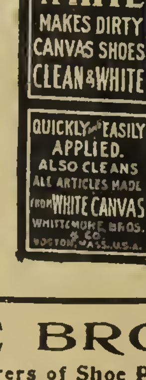
Per gross, $24.00
10c. size, gross $10.00

THE ELITE COMBINATION

For black shoes. Paste and liquid in one package. This is the only polish that the manufacturers of box calf indorse. Why? Because it contains oil and nourishes leather like food. Both a preservative and polish.

Per gross $24.00
10c. size, gross $10.00

DIRTY CANVAS SHOES



made perfectly clean and white by using our "Quick White" Compound. In liquid form, so it can be quickly and easily applied. No dust comes from it. It won't rub off nor injure the fabric. Our guarantee that it is just as we represent it means that you send it back if it isn't. For 1907 a sponge in every bottle, so always ready for use.

Large size, per gross $24.00
10c. size, per gross $10.00

"Is This What I Made?"

If the cook who invented Baked Beans with tomato sauce were to come back and open up some of the cans labeled Baked Beans he would go gladly back to oblivion.

For "Baked Beans" doesn't always mean baked beans any more. In most cases it means beans boiled or steamed, dampened with a little cheap catsup and packed. The result is an attempted fraud on the palate of him who knows the real thing.

L. & S. Baked Beans are really baked in the good new way. We guarantee that absolutely. Baking makes the bean over. Instead of swelling and mushing it up like steaming or boiling, it leaves it just as firm but mealy and melting.

And our tomato sauce is tomato sauce made by an expert.

Has Our Advertising Failed?

Have our advertisements about German-American Coffee convinced you at all? Have they given you even the slighest impulse to learn more about these unusual coffees?

You must admit we're pretty enthusiastic about German-American Coffees; don't you feel as if there must be some pretty good cause? At any rate, give us the benefit of the doubt, and get in touch with us. If we don't convince you that German-American Coffees will liven up your coffee department, you don't have to buy.

Grown on the Triunfo Plantations of Central America, and quite unlike any other coffee.

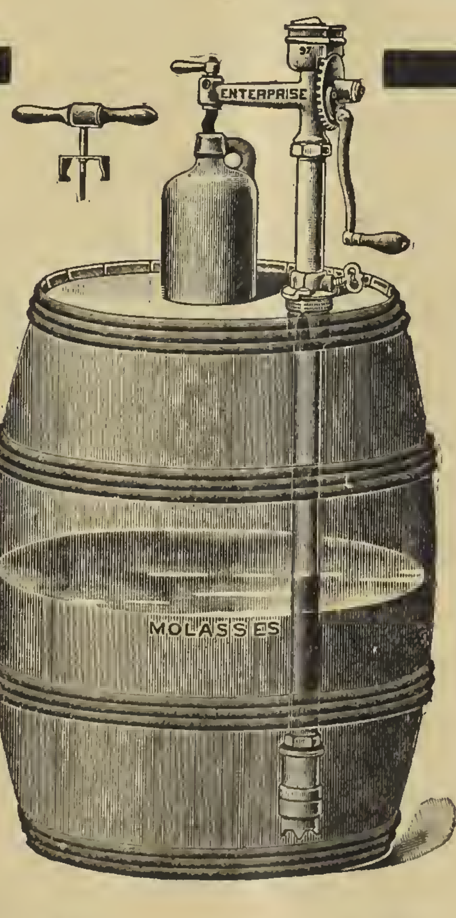
With New Total Registering Device



SELF-PRIMING and MEASURING PUMP

The saving of time will doubly pay for it.

The convenience alone will make it worth all it costs.

It is cleaner, as it dispenses with the use of measures and the consequent absence of flies and dirt.

Accurately measures molasses, heavy oils, tar and other thick liquids. Has total registering device showing when stock is low in barrel.

No. 97 Pump costs $6.00; Auger, 75 cents; Extension Tube 50 cents a foot.

Have You Said This?

"You couldn't hire me to sell Ariosa Coffee because I can sell my own package coffee!"

But look what the sale of your own package coffee loses for you. It loses the advantage of the advertising we are doing to your customers, all of which helps actively to sell Ariosa. It loses the selling force of the fact that every man, woman and child in your town has heard of Ariosa and knows what it is.

And it loses the vouchers that come to you with Ariosa; vouchers, that if you will work hand in hand with us, will bring you several hundred dollars of merchandise every year gratuitously.

"As Good As I Bought Last Time"

You ought to sell Swift's PREMIUM Hams for your own protection. Can you satisfy your trade unless your hams are uniform? And can they be uniform unless bought from a packer who can keep his raw material uniform?

Few packers have our facilities for keeping hams up to a given standard year after year. Swift's PREMIUM Hams scarcely vary a hair's breadth from one year's end to another. That does us a whole lot of good, as it will do you.

The woman who can always depend on getting good ham—"as good as I bought last time"—is going to buy lots of ham.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES
—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

Walker Patent Pivoted Bin Co.
Offices and Showrooms 18 to 24 S. Seventh St.
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

"As Good as the 'J. M.'"

No delivery wagon built is as good as the "J. M.," though many are said to be. The makers of other wagons do the best they can, but they haven't our facilities.

The "J. M." wagon is the handsomest, longest-lived delivery wagon on the market. No other wagon manufacturer we ever knew rejected everything but second-growth hickory for wheels, as we do.

Write for our catalogue.

"Do You Know Your Grocer?"

Woman's Paper Begins Series of Articles Designed to Make Consumers Dissatisfied With Their Grocers. Insinuate That Grocers Put in Telephones So As to Keep Customers Away From Their Stores. Charges Average Store Is Unclean.

The editor of the "Woman's Home Companion," a woman's paper with a circulation of several hundred thousand, sends the "Grocery World" a number of proof clippings of an article which appears in the November number. The article seemed interesting enough to warrant the reading of all of it, so the writer expended a dime and got a copy. The article is the first of a series apparently designed to make consumers more dissatisfied with their grocers. The November article is headed "Do you know your grocer?" It fills an entire page of the magazine, and naturally cannot be reproduced in full. The "Grocery World" does, however, reproduce about half of it for the delighted perusal of the grocers whose customers may read the "Woman's Home Companion."

Grocers are perfcetly willing that their women customers shall never know them any better. For grocers, like other mortals, do not always improve on more intimate acquaintance. For instance, if you should come to know your grocer very well indeed you might find out that he does not keep his store half as clean as you keep your kitchen. Back of the door, leading into the lavatory where his clerks wash, you might find a towel that you would blush to own as a dish rag or a mop. You might learn that the delivery boy who has just been letting his horse eat sugar out of his hand is using that same hand to dig prunes out of a box to fill your order. You might know that the creamery butter, with its crisp white wrapping and stamp that stands for pure production, is kept in a cooler or refrigerator which is absolutely slimy within, though mirrored and white enameled without. You might ascertain that the lid from the cracker barrel has been lost and never replaced, though the store floor is swept vigorously night and morning, and the dust rises and falls again in one great germ-laden cloud.

These are a few, a very few, of the intimate details of his business life which your obliging grocer does not wish you to know. And that is why he sends a solicitor to your kitchen door every morning, why he assures you that your children will be served as honestly and promptly as yourself, and why he is highly elated when you put in a telephone and join his list of telephone customers.

The telephone and the order clerk or solicitor have probably done more to kill the housewifely instinct in women and further the ends of careless or unscrupulous grocers than any other labor-saving household institution of the century. Even the most competent of housekeepers can always find one thing more to do at home—and when the solicitor takes such a friendly interest in her needs and what her family likes, or the telephone can be used without changing from the house frock to a street suit, she is very apt to drop the habit of marketing. A New York grocer established one year in a new and prosperous residence district thus summed up his trade:—

"We must make special appeal for the telephone and solicit trade, because our store and staff of clerks is not large enough to accommodate customers if they called every day to market. Two-thirds of our trade is secured either by telephone or by soliciting, and the women never come to the store except when they happen to be passing on some other errand, or when there is some mistake in the bill. Yet it takes half our clerks to wait on the remaining one-third of the trade—women who come here every day, and who waste our time picking over goods, changing their minds, waiting for change, deciding between this brand and that."

"Then you do not care for the woman who wants to see what she buys for her family to eat?"

The man had a saving sense of humor, and replied:—

"I can't say that we really care for her—but I don't mind adding that we respect her."

For several days the writer watched that store. The grocer spoke the truth. While half the clerks filled orders for two-thirds of the customers, which came in through solicitors or by telephone, the other half waited on the one-third or remaining customers in the store. In the latter class were precisely the same women day after day, and very few of these women were deeply interested in the quality, of the goods purchased. They ordered in absent-minded fashion, as if waiting to meet some fellow-shopper. They conversed with the pretty cashier while the clerk filled the order which they were not watching. If they offered any criticism, it was on an overcharge, but not one of them noticed that a young man with extremely dirty hands lifted dill pickles from an open barrel without the aid or consent of fork, dipper or any other utensil.

There are twelve thousand retail grocery stores in Greater New York and its suburbs. One third of their patrons or less know their grocer.

In a lovely, old-fashioned section of Washington the writer met a veritable aristocrat, attened by her colored servant, on marketing bound.

"I come way over here to get my groceries because it is an old-fashioned store. In the new stores they think it a waste of time to attend to the needs of a fussy old housekeeper like me. They all want to fill telephone orders."

She is one of the few women who still insist upon knowing their grocers.

In Grand Island, Nebraska there are twelve groceries to twelve thousand inhabitants, or about one grocer to every thousand citizens. In addition, the local grocers have the trade of the surrounding farming districts. A successful grocer of that city told the writer that half his trade was secured by telephone and one-third by soliciting. That means that three-sixths of his orders come by telephone and two-sixths by solicitors, which leaves exactly one-sixth to come direct from customer to grocer.

One sixth of his patrons really know their grocer.

When shopping for a new frock, a carpet, enameled cooking ware, gloves, a veil, a book, or a picture the average woman goes to the store that is immaculate, where goods are fresh and unmarred by soiled hands, and whose clerks are dainty in handling the wares. She refuses shop-worn drygoods and house furnishings, but she will accept groceries that have been subjected to flies and dust and handled by clerks whose hands and aprons are disgustingly unsanitary. This is due largely to a fallacious belief that a grocery store cannot be kept clean.

When you have decided to become thoroughly acquainted with the grocer behind his counter, and with his store methods, you will know whether his cooler or refrigerator is sweet and clean or slimy with germs; whether he covers his bins or leaves them open for the entrance of dust, bugs and kittens; whether he has sanitary dippers for bulk pickles, fish, jellies, preserves, etc.; whether his clerks have clean towels and running water at their command; whether the boy who fills your order for butter, sugar, flour, tea and crackers is wearing the same checkered jumper that he had on when he carried his delivery horse; whether the wooden trays and pastebard bags used for sending out lard, pickles, salads, butter, oysters, etc., are kept where they are free from dust—in fact, whether your grocer is spending any money at all in the interest of common decency, cleanliness and sanitation.

Two New Pennsylvania State Food Rules.

Dairy and Food Department Issues Third Supplement to Rules and Regulations. Department Will Not Approve Labels. Use of Benzoate Conditionally Permitted During Present Season.

During the past week the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department has issued another supplement to the rules and regulations recently issued for the enforcement of the State law. The supplement includes Rules 12 and 13, the first of which declines to approve food labels, and the second of which grants permission to use benzoate of soda in goods of this season's pack under certain restrictions. The full text of the new rules is as follows:—

Rule 12, LABELS. Rule 13, SODIUM BENZOATE and BENZOIC ACID.

Rule 12. Numerous requests are referred to this division for the approval of labels to be used in connection with food products under the Pennsylvania Pure Food Act of June 1, 1907. This act does not authorize the Dairy and Food Commissioner, nor any agent of the division, to approve labels. The division, therefore, will not give its approval to any label. Any printed matter upon the label implying that this division has approved it will be without warrant. It is believed that with the law and regulations before the manufacturers they will have no difficulty in arranging labels in conformity with the requirements set forth.

Rule 13. No prosecutions will be based upon the manufacture, sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, foods and food products manufactured or packed during the season of 1907 which contains sodium benzoate in quantities not exceeding one-tenth of 1 per cent., or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, provided sodium benzoate or benzoic acid has hitherto been generally used in such foods and food products; and provided further, that sodium benzoate or benzoic acid is not used in connection with coal-tar dyes or any foreign coloring matter.

The label of each package of food or food products containing sodium benzoate or benzoic acid shall bear a statement that the food contains one-tenth of 1 per cent. of sodium benzoate, or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, as the case may be.

JAMES FOUST,
Dairy and Food Commissioner.

TRADEMARK REGISTRATION

The merchants of Cannonsburg had a pleasant banquet on October 22d which was attended by about fifty merchants. President J. C. Neill presided. Guests of the association were Organizer E. J. Spangler, of Pittsburg; H. G. Lincoln, secretary, Washington; B. F. Paul, a member of the Washington organization. The latter read a practical paper on the subject: "Are we doing all we can to become our own masters?" Secretary H. G. Lincoln addressed the meeting, dwelling largely on co-operation. I. B. Linn, agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad at Cannonsburg, explained the policy of the company he represents. Among others who spoke were Secretary George H. B. Freeby, C. C. Johnson, J. A. Hilfinger, W. J. Elliott and Wm. Edwards.

The Committee on Arrangements were James M. Collins, George H. B. Freeby and M. Eagan.

The Nazareth Association has fixed its dues at 50 cents per month.

The Scottdale Association has not been holding any meetings for some time, but is expected to reorganize on a new plan. The present officers are M. B. Porter, president; O. D. Weimer, vice-president; M. A. McCombs, treasurer and R. M. Young, secretary.

A. M. Howes,
State Secretary.

The first few new Florida tomatoes reached Northern markets, and proved to be in poor condition. The price ranged from $1.50 to $2, and the demand was only limited. A few Jersey goods are still about, more or less good, and ranging from 30 to 75 cents per basket.

Why Mild Coffees Are and Will Be Higher

Philadelphia Coffee Man Notes Recent Advances in Washed Coffee and Says It Is Partly Due to Coming Short Crop and Heavy Spot Buying. Further Advance Likely Unless Conditions Change.

The market for mild coffees during the past thirty days has shown a very rapid advance, particularly for coffees of the Lavado or washed character. Maracaibo, Caracas, Bogota, Costa Rica, Guatemala and Mexicans have all advanced materially, Bogotas showing the greatest advance.

At this season of the year the price for these coffees generally hardens, but this year, owing to the rapid advance in Java, coupled with the report that the next crop of milds will be very much smaller, the advance has been much more radical than for several years. Europe has taken a larger quantity than usual and large interests in New York have been very large buyers of spot supplies.

Those familiar with the conditions prevailing in the countries where these coffees are grown have looked for an advance in prices. The cost of production is much greater than in Brazil, the one item of transportation from the plantation to the sea port being in many cases four times as great as the charges made the Brazilian planter. This being so, at the prices ruling the past five years, there has been absolutely no incentive for new planting, coupled with the fact that the labor conditions would warrant practically no increase, there being little or no immigration to these countries of the labor class, with the exception Mexico, where the influx of Oriental labor has changed the conditions somewhat.

It would seem that an advance in the price of these coffees is warranted by the conditions, and that a gradual further advance in values may be looked for without the artificial stimulus which has been found necessary to push up the price of Brazil coffees.

Javas continue to rule firm at the recent advance and is in very small supply both spot and of afloat.

New York Retailers Expect No Lower Prices Immediately. Some Wholesale Easing Already. Butter and Eggs Off. Brooklyn Retailers Enter Politics. Effort to Restore Skim Milk. Business Troubles.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, Nov. 1, 1907.

Among retailers with whom your correspondent talked to-day the general sentiment was that a lowering of prices, such as has been suggested in telegraphic reports from the West, is not likely to take place in the immediate future, and some said that, except in a few lines, they do not expect lower prices until there is another crop.

Wholesale prices of butter and eggs have fallen off here this week and there is said to be a slight easing of prices in some kinds of canned food. But it is as to the canned food, in general, that the dealers are firm in saying that prices will not go down. The reason that they give is that in buying supplies they have been obliged to accept a fraction of the total that they desired. "Take the canned corn situation," said one large dealer, "I could get only a little more than one-half of the amount that I was willing to take. As far as I am concerned, the situation is fixed. I shall sell the reduced quantity and certainly I will not reduce my prices in doing so. Other dealers were limited in ordering stocks, and they are not likely to cut prices when they all know, as I do, that they could sell more if they could get it."

The rumors of supplies of canned food of various kinds being returned to jobbers and packers and of deliveries being delayed with a view to canceling orders, could not be traced to any substantial basis in fact by diligent questioning in the wholesale district. If such supplies are finding their way back to wholesale channels, the effect has not yet been felt by the retailers, who say that no offerings at reduced prices are being made. If such offerings should come later they would be welcomed by many retailers, but the belief seems to be that any business of this kind may be transacted will be exceptional.

Whatever easing of prices may occur in canned food, the dealers, say, may properly be turned to advantage in adding a little to the slender margin of profit that there has been for the retailer. As was told last week, at least one jobbing house has been urging its customers to advance prices so as to make a reasonable profit, the wholesaler arguing that unless they did so, they could not afford to continue in business. It may be that some little reduction in wholesale prices will accomplish in part this result, providing the retailer keeps his quotations at least up to the present level.

The butter and egg situation, it is conceded, is quite different from other lines. It was freely admitted in the wholesale trade, when prices were at the top notch, that large supplies were being held back for speculative purposes and that there was no actual scarcity of the commodities. The financial panic seems to have smoked out some of the large holders, and it is in these products that the principal effects of the scarcity of money have been felt as far as the grocery trade is concerned.

Banks and warehouses made some stiff demands for the return of cash advanced on butter and eggs in storage, and while the demands were met, the holders found if convenient to sell off some of the supplies in order to get money. It is said that four butter and egg firms on the West Side lost considerably by the failures of two Chicago houses of which they had been correspondents. According to the reports, the Chicago firms had considerably overdrawn their accounts with the New York concerns. The latter, it seems, have been in the habit of accommodating their Western correspondents by making advances of cash before the arrival of invoices. These reports have further weakened the market in these products.

more active part in politics in order to get legislation that is favorable and to oppose unfavorable legislation, called a special mass meeting in the rooms of the orgainzation for Monday evening. Invitations were sent to various candidates for the Assembly to appear and state their views on the subject of the Wife's Liability Bill and other measures in which the grocers are interested. The plans were not carried out, however. One reason was that the grocers are especially busy just now getting in stock, and so few appeared for the meeting. It was also found that the candidates had a disinclination to appear and tell what attitude they would take as to a specific kind of legislation if they were elected. A question was raised as to the propriety of candidates putting themselves in a position where they might be accused of trying to win votes by promising to support a particular bill whose passage was demanded by one class of merchants. Some said that without regard to any question as to the merits of the bills to be discussed, it would be improper for a candidate to make promises, directly or indirectly, as to what course he should pursue in relation to such measures, if he should be elected and should be called upon to vote. As a result of the light attendance and the objections, the mass meeting was not held.

One of the officers said afterward that the general idea of getting busy in politics in favor of the right kind of men is attractive, and this can be done without holding mass meetings. The grocers can determine who is likely to vote for good business legislation, even if the candidates do not make any pledges. He said, however, that he regarded politics as one of the most delicate subjects to which the association could give attention, so that action would never be taken without full consideration of the subject in all phases. Many associations have been wrecked simply by taking part in politics.

There is some agitation for an amendment of the ordinances in this city so as to permit again, as in former years, the sale of skimmed milk. It is urged that the sale could be hedged about with such restrictions that the milk would be sold simply for what it is, and that it is wholesome. The sale, it is further said, would relieve to some extent the scarcity of milk which, has resulted in higher prices.

An objection that is urged among others, is that grocers would again sell the skimmed milk, if the sale were allowed, from cans kept on the sidewalk, along with green goods and other articles, and that when kept this way the milk is not wholesome. This suggests to the grocers the old criticism of keeping food on the sidewalks where it receives the dust of the street. While the proposed laws against the practice of sidewalk displays of food have not been passed, it is believed that there is an increasing number of grocers who refrain from exhibiting on the sidewalks any article that is not protected from the dust. The improvement in conditions is ascribed to the agitation on the subject conducted among the grocers, especially among the members of the various organizations.

A petition in bankruptcy was filed Tuesday in the bankruptcy court in Brooklyn against Savarese & Co., jobbers in groceries, at 42 Washington avenue, in that borough. The petitioning creditors were F. Vitelli & Son, Zucca & Co. and Lauritano Bros. It is alleged that real estate and mortgages to the value of $15,000 was transferred to favored creditors. Rufus O. Catlin was appointed temporary receiver.

The Chegwidden & Ohlmeyer Co., wholesale dealers in teas, coffees and spices, at 414 Greenwich street, has made an assignment to W. Lester Wemper. The deed of assignment, executed by J. Colbwin, as vice-president of the company, was filed Tuesday. The company was incorporated with a capital stock of $12,000 three years ago. It took over the business of John Chegwidden, who was the first president. He sold out his interest a year ago to Wm. B. Buck, of Philadelphia.

The United Delicatessen Stores, New York, was incorporated several days ago with a capital stock of $10,000 by Henry and Hyman Siegel, of 312 W. One Hundred and Seventeenth street, and A. and Ida Weinstein, of 1864 Seventh avenue.

The Dog May Bite

Honestly, you will be much more likely to succeed by pushing Hotel Astor Coffee than by pushing a blend of your own.

We have been in coffee blending for many years. Obviously, we must know more about it than you do. And then Hotel Astor Coffee has been tried on the dog—the hardest dog to please in the United States—the patrons of the most exclusive hotels of New York City. The dog pronounced it good at once, and with the stamp of weighty approval upon it we offer it to you.

When you blend your own coffee the dog you try it on is your own customers—that's risky; the dog may bite.

A perfect blend of superfine coffee. For the very finest trade.

"Do You Know Your Grocer?"

The world holds quite a number of asses, and up to the present time there has been no overt competition for the title of chief. If the editor of the "Woman's Home Companion," however, progresses at his present rate, he will be in excellent position to claim the enviable distinction of being the most brilliantly scintillating ass in the United States at least.

The "Woman's Home Companion" is a woman's monthly paper which aims to dictate the thoughts and the acts of the female life. In the November issue the editor begins the publication of a personally written series of articles attacking retail grocers. A part of the initial article appears elsewhere in this issue. It will interest retail grocers very much.

The editor of the "Woman's Home Companion" perpetrates some novel ideas in his first article. One is that grocers put in telephones so their customers will stay away and not see the filth in their stores. That of course is a pure absurdity. Not a grocer in business but would prefer a customer to come to his store for the fundamental reason that once there he can interest her in the numerous other articles before her. Orders over the telephone lack the persuasive stimulus of contact with other things, and are therefore confined to goods which the customer has actually resolved to buy.

Another bit of humor in the same article is that grocers employ expensive salesmen to call at their customers' homes for the same reason—to prevent them from calling at the store and being revolted by the abounding filth! This need not be discussed at all.

Such is the general trend of the article referred to. It is cheap, crude, ignorant and wholly untrue and unjust. The title of the article is "Do You Know Your Grocer?" The "Grocery World" feels that it can answer it affirmatively and can also add that it feels as if it also knew the editor of the "Woman's Home Companion."

In a letter to the "Grocery World" on the subject of these articles, the general manager of the "Woman's Home Companion" asks that this journal "lend us your co-operation in every way possible toward the remedying of evil conditions." Unquestionably we will. Let us begin upon baseless yellow stuff printed against the grocery business by ignorant fools.

Rescue for the Drug Business.

Messrs. Gimbel Brothers, the Philadelphia department storekeepers, who modestly admit to conducting the only good grocery store in Philadelphia, are now about to lift the drug business from its slough of despond by establishing a drug department. For some time, therefore, the high-principled Gimbel policy of building themselves up by tearing others down will be applied to the drug trade, whose shortcomings, true and false, will now be dwelt upon ad nauseum.

Biscuit Trust at Bay.

Food laws are at last doing to the Biscuit Trust what not conscience, exposure or trade sentiment has been able to do—make it do the decent thing regarding the weight of its package goods. The Trust has fattened on public misapprehension for years. The bulk of its business is done in small package goods, which represent neither pounds or the aliquot parts of a pound. A Trust package would look like a pound and would be bought under the impression that it contained a pound, but would actually contain only 10 to 14 ounces. This was not legal fraud, because the Trust always sold as "packages" and never as given quantities. Nevertheless it knew perfectly well of the public delusion, and craftily took advantage of it while keeping within the letter of the law.

Two States have now taken steps to protect their people against schemes like the Biscuit Trust's—first North Dakota and now Nebraska. Both have recently enacted statutes requiring all concerns to print the net weight upon all packages. The Trust is vainly fighting both laws, thereby revealing its bad faith very clearly. For if it had nothing to lose by so doing, there is no reason why it should not instantly agree to publish its net weights.

The Postmaster-General's Parcels Post Scheme.

The Federal Postmaster-General, George Von L. Meyer, is carrying on a decidedly interesting propaganda in the interest of his parcels post scheme. In the principal cities he is holding meetings at which are present the leading local politicians, but from which are conspicuously absent any one representing the retail interests which are opposing the plan.

The latest one of these meetings was held in Philadelphia last week. The principal guests and speechmakers were as follows:—

W. Atlee Burpee, seed dealer, personally interested in all possible extension of parcels post.

John Wanamaker, who conducts a mail-order department.

Henry H. Bingham, Congressman from Philadelphia. Interested in nothing save the continued holding of his office.

William B. Howland, publisher of the "Outlook," New York. Interested in parcels post because it will increase mail-order advertising.

Richard H. Rushton, president Fourth National Bank, who has no personal interest in the subject either way.

Mahlon H. Kline, wholesale druggist, whose house sells both the retail dealer and the mail-order houses.

There were many others present, but not one who represented the organized retail opposition. Naturally the meeting was enthusiastic in favoring that which would most greatly advance the interest of those present. The Postmaster-General made the same stereotyped statement concerning the opposition of the retail merchants which he made at similar meetings in other cities. Here is the gist of it:—

> Heretofore the opposition to the extension of the parcels post has come in the first instance from the express companies, and then from the retail merchant and the country storekeeper, the fear in his case being that the mail-order house would derive a benefit to his own disadvantage. Now, I can disarm the criticism of the retail country merchant and storekeeper by the fact that I shall recommend a parcels post system on the rural delivery routes, a special rate to be charged on the packages for delivery from the distributing office of the rural route, or if mailed by a patron of any rural route for delivery to a patron on the same route, or at the distributing office of said route. The rate would be 5 cents for the first pound and 2 cents for each additional pound up to eleven pounds. This will be a great boon to the farmers and others on the rural routes, because when they are able to order their goods by telephone or postal card it will relieve them of the inconvenience of going to town to obtain the necessaries of life. It will facilitate the consumption and increase the business of the country merchant, who necessarily obtains his goods from the wholesale dealer. Therefore all will be benefited. The result of this service will be an increased cancelation of stamps, which in turn means an increase of salary to the fourth-class postmaster, as well as a larger revenue for the postal service which could be credited to the rural delivery routes, as it would be practi-

Free to "Grocery World" Readers

The "Grocery World" has on hand about five hundred copies o a book on window dressing, originally published by Sprague, Warne & Co., of Chicago, Ill. It was originally intended to use the book as a premium, but after inspection it was considered scarcely good enough, and since that the copies have lain on our shelves because o uncertainty as to what use to make of them. It must not be assumed that the book is worthless—it has a number of good things in it, bu is scarcely up to what the "Grocery World" thinks such a book should be.

Now we propose to give a copy to any subscriber who may want it, free of all cost save the postage of seven cents.

Send seven cents and the book is yours.

cally all pure gain over and above the commissions to the postmasters.

One of the unconsciously humorous incidents of the meeting was the address of the sainted John Wanamaker, who reassured the objecting retail merchants in the following language:—

> I have had some little experience in one of these stores you have heard about and of which the small country storekeeper professes to fear. I say to you, and other merchants who are here—Mr. Snellenburg and Mr. Lit will agree with me—that the mail-order business of our stores is not profitable.
> I want the senior Senator and the Postmaster-General to understand this statement. There are stores that make money through the mail-order business, but they are devoted solely to that branch of trade. We find that our mail-order business, accompanied as it is by the mailing of samples, is only an incident of the accommodation we seek to give to our patrons. I think the knowledge of this fact should be reassuring to the small storekeepers who are making these objections.

Mr. Wanamaker says that his mail-order business is not profitable, and argues that that fact should reassure the retailers. In Heaven's name why, if he still continues to go after it? As a matter of fact, the unprofitable feature of Mr. Wanamaker's mail-order business, if true, is decidedly *un*reassuring, since it indicates close selling and thus increases the danger of the competition.

The Food Law's Nether Side.

The "Grocery World" feels absolutely confident that at some time not far distant there will come a sane reaction from the present rigid and arbitrary enforcement of the food laws.

Consider from a practical standpoint a case which came under the writer's eye during the past week. A certain well-known brand of English marmalade is sold quite largely in this country. Prior to the enforcement of the Federal food law it contained a minute quantity of salicylic acid to increase its keeping quality. Containing this acid the marmalade has been freely sold for many years, with not a case on record of harm in any form.

The Federal food law prohibits the use of salicylic acid, and the marmalade referred to has for a year or more come to America without it. As a result dozens of jars are spoiling all over Philadelphia, not to speak of outside points. In one case the consumer has thrown away over half of three consecutive jars for this reason.

If to the contention that such a law visits an unmitigated hardship upon the consumer, instead of benefiting him, it is answered that salicylic acid has no place in food and should not be permitted there, there is still another rejoinder to make: If there is no evidence that the presence of that drop of acid has ever worked harm, but on the contrary has worked great good in the way of preservation, in Heaven's name what reasonable objection can lie to its use?

Biscuit Trust Smoked Out in Nebraska.

The section of the new Nebraska food law, requiring net weights of package goods to be stated on the label, is causing must uneasiness, the handling of crackers in packages being particularly affected. Press advices say that the National Biscuit Co., as the largest manufacturer of package crackers, is seriously objecting to the ruling of Deputy Food Commissioner Johnson regarding net weights, and it is said that the cracker company contemplates contesting the legality of the ruling. Retailers throughout the State have been warned of the danger and told of the difficulty of obtaining safe goods in the following communication from Secretary Avery, of the State association:—

> I understand that it has been almost impossible for the merchants of Nebraska to secure package crackers that will comply with the laws of our State. Deputy Commissioner Johnson has made a ruling that a guarantee from a wholesaler or manufacturer covering the stamping of the net weight on the package does not release the retailer from liability under the law, but that the weight must be stamped on the package. He says that a guarantee covering the purity of the goods contained in the package will release the retailer from liability only so far as the quality of the goods is concerned, but don't release him from a penalty if the net weight is not stamped on the package.
> I would advise every merchant in the State to handle only crackers that have the weight stamped on the package, as that is the only safe way to avoid arrest and fine for violation of the pure food law in regard to these goods.
> Yours respectfully,
> W. H. AVERY, Secretary.

How Much?

Your possible trade on a given line—how much of it have you?

Every family in your neighborhood uses a certain amount of sliced meat—whether ham, bacon, dried beef, sausage, tongue or corned beef. In the Middle West the average, roughly speaking, is about a pound and a half per family per week.

Therefore it is easy for you to calculate the amount of sliced meat you ought to be selling, whether you have fifty or five hundred possible customers to draw on. Remember that "possible customers" doesn't mean only people who are coming to the store, but people who might be coming there if there was a reason for it. Probably you are not selling your full share, because to the average buyer your sliced meats look just about like those sold anywhere else.

The AMERICAN SLICING MACHINE will make your sliced meats "different."

It will enable you to give more slices for the money, and better-looking, better-tasting meat.

It will increase your profit per pound.

It has done this for thousands of other merchants.

It costs you nothing to investigate.

Dried Fruit Shippers Pressed for Money.

Offer Eastern Trade Extra Discount for Payment of Drafts Now Instead of When Goods Arrive. Many Goods Long on Road. Offer Mostly Declined.

The California shippers of dried fruits are endeavoring to transfer to Eastern wholesale buyers of prunes, raisins, peaches, etc., the worry over the railroad companies' tardy deliveries. Practically all of them are offering Eastern jobbers an extra discount of ½ to 1 per cent. if they will pay the shippers' drafts at once without waiting for the goods to arrive. In all but a very few cases the offer has been declined.

Most dried fruits are sold to wholesale grocers on sight draft, which is due immediately after arrival and inspection of the goods. This means that if the goods are long in transit the shippers are kept so much longer out of their money. This is never pleasant, but in view of the present tight money situation it is probably squeezing some of the California shippers pretty hard. They therefore offer the extra discount if receivers will pay for their bills now without waiting for the goods to arrive.

As stated, the offer has been rejected by practically everybody. Partly because most jobbers want to see their goods before paying for them, and partly because they don't like to be kept out of their money any more than the shipper. Some of this year's dried fruit has been on the road for about four times as long as it should have taken.

Say Pittsburg Produce Prices Higher Than Outside.

Details of the Amended Charges Against Wholesale Produce Dealers. Defendants in Action Charged With Maintaining Close Handed Trust Over Produce.

I have succeeded during the past week in obtaining a copy of the amended bill in equity which has been filed in the Common Pleas Courts here by the associated retail merchants against the wholesale dealers in produce, as well as certain large shipping interests, all of which have a connection with this market. The bill is quite verbose and, in substance, charges all of the defendants with maintaining an illegal combination in restraint of trade, and this in violation of the law.

Its main points are reproduced below:—

Ninth—That your orators are advised and believe and so aver that the prices for said produce in the markets of Pittsburg and said vicinity have been, are and will continue to be excessive, unreasonable and more than would prevail under ordinary and usual market conditions, for the following reasons:—

(a) That the members of said Pittsburg Produce Trade Association, receiving more than 90 per cent. of the produce handled to said markets, almost all of which is shipped from states and countries outside of Pennsylvania and from said several corporations and combinations hereinbefore mentioned and others, have been, are and will

XVII.—Keep Cheerful at All Events.

The cheerful man is a success. Especially if he does a cash business.

No matter whether he acquires riches or remains poor, the merchant who can remain cheerful is a success, for he is not only well satisfied with his own lot, but makes those around him better satisfied with theirs.

Look the world over, and it is the cheerful people who have the most friends, and that should mean a cheerful merchant should have the most customers. Cheerfulness implies a vast amount of faith in human nature, however, and the cheerful man would do well to start out on his mercantile career with a cast-iron rule to not extend credit. He will find it is much easier to carry his cheerfulness through life on a cash basis than it would be if he adopted the credit system, and the cheerful man has enough to do without worrying about financial matters, for all the troubles of his community will gravitate towards him to be dispelled, and every time he is called upon to say the magic words which make another mortal get a larger glimpse of the brighter side of life, he should make a firmer friend and a better customer (if on a cash basis).

be in position to control the prices to be asked for such produce, and they have so done and have made and maintained prices which have been and are and will be higher than the market prices in cities of similar size and location as to fields of produce production.

(b) That said produce distributing companies, with their large capital and extensive organization as advertised, have and maintain absolute power over large quantities of produce handled by them, and have controlled and can control the prices at which they shall sell such produce, and have made and can make them higher than would otherwise be the case in the ordinary and usual course of trade.

(c) That said various growers' associations and other associations, by maintaining exclusive agents or distributers in the various markets, are thereby enabled to secure a higher price than would otherwise be possible under ordinary market conditions.

(d) That said fruit exchanges, by becoming the only purchasers of the products of larger districts or states, are thereby enabled to hold down the producer to a less than a fair price, and without allowing such difference at point of sale, make larger profits than they are justly or legally entitled to under the usual course of business.

(e) That by reason of the central location of the Pittsburg district in the transportation system of the country it is easy to and the said various combinations, either singly or in joint action, can divert and have diverted cars of produce to other points, and can hold and have held them at various adjoining points of shipment, and thereby can and have regulated the "supply" for said markets, and thereby control the prices to be received for supplies already on sale therein.

(f) That the members of said association can regulate and have regulated the "supply and demand" in the Pittsburg district markets by stopping in transit at points outside of said district of cars of produce shipped to and intended for said markets for the purpose of maintaining higher prices for the goods already on hand than would have been or would be possible under the ordinary course of business.

(h) That it is alleged that members of said association have caused to be thrown upon the "dump" supplies of produce of good quality, thereby maintaining a higher price in said markets than would have been possible had said supplies so thrown away been permitted to come in, and depriving the consumers of said district of foodstuffs which they otherwise would have received under the usual course of business.

Barrel Industry Confronts Growing Scarcity of Raw Material.

The Forest Service of the United States Government calls attention to the rapidly decreasing supply of lumber in the country and raises the question where are we to get barrels from when the supply is wholly gone. The production of elm lumber, which is mostly used for barrels, has decreased over 50 per cent. in the last seven years. Elm is cut most largely in the Northern States and particularly in Wisconsin, Indiana and Michigan, and the exhaustion of the supply in those States has had a most serious effect upon the barrel industry. One of the prominent manufacturers estimates that there are not half the staves made in Michigan now that there were ten years ago. It is the opinion of one of the best informed and most prominent manufacturers in Ohio that to-day there are not 1,000 staves produced in that State where there were 10,000 staves made ten years ago. Red gum lumber, used as a substitute for elm, grows most abundantly in Arkansas, Missouri, Mississippi and Tennessee, and with the increased use of this and other Southern woods in the manufacture of barrels the industry is shifting southward at a rapid rate. There are now a score of first-class plants making staves and heading in Louisiana where there was only one of any large capacity ten years ago. It will be only a few years, however, until the maximum output of these States is reached, and there, too, the manufacturers will be compelled by the scarcity of material to hunt vigorously for a new supply of timber. Manufacturers of barrels are confronted by the same problems which are now meeting almost every user of wood in the United States, an increasing scarcity and a correspondingly higher price.

Cincinnati Pure Food Show.

The Cincinnati Retail Grocers' Association will hold their first pure food show in that city the last two weeks in April and the first week in May of next year. Cincinnati has one of the largest and strongest grocers' associations in the country, the membership books showing an enrollment of 899 names at the present time. The exhibition will be held in Music Hall, the largest building of the kind in the state, which will comfortably accommodate 200 exhibitors. Seven different street car lines pass directly by this building and reach out into every section of the city and into Covington, Newport and other Kentucky towns. The total population of Cincinnati and its suburban towns is considerably over half a million.

This is the first venture of the Cincinnati association into the field of pure food shows, and it will also be the first exhibition of the kind ever held in that city. With the strong forces behind it and the immense prospective patronage it is expected to make this the greatest event of the kind ever held in this country.

Any further information can be secured by writing C. H. Elliott, 202 West Seventh street, Manager of Cincinnati Retail Grocers' Association.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market is in active, healthy condition. There has been a good demand during the week, particularly for the lower grades, which are strong at the recently noted advances. The week has brought no change in price, and the entire line is in a well-sustained and wholesome condition.

Coffee.

The coffee market has suffered very little from the conditions of the stock market, although there has been some effect. The fact that there has not been more is due to the fact that the public has been very slow in dealing in coffee options for a year past, and this has kept them out of harm's way during the money flurry. For this reason there has been very little forced liquidation. As stated, however, a slight decline has occurred owing to the fact that certain large interests were unable to hold on, and this caused the option market to decline 25 to 30 points and actual Rio and Santos coffee ¼ cent. This refers particularly to the lower grades of Brazil coffee. Owing to the very small supply of the better grades of Brazil coffee, coupled with the fact that one large interest purchased heavily of high-grade Santos on the spot, the better grades have hardened somewhat. Mild grades show a radical advance, as explained in detail in another column. Java is firm at an advance. Mocha steady.

Sugar.

The raw sugar market has remained about unchanged during the past week. The refined market is unchanged also, and strong upon reports of a very heavy business. The refiners all seem to be selling sugar and the jobbers also. Confectioners particularly are in the market, and all told the market is much more active than usual at this season of the year. The demand seems to be wholly consumptive and for actual wants.

Fish.

There has been a lull in the demand for mackerel during the past week, though this has brought no recession in prices. All grades of mackerel are scarce and firm. Norways are in very light supply and rule at high prices. Irish are also hard to get and so are shores. Even though the demand should still further decline, no material recession in prices is expected, as the available supply is extremely light. Cod, hake and haddock are unchanged, except for the fact that sales of hake have been made at a slight decline. Sardines are unchanged and as to imported brands very firm. French sardines are especially scarce and the demand is being diverted to Norwegian smoked sardines. Salmon is unchanged and in fair demand.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose is unchanged for the week. Compound syrup is selling in moderate quantities at ruling prices. Sugar syrup is wanted to a slight extent, only prices being unchanged. Molasses is unchanged and quiet.

Canned Goods.

The tomato market shows no special change for the week. The situation is somewhat unsettled. Quite a number of holders will sell at 85 cents f. o. b., while others want 87½ cents and some even 90 cents. The demand is light. Despite the continuance of the rather low prices, most authorities are expecting a firmer market later on. Corn is in quite some demand, shoepeg and Maine style being particularly wanted. No change in price has occurred during the week. Maine corn is high, sales having been made at $1, which is 15 cents over the opening. This was 1906 corn at that. Peas are strong and unchanged. Apples still average $3.50 and are in small demand. Peaches are unchanged and still scarce. The demand is active and the supply light. The California line of canned goods shows no change. The supply is light and much broken. Some packers have a surplus of nothing but pears. The Baltimore line of small canned goods is unchanged. The pack of oysters is about beginning, the outlook being fair.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are dull, but no further decline has occurred. The demand is very light, but is expected to improve during the present month. Peaches are unchanged and very dull. Apricots are still prohibitively high and therefore quite dull. Currants are strong and in good demand at unchanged prices. In raisins everything is weak except seeded, which are strong and high. The supply is inadequate for the demand.

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

Loose California muscatels now rule below the opening price. Apples are steady to firm and unchanged.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are some unsettled, owing to apparently reckless and unnecessary sales below the market. The spot market is $2.50 and to come forward nominally $2.40. As stated, however, sales have been made for less. The demand is fair. Marrows rule from $2.25 to $2.30 and the demand is fair. California limas are unchanged on spot and in moderate demand. The coast market is somewhat higher by reason of heavy rains. Dried peas are firm. Green peas average $1.95 and Scotch $2, and the demand is fair. Yellow splits still average $7.50 per barrel.

Butter.

The butter market is steady at a decline of 2 cents per pound from last week. The make of fresh butter is about normal, and stocks in storage are about what they were a year ago. The decline is due to the falling off in consumption, always the safety valve against inordinately high prices, and the short money market. The latter factor has caused the banks to call in loans which had been made on storage butter, and this has forced the holders thereof to unload it at a sacrifice to raise the necessary funds. Two large Chicago butter concerns for this reason were compelled to undergo receiverships during the past week. Even at the decline the price is still 10 per cent. above a year ago, and a further decline is therefore likely, possibly of 1 cent per pound. The price may remain stationary for a few days, after which the market will go into cold weather and become firmer and higher again. The money market is likely to have a continued effect upon the situation.

Eggs.

The market for fresh eggs has advanced 2 cents during the past week, owing to extreme scarcity of new-laid eggs. Refrigerator eggs, during the same time, have declined 1 cent per dozen, owing first to the falling off in the demand, and second to the same reason which caused butter to break—the call of loans for which eggs had been pledged. The greater part, if not all, of the refrigerator eggs now selling are selling at a loss, as they had to be unloaded for the above reason by holders who had borrowed money. This made the market and other holders who had not borrowed money were compelled to withdraw their storage eggs and sell them at the same price, even though a loss was the result. Stocks of storage eggs are about normal and the quality very fair. The outlook for a few days is for an unchanged market.

Cheese.

The cheese market is steady and unchanged. Factories are closing earlier than usual, owing to the scarcity of milk. Stocks of cheese are fully 30 per cent. below a year ago, and prices are about 20 per cent. higher. If the consumptive demand continues, however, there will probably be no recession in prices.

Provisions.

The provision market is unchanged on a basis about like a week ago. Stocks of everything in the smoked line are closely cleaned up and rule at unchanged prices. Both pure and compound lard are firm and unchanged. Dried beef and barrel pork are steady and unchanged. Canned meats are dull and unchanged. No change seems likely in any line.

Produce.

Pennsylvania potatoes, 70 to 75 cents per bushel; York State, 65 to 70 cents per bushel; Jersey, 40 to 45 cents per bushel, demand good; sweet potatoes, primes, 40 to 50 cents per basket; culls, 15 to 25 cents per basket, demand good; carrots, 40 to 50 cents per basket, 2 to 2½ cents per bunch, demand fair; cabbage, 15 to 20 cents per basket, $3 to $4 per 100, demand good; yellow turnips, 40 to 50 cents per basket; white, 30 to 40 cents per basket, demand fair; yellow onions, 45 cents per basket, $1.60 to $1.75 per bag, demand fair; beets, 2 to 2½ cents per bunch, demand fair; horseradish, 10 to 12 cents per bunch, $5 to $6 per barrel, demand fair; salad, $1.25 per basket, $1.50 to $2 per barrel, demand fair; celery, Pennsylvania, 7 to 12 cents per bunch; York State, 30 to 45 cents per bunch, demand fair; cauliflower, $2 to $3 per barrel, demand fair; parsnips, $2.25 to $2.50 per barrel, 45 to 50 cents per basket, demand fair; pumpkins, $5 to $8 per 100, demand fair; watercress, 2 to 2½ cents per bunch, demand fair; spinach, $1.25 to $1.50 per barrel, demand fair; oyster plants, 3 to 3½ cents per bunch, demand fair.

Green Fruit.

If You Want to Trade It

A letter from C. A. Heegaard, of Mandau, N. D., shows you what you can do with a Standard Cash Register if you should decide, after using it awhile, to get a larger one.

Mr. Heegaard says, "We have used the Standard Cash Register over sixteen years, and must say we would not be without it or trade it for a high-priced key machine. The key register people have often offered us in trade more than we paid for it."

Mr. Heegaard used a Standard sixteen years without wanting to trade, and so will you. But if you did, you see you could get all you paid for it.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

No. 1.

There was less activity this week in the canned goods market in this section. Every one has been expecting a breathing spell, simply because it is a physical impossibility to keep a full head of steam on indefinitely and a slowing down had become necessary. It would have come regardless of the trouble in the Eastern money markets, and with the passing of the worst period in that direction a condition nearer to normal will prevail during the winter, to be followed probably in the spring by a stronger market based on the light supplies in first hands of all staple articles of canned fruits and vegetables. From now until the holidays there will be doubtless the usual demand for seasonable goods, or if not the stability of the present prices may be given a good test. Up to this date the smallest concession in the price of strictly standard quality tomatoes brings ready buyers, especially for goods on which buyers' labels can be put, and the orders for them are not confined to any one section of the country. During this week the Northern and Western houses have been liberal buyers at full prices.

Again this week there was liberal buying of corn, string beans, baked beans and spinach, and sweet potatoes were especially strong with an upward tendency. Dried beans suitable for baking seem to be particularly scarce, hence the canned article is liable to advance at any time. Low-priced seconds and standard peas are getting scarce here.

Fruits of all kinds were rather quiet all this week, but the extremely small stocks held here won't bother the holders of them if there should be no demand at all before next spring. Illustrative of that fact, an assorted order that we received during the week for seven items in the line of fruits had to be divided up among five canners in order to obtain for our buyer the lowest price on each of them. The demand this week was chiefly for apples and pears.

The fall packing season for cove oysters has opened with a small supply of the raw stock at high cost. The question of prices depends upon the weather, which has been rather mild in the last half of the month.

No. 2.

The packing of fall beans is about over here with light stocks held by packers. Although there has already been a heavy advance in string beans from the opening price and though the present market is considerably higher than for the same time last year, yet conservative people seem to think that string beans have not yet reached their limit. As to this, of course, it is impossible to say. We can only report that there are not many beans held in Baltimore, and that judging from the inquiry we are getting from various sections there are still a good many gaps to be filled up. String beans were entirely cleaned up last year two months before packing season began, and there promises to be a repetition of this experience again this year.

Sweet potatoes are very snappy. We are paying $1 per dozen, f. o. b. Baltimore, in a small way for prompt shipment. We have succeeded in buying this week several cars for season shipment at 92½ cents per dozen, less 1½ per cent., f. o. b. country factory. Most of the sweet potato packers in the country sections report that they have sold to such an extent that they will have to have an unusually good crop to fill their orders in full.

There is a very strong market on pumpkin, owing to scarcity. This seems to be true not only of the East, but of the Western sections as well.

All kinds of pineapple are getting to be cleaned up.

Cheap jellies and preserves have been selling freely, with the result that packers are pretty well oversold and are not very anxious for business.

Spices.

The market opened during last week in a most promising way. The demand, however, was halted to some extent, due to the financial flurry in Wall street. Indications, however, point to a healthier condition from now on.

Pepper.—The upward tendency stopped temporarily, due to conditions noted above. There appears to be little pressure to sell either for spot goods or goods en route. The demand continues quite satisfactory and stocks have been greatly reduced.

Pimento (Allspice).—It is quite steady, but practically unchanged. Indications point to a higher market.

Mace is in active demand and prices remain unchanged.

Cayennes.—The market is steady but unchanged. Demand exceedingly good.

Cassias are quiet, but steady. The demand continues quite active.

Gingers continue at regular prices and the demand is steady, Cochin being quite scarce at this time.

Seeds are very active, prices holding firmer. Celery is much firmer and is quoted at 8½ cents to-day. Caraway seed is slowly, but steadily advancing. Mustard Seed—demand is good and prime quality scarce. Coriander is selling at unchanged prices.

MCCORMICK & Co.
Baltimore, Md., Nov. 1, 1907.

Imported Fish Products.

Our herring market is unchanged, with large arrivals and prices in buyer's favor. Norway fancy fat herrings show the finest quality seen for years and prices are exceptionally low.

Imported Oil Sardines.—Almost unobtainable. Catch is a failure all over.

Norwegian Smoked Sardines.—Getting very scarce. The best qualities will soon be sold out. Some of the best brands have been withdrawn from the market, as no supplies can be had.

Mackerel.—Irish are in good demand, but good stock is virtually unobtainable.

Norway mackerel are virtually sold out in primary markets, and we do not think any more can be had in Norway. Catch is very much smaller than last season, and the proportion of large fish exceptionally small. Demand for Norway mackerel is very good, notwithstanding the high prices, and if it continues unchanged supplies will soon be exhausted.

STROHMEYER & ARPE Co.
New York, Nov. 1, 1907.

MARKET NOTES.

The best Cape Cod cranberries range from $7.50 to $8 per crate and the price graduates from that figure down to $2 to $2.50 for New Jersey crates. The demand is fair.

Charleston beans are coming North and average $1.50. Virginia is also sending beans north at about the same price. Jersey beans are still about at 30-40 cents per basket, but the quality is poor. The demand is fair.

Florida oranges have not yet begun to come forward in any volume. A few odd lots are around, rather better in quality than the first shipment, and average $3 per crate. The demand is fair.

Apples about hold their own, the range being $3.50 to $4.50 per barrel. Ordinary cooking apples average $2.50 and are in good demand.

The hot houses are supplying a few mushrooms at the unusually high price of 75 cents per pound. The demand is fair.

Chestnuts have declined to $7 to $8 per bushel by reason of larger supply. Even at the decline however, they are extremely high as last year at this time they were ranging from $3 to $3.50.

Manufacturers who have adopted premium schemes to create a demand for their products, have always given the premiums to consumers. Where manufacturers have offered an incentive to grocers to push their goods, the incentive has always been small. It had to be small, because no individual manufacturer could afford to give a grocer from his individual profits anything more important than a silk hat, an umbrella, etc. But when twenty or more prominent manufacturers, whose products are sold by grocers everywhere, set aside a part of their advertising appropriations to put into a fund to buy something substantial for the merchant, that something represents an article of sufficient value to make it worth the grocer's while to take a real interest in pushing the goods of the manufacturers who take this means of showing their appreciation of the grocer's services. That the importance of this matter may be plain to you, figure out the following: The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., New York, gives you a quantity of Universal coupons with their Hasty Lunch Chocolate, Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoa. No better goods ever came into this market. Add these coupons to the ones you get with the products of the following firms and you will find you can save enough coupons in three months to entitle you to a first-class set of harness, a platform scale or a roll-top desk. In six months you can save enough to get a good runabout, in a year a good piano:

The American Premium Co., Philadelphia; Wrigley Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia; Franklin Baker Co., Philadelphia; the Porcela Co., Philadelphia; McCanna & Fraser Co., Philadelphia; John Scott & Co., Philadelphia; Weber & Loesch, Philadelphia; Wm. Dreydoppel's Sons, Philadelphia; J. W. Beardsley's Sons, New York; Dixon Crucible Co., Jersey City; Sea Foam Baking Powder Co., New York; Flodon Manufacturing Co., Boston, Mass.; Potter & Wrightington, Boston, Mass.

Within a month a number of other big local houses will join this enterprise. Don't you think this matter is important enough for you to push the goods of these firms? Don't you think the manufacturers who have been been first to recognize the grocer's right of consideration should have the grocer's hearty co-operation?

The little round cracker with "Exton" stamped on it. It has been on the market over half a century, and no consumer will use any other oyster cracker if she can get the Exton, because no oyster cracker can take its place in the esteem of those who know the difference between fair and good.

THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

———, N. Y., Oct. 28, 1907.

Editor Science of Advertising.

Dear Sir:—If you print this letter in your department do not print my name or address, as I wish same to remain secret. I am a good deal worried over something that is happening in my town and I should like your advice if possible to get it. About six months ago I started the use of trading stamps. I did so rather against my better judgment, but business was a little slack just then, and the salesman they sent was a convincing talker, and before I knew it I had signed the order. I have since used the stamps, and believe they have brought me some little trade. I know it to be a fact that I have taken one or two customers from a competitor about two squares away, as I know that certain people who used to deal there are now coming to me, probably to get the stamps, as they are very careful about asking for them always. This has made my competitor very angry at me, and he has stopped speaking to me in the street. That I do not care for, as he is not such a man as I care to know very well. He has started in to advertise, however in a way which reflects on me, and which is likely to affect my business. I inclose three of his advertisements and would ask you to look them over. They are causing some talk, and as I am the only grocer in the town giving stamps I have been compelled to answer a large number of questions about the matter. Please advise me what to do. I am a man of peace and do not like wrangles with anybody, especially a neighbor. I feel that I must protect myself, however, in some way.

Respectfully yours,

———.

The advertisements inclosed with this letter are truly what could be called "hot stuff." The competitor referred to by the above correspondent has incorporated an attack upon trading stamps in the introduction to his advertising. Here is one:—

BEWARE OF TRADING STAMPS!

Certain merchants in ——— are distributing trading stamps with all purchases. We say to the public beware! There is no bigger fraud than this same trading stamp. I had a chance to go in on it, but when I said to the salesman for the stamp company that my profits were not large enough to allow me to take the cost of premiums out of them he said: "Why not put up your prices a little? Almost all the people who give out the stamps do that." That makes trading stamps a fraud upon the public and I refused to go in. A merchant who would profess to give stamps away, but at the same time would put up his prices to pay for them, is a thief, and is robbing the public. Compare our prices with others giving stamps.

I don't wonder in the least that my correspondent was annoyed at this, for it is calculated to draw unfavorable attention to him, since he is the only grocer giving stamps in his town. Nevertheless, there is nothing that can reasonably be objected to in this advertisement. Unquestionably a dealer representing that trading stamps are a gift, while he is actually charging in cold cash for them, is doing something both dishonest and irregular. My advice as to how this correspondent should protect himself depends on whether he is following this practice or not. If he did, as a matter of fact, advance his prices to take care of the stamps, then his competitor's advertisement justly reflected upon him, and I see no honest way out. If, on the contrary, however, he did not raise his prices on account of the stamps, then I should get right after the matter. I should take special space in all the papers and take the bull by the horns. I should call attention to my competitor's advertising and say that it pointed directly at me, since I was the only grocer with enterprise enough to give the stamps away. I should deny in the most positive fashion that I had advanced my prices a single cent on account of the stamps, and to prove it I should go before a notary and make oath to it, reproducing the affidavit in the advertisement. When I had done this I should take a rise out of my competitor by stating that he was grouchy simply because several of his dissatisfied customers had come to my store. I should then quote his prices and mine for the same goods side by side. If they are the same, the addition of stamps with mine would show them clearly to embody the better proposition.

Bad Advice.

When I get to Congress my time'll be pretty well taken up, I reekon, passing laws that I'm storing up in my mind to pass when that time comes.

I've got another one now.

It came to me after having two cases related to me last week.

It's a law to prevent people from giving advice on things they know nothing about.

I believe over half the misery in the world comes from taking fool advice.

A man will decide what to do in a certain matter. As a fellow will when he's about to do something out of the common, he'll talk it over with his friends. "Oh, no, I would'nt do it that way at all," some addle-headed ass will say, "what you want to do is to do it thus and so."

Somebody else'll have a different scheme, and in the end the man will be so balled up that ten chances to one he'll throw up his original plan, which was probably right, and hit on some other way, which is probably wrong.

I say his own was probably right, because he had likely given it ten times as much thought as the other people had theirs.

Listen to this:—

About nine months ago a man from up the State with some money got in touch with a fellow who had been managing an Acme store in Philadelphia. The Acme man had the experience and the man from up the State had the money, so they decided to tie up together and open a groeery store in Philadelphia.

Both of 'em thought the best thing to do was to buy an established store. They dickered with a friend of mine in West Philadelphia who had made a little money and wanted to get out. His store was all right. It was doing about $400 a week, a good part cash, and was on the solidest kind of a footing. They could have bought it at inventory, too, not a cent for good will.

They had all but put through the deal when one of these lunkheads who would rather give advice than eat came into the ea

"Oh, they were making a fear mistake to buy an old store! W they ought to do, by all means, v to start a store of their own, t they could build their business they wanted it from the st Look at the Acme Tea Co.," said, " look how they'd got ahe Did they ever buy an old sto Not on your life! They found th place and then opened up a brig clean, fresh place after their o ideas. And it always went, too.

Well, they didn't know what do. The fool was a plausible talk and in the end they gave up the i of buying an established store a decided to start their own. T asked their friend where he wo start, and he pointed out a pl out near Fifty-fifth and Mar streets, where there was a perf nest of cut stores. I knew placc. There were already many stores there, and the wr sort of stores to buck up agai unless you must.

Nobody with a grain of se seemed to be around to point what a bad break they were m ing, so they leased a store in heart of that district and fitted a place.

It cost the man from up the St a trifle over $1,500 for stock a fixtures. $1,500, by the way, v to have been the priee of the st they were thinking of buying. J think of that! They had two off at $1,500. One was to buy st and fixtures for an empty store a nest of cutters, the other was buy stock, fixtures and an est lished business of $400 a week!

And on their wise friend's vice they took the first!

Wouldn't that gnash y teeth!

They opened on Saturday, tak in for the full day's business princely sum of $4.11!

Six months saw them out of t location. They never got anywh at all! Never did a decent da business a single day they w there!

At the end of six months t got out of their lease someh and moved a square away, over ward Market street. They di little better there, but never beyond $100 a week. That's ab what they're doing now. A mo ago the ex-Acme manager gave the ghost and went back to his job, running somebody els store.

His sadder and wiser partner rom up the State he left behind o get what he could out of the reck.

That poor, little run-down imitaion of a grocery store is now for ale for $200, and it isn't worth a ent more! There's nothing left of t but a few little fixtures and a andful of stock.

Now do you see where my law ould come in? If some kind rovidence had dropped a brick on at self-appointed adviser's wood-n skull before he put those fellows ut of the notion of buying a ready-ade business, they would probably e happy and prosperous to-day. t ain't a matter of opinion that is advice was wrong. When you an get a good business thrown in or nothing with the price for stock nd fixtures, it's as plain as can be at it's good business to take it.

Being bad advice, it oughtn't to ave been given, and I don't know ny way to prevent it's being given, xcept to pass a law against it.

I say again that if fools would eep their mouths shut and let us ho are chiefly concerned work out ur own ways of doing things, half ie misery in the world would be aved.

Another case, and just a minute o tell about it.

Last Tuesday the remnant of a rocery store in the northern sec-on of the city was sold at auction. ess than a year a widow bought for $1,800. She knew nothing at ll about the grocery business, and ie store was run down when she ought it. Still she was advised o buy it by a salesman who after-ard took a job to manage it for er. He thought it could be built p, and after he went in as man-ger he started to build it up in fearful and wonderful way.

The store was doing $450 a week hen he took hold, and he hired ew clerks until there were nine! hink of it. I don't need to go on. ou see the finish. The store went own and down, choked by exces-ve expense, the manager finally ipped out, and after trying hard o sell the place the old lady finally ut it up at auction.

She's another one who was badly lvised. The fellow that got her it may have been a good sales-an, but he was a durned poor lviser. I'll bet she lost over ,000 through him.

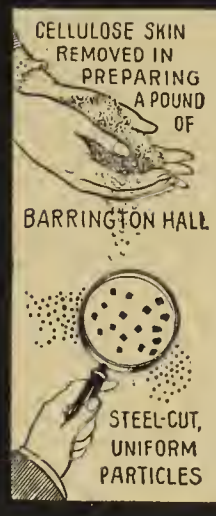
Pity a brick didn't drop on him, o.

COFFEE

that you can drink and enjoy without fear of injurious effects—

Barrington Hall

The Steel-Cut Coffee



Barrington Hall is pure, high grade coffee prepared by our patented process—a common-sense method of treating the berry whereby the substances which contribute nothing to its flavor and healthfulness are removed, and the coffee flavor is preserved to a remarkable degree.

By our process all dust and the bitter cellulose skin, evidently placed by nature around the heart of the berry to protect it, are removed and thrown away; and when you buy a pound of Barrington Hall you get a pound of the best part of the coffee berry only.

STEEL CUT means that the coffee is cut, not ground, into fine, even particles. This cutting does not crush the little oil cells as does grinding and the rich aromatic oil (Food Product), which makes coffee flavor, is preserved. This explains why a pound of Barrington Hall will make 15 to 20 cups more of perfect full strength coffee than would the same coffee if ground in a coffee mill.

THE STROLLER.

The Unique Collier Project.

"Collier's, the National Weekly," has gone further in attempting to create co-operation between the manufacturers of food products and the retail dealers therein, than any other American magazine has ever dreamed of going. As may be seen from the eight special pages which appear in this issue, the weekly is bringing to the attention of over 40,000 retail grocers throughout the country the extensive advertising which certain food manufacturers are doing, all of which as "Collier's" points out, is destined to bring orders to the retail dealers handling the goods.

The manufacturers whose advertising "Collier's" is thus emphasizing to retailers are as follows:—

C. F. Blanke, Tea and Coffee Co., St. Louis, Mo.
S. L. Bartlett Co., Importers of Bensdorf's Royal Dutch Cocoa.

Every product represented here is standard, every one is known from ocean to ocean, and every one is called for in local grocery stores thousands of times every day. To handle such products is both creditable and enterprising because they are unsurpassed in their lines and enterprising because the dealer who handles them is getting benefit from extremely valuable advertising which costs him nothing.

Cleveland, Ohio.

At the last meeting of the Cleveland (Ohio) Retail Grocers' Association a highly interesting discussion was opened by Secretary J. A. Green, who raised the question whether it pays to sell at 10 cents each goods costing $1.05 per dozen. He referred to the greatly increased cost of service, higher rent, extended delivery, increased cost of labor, under which a boy who formerly worked for $6 now demands $9, and rarely earns it. He asserted that he knew of two grocers whose investment in stock and fixtures exceeds $5,000 each, and neither of whom is making the wages of a common laborer.

D. L. Beck suggested as a remedy first that it might be a good thing to color shavings and feed them to the horses instead of oats. Taking a more serious aspect of the case he spoke of having purchased for 5 cents from a neighboring grocer a package of tobacco which cost 7 cents at wholesale. Upon inquiry of the proprietor he was told that he is selling goods at the prices which were given to him by the merchant from whom he bought the store some years ago. Asked whether he knew what the cost was, this grocer told Mr. Beck that his eyesight was bad and that he did not read his bills; had not even kept them in fact. Mr. Beck repeated a long list of articles which are sold upon the same basis by various retailers.

In response to a question, President George J. Shaefer explained the action of the board of directors in recommending that potatoes be purchased hereafter in uniform sacks of the standard size, which is 150 pounds. This is intended to facilitate checking. On receiving a load of potatoes a retailer can readily count the sacks and by weighing an occasional sack of apparently uniform size he can ascertain whether he is receiving the amount for which he paid. Where the sacks are of varying sizes each one would necessarily be weighed in order to check the amount.

Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Cincinnati (Ohio) Retail Grocers' Association is deeply aroused against the Procter & Gamble Soap Co.

There has not been very good feeling between many of the grocers of the city and the Procter & Gamble Co. for some time past, and as a probable result of such feeling the company have found it advisable to call in some of their best men to assist in a strenuous effort which is being made to restore Lenox soap to the position which it at one time held in that city. But the very means employed by the company in trying to accomplish this rather discouraging feat has only served to still further widen the breach which exists between them and the grocers.

Other concerns, in sampling the city with their products, leave a coupon at each house which calls for a bar of soap when presented to the grocer with whom they are trading. This coupon is eventually redeemed by the manufacturer. The sample gets into the house and the grocer gets his profit as on a regular sale. Instead of following this plan, however, the Procter & Gamble Co. leave the soap itself at each house. As it takes about 1,600 boxes of soap to cover Cincinnati, it can readily be seen that the grocers are actual losers to the amount of about $1,400, as each bar given away deprives them of a sale.

Another discordant element in the situation is the fact that the chain stores regularly sell Procter & Gamble soaps at a cut price.

Question: * * *, Pa.—A owns a farm, B is a manufacturing plant, C is a railroad and D is a railroad. C has a switch to plant B, through A's property. Now, D wants to lay a switch to plant B through farm of A. This is the only way D can get to B. This switch of D requires about 1½ acres of a meadow, the most valuable part of the farm, being worth about $100 a year for hay. A wants to sell the whole farm and D refuses and wants to purchase only the 1½ acres. The farm is located in the cement regions and is worth about $300 per acre. If A refuses to sell less than the farm can D have the strip condemned and take it in that way? What would be a reasonable compensation for the strip?

Answer.—If D has the right of eminent domain here at all, it has the right to take simply the strip which it needs without buying the whole farm. What would be proper compensation for the strip is a question of real estate values which I cannot possibly answer without data covering the market values of realty in that neighborhood and the value of the farm before and after the taking. The measure of value, in my judgment, would be the difference between the value of the whole tract before the strip was taken and the value after it was taken.

As to whether the railroad company has the right of eminent domain in this case public corporations such as railroads have the right to condemn land for their corporate uses, always provided that the proposed improvement comprehends some proper extension of their lines. In such a case as this the owner of a manufacturing plant who wants an outlet can himself condemn enough land for that purpose. On the facts as stated by the correspondent, I think there might be some question whether a switch to a single plant would be a proper extension of railroad lines or necessary as an outlet for the plant, since there is already one switch laid. As to this I cannot speak more definitely without a more comprehensive study of the case upon additional data.

Question: G. G. N., Latrobe Pa.—I just received some Maraschino cherries from a firm in Ohio. The invoice is stamped "Guaranteed not to be adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the national and State food law." I had a sample of same kind of goods taken up by the pure food agent about two years ago and they found them impure according to the law of 1895. Then the firm guaranteed them but I never got the full amount of the fine from them that I had to pay. I do not want to have these on sale if they are not all right. Let me know if I was fined on them if I would have any trouble collecting same from firm that sold the goods. I inclose envelope for reply, and you can answer through your paper if you so desire.

Answer.—You are properly protected under the guarantee of purity and in case action is brought against you and you are fined you have a good case against your seller. This you could either pursue by issuing a writ in their home city, through a lawyer there, or attaching anything of the defendant's you could find in Pennsylvania.

The probability is, however, you would not be prosecuted after showing the guarantee, as there is a section of the State Food food law which compels the State Food Commissioner, where a guarantee is given by a concern outside the State, to certify the facts of the case to the Federal Agricultural Department, which will begin an action under the Federal Food law.

Chemists Defend Flour Bleaching.

"Bleaching of Flour as Now Practiced by Millers," by Dr. J. A. Wesener and Prof. G. S. Teller, of the Columbus Laboratory, Chicago, Ill., was the subject of a paper read before the New York section of the Society of Chemical Industry at the first meeting of this year's session, held at the Chemists' Club last week. The authors say in part: "Of late several articles have appeared against the bleaching of flour as now practiced by millers. Bulletin No. 72, issued by the Experiment Station at North Dakota written by E. F. Ladd and R. E. Stallings, and a paper read by Prof. Ladd before the convention of food commissioners at Jamestown, have taken a very positive stand against the art of bleaching, and have denounced such practice as unessential, undesirable, dangerous and a fraud. The authors take radical grounds in regard to the bleaching of flour. In the interest of truth and fair dealing, it is the purpose of this article to show that the bleaching of flour does not leave in it any harmful chemical residuum and that no fraud is practiced by bleaching, but that the bleaching process is a desirable adjunct to the manufacture of flour and improves the flour itself."

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

Canned Vegetable Window for Grocers.

C. H. LOCKWELL, Advertising Manager National Cash Register Company.

Another Canned Goods Display.

It's very easy to arrange a display of canned goods—but it's mighty hard to make one that is distinctive—that gets away from the standard pyramid.

Now here's a display that, while it will take a little longer to arrange than the ordinary sort, is sure to stir things up in the canned goods line.

All that is required is a few screw hooks, a ball of strong thin twine and a card lettered "Canned Goods—$1 a String."

First screw the hooks into the ceiling of the window—commencing about twelve inches from the front corner. Put in the other hooks so as to form a semi-circle that touches the back of your window at the centre and ends about twelve inches from the glass at the front corners.

Next cut your twine in the same number of pieces as you have hooks—each piece being three times as long as the height of your window.

Use twelve cans—preferably assorted—to each string, tying them securely at equal intervals until you have a string of cans that will reach from the top to bottom of your window.

Make a loop at one end of the cord and slip it over one of the hooks. Repeat until you have a string of cans hanging from each hook.

If the window requires it, cover the floor with a bright colored paper—orange, for example—or use autumn leaves, if they can be obtained.

If you wish to do so, you can have each string carry a different assortment and designate each with a letter, viz.: A, B, C, etc., so that customers can indicate the assortment that they wish.

It might even be well to carry this same idea into the store by hanging a few strings at different points. This serves as a reminder and it also induces people to ask about the plan.

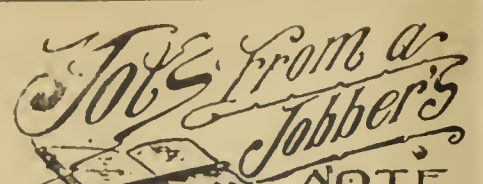
Almeria grapes show a wide range of quality, and therefore of price—$1 to $6. The price for the average grade is $2.50 to $3.50. The receipts show considerable rot, but not as much as last year. This year's crop is supposed to be very large.



The extremely large business which a Philadelphia jobbing house has lately been doing in Lyle's English sugar syrup emphasizes what seems to be the complete destruction of our own industry in the manufacture of high-grade sugar syrup. The head of the jobbing house referred to informed me during the week that so large had the business become that he was sending salesmen as far west as Kansas City, and that these salesmen had booked orders for several hundreds of cases. That this business should go to an English syrup, when we have sugar refineries all over this country, seems to me most remarkable. So far as I know there is but a single brand of American-made sugar syrup which in any way compares with Lyle's. The brand referred to is made in Philadelphia, and in every respect save color is the English brand's equal. The latter has a beautiful honey color which gives it a very beautiful appearance. None of the sugar refineries, which are the natural sources of supply for sugar syrup, treat sugar as a by-product. They all make and sell sugar syrup, but it is not to be compared in any way with the English brand referred to. When asked why they do not give more attention to the product of a fine sugar syrup, the refiners claim there is no demand, but a conclusive answer to this would seem to be the heavy demand which Lyle's has attained. This condition, where there is really only one brand of fancy sugar syrup made in this country, did not always exist. In the old days in Philadelphia there was a brand of sugar syrup made which was quite the equal of Lyle's. I refer to Lovering's Golden Drips, a sugar syrup which in its day was considered very fine. And indeed it was, but it gradually declined until it disappeared entirely.

and with the plausible plea that "he wanted to be sure that the crab meat was all right before he sold it," would call the inspector's attention to it, and ask his opinion on it. The inspector might see nothing wrong with it, but if the dealer, naturally much better informed than he on such things, intimated that it was spoiled, the inspector would naturally condemn it. His manner of condemning it is loose in the extreme. He simply gives the holder a receipt or statement that the goods have been condemned, and leaves it to the holder to himself destroy the goods. The looseness lies in not himself removing and condemning them, for dishonest holders will and do send the shipper the condemnation receipt to show that the goods were unsalable and worthless, and then sell them and pocket the receipts. I have personal knowledge that this practice is going on in Philadelphia and I doubt not in other cities, not only in crab or crab meat, which I use as an illustration, but in other food products also sold on commission.

AMONG THE TRADE.

Prices on new Singapore pineapple for spring shipment have just been named by certain importing concerns. The figures show a slight increase over last prices, part of which is said by the importers to be accounted for by improved quality.

The Freyling-Bradley Co., of Philadelphia, has applied for a charter to do a wholesale and retail grocery business. The incorporators are Louis Freyling, Chas. A. Bradley and Wm. E. Fritz.

Considering the large grape crop, the price keeps high—12-14 cents for small baskets. The demand is good.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as near as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long-looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. BRECKENRIDGE.

Jamaica Ginger.

This is the finest ginger known in the market, and realizes the highest prices; the best being known as plant ginger.

The cultivation of ginger in Jamaica has long received special attention, and it has been found that the production of the best depends largely upon the ground in which it is grown, the deep black soil of the virgin forest being most favorable to it. When the soil has become too poor to grow white or plant ginger, then blue ginger, an inferior variety is cultivated. The drying, however, is of more vital importance than the growing, and in wet seasons an evaporator has to be employed to drive off the moisture.

The ginger is prepared as either coated or uncoated ginger. The latter is that prepared for medicinal purposes. In curing it the roots are simply scraped, washed and well dried in the sun. It should have a pale buff hue, a striated and fibrous surface; should break easily, exhibiting a short farinaceous fracture with numerous bristle-like fibres.

Jordon Almonds.

The most esteemed variety of sweet almonds. They take their name not from the River Jordan, but from a corruption of jardin, or garden, to distinguish them from cultivated almonds, and are grown in the Malaga district of Spain.

There are two sorts, one large, flat and oblong in form, while the other is remarkable for its brittleness. They are more plump, less pointed at one end and less rounded at the other. Jordan almonds have also thicker and harder shells and somewhat paler skins than other sorts, and are more delicate in flavor. The shells containing the sweet kernels are all cracked by hand, giving employment to large numbers of girls. Imported from Malaga in 25-pound boxes.

Jordan almonds appear to be getting smaller in size every year, and this is explained to arise from the fact that the medium and lower grades only are now cultivated, the production of firsts and seconds being almost nil.

Be Proud of Your Olive Oil

You may remember the recent tests which the United States Government made into all brands of imported olive oil.

Those tests (Government Bulletin 77, page 55) proved Nicelle Olive Oil to be superior to all the other brands tested. Nicelle Oil is made and bottled in Nice, France. It is the highest type of pure olive oil producible.

Sell olive oil you can be proud of. There are so many brands you can't.

National Secretary Green Warns Against Short Count Potatoes

Says Retailers Can Be Victimized If They Don't Look Out. One Case Where There Were Six Sacks Short. The Problem of Raising Prices on Package Goods Where Figures Are Marked on the Carton.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 31, 1907.

Some time ago I advised the trade in regard to being cautious about the weight of cheese. This was called to the grocers' notice to such an extent that the trade, through the general discussion in the papers, were benefited to a very great extent. One other line of goods which has come to our notice is potatoes.

Many of our merchants are about to lay in their winter supply of potatoes, and very often are careless in regard to the weight when they are delivered at the store.

Not long since an instance was called to our attention where a lot of potatoes being weighed while the buyer was in attendance were six sacks short when delivered at the store. This was discovered by mere accident.

It is fair to presume that this condition exists in many places, and this timely notice to the retailers would seem at this time to be very desirable.

It is not because the merchant has not the ability to discern, but on account of carelessness in not weighing goods of bulk that come into his store, and his loss begins before he sells one dollar's worth of the goods in question.

Since the last issue of the trade press bulletin several letters have come to this office in response to the article in regard to the increased cost of manufactured products distributed by retailers to the consuming public, one of which is as follows:—

> Dear Mr. Green:—Your article in the trade press correspondence of October 12th in regard to the retailers raising prices is good advice, but I would ask: As retailers, how are we going to ask 11 or 12 cents a package for Quaker Oats, the price we ought to get, when it is printed on the package to sell for 10 cents?
> Now, I think it is about time for the retailers to say something about their business, and not allow the manufacturers to tell us what we shall pay for goods and also what we shall sell them for.
>
> This is not only a local and State question, but one of national importance, and is of interest to every retailer in the country.
> Please give this your attention.
> Yours very truly,
> FREDERICK HUMPHREY.
> Boston, Mass.

We are somewhat surprised to learn that package goods of any description have on them the selling price, especially those of cereals.

At several of the State conventions during the last year this matter has been taken up and discussed, and the manufacturers have been asked to discontinue this method, and in all instances have complied as far as our knowledge goes.

If we are mistaken in this matter it would be well to have the local associations wherever this price on the package is in vogue take this matter up and send a unanimous request to the manufacturers that this be discontinued.

I again take this opportunity of declaring that the retailer is not getting for himself a fair remuneration.

The time has come when a radical change must take place, and this change can only come through associated effort.

The time has come when the retailer not only should, but is compelled to take a decided stand as regards the conducting of his own business.

The local secretary is the one who should think out and suggest to the members of his association some plan whereby they shall know by what means they can better their condition.

In other words, the secretary should be a man who has the time to think and the ability to plan and explain.

If he is able to fill this position there will no longer be any reason for any one to ask, "What good is the association to me, or what benefit shall I derive therefrom?"

Three things are absolutely necessary for the future welfare of the retail grocer: An absolute knowledge of the cost of goods; the cost of distribution, and ability to collect for the goods distributed.

JOHN A. GREEN,
National Secretary

Delaware's Food Law Now Operative.

A conference was held at Wilmington, Del., during the week between officials of the State Board of Health and the State Board of Pharmacy to frame regulations for putting in operation the new State Pure Food Law which became operative on the first of November. Dr. E. W. Cooper, president, and Dr. A. E. Frantz, a member of the Board of Health; Dr. Willard Smith and Oscar C. Draper, a member of the State Board of Pharmacy, were present and discussed the ground fully, preparatory to framing regulations which will be harmonious and effective in enforcing the two branches of the law. The members of both boards have determined that the law shall be observed, and they intend to see that many of the discrepancies that have crept into the drug business and food supply business will be eliminated as soon as the new measure becomes operative.

Florida is still shipping egg plants North, ranging from $2 to $2.25 per crate. The quality is good. A few Jerseys are still about at 50 cents. The demand is only fair.

Thomas Martindale & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

"THE BOTTOM AS GOOD AS THE TOP"

Our Apelpi Evaporated Apples are a prime grade of New York fruit, selected from the best flavored and matured apples.

The square cartons are lined with waxed paper and their contents are guaranteed to be as fine as anything in the market.

Every piece of fruit is hand picked and must be perfect before it goes into our machines.

The result is a product for which the demand is not only enormous, but constantly growing.

Ritter's Guaranty

In compliance with the rules and regulations for the enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act published by the Commission appointed for this purpose, we have filed a guaranty covering all our products with the Agricultural Department in Washington under the serial number 1017.

In the future all our products will be labeled in accordance with Regulation Nine as follows: Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906, No. 1017.

This guaranty is sufficient and covers every sale we make and no individual guaranties are necessary.

It has always been our aim to manufacture pure and wholesome food, to comply with existing laws and to protect all who buy our products, and we shall carry out this principle in the future.

We hope to deserve your continued confidence and patronage.

Bought Simply, Because She Liked the Glass Package

It's odd what little things make sales sometimes. A grocer told us the other day that the day before a woman had bought a jar of Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa simply because she liked the novelty of the glass package. She didn't ask any questions about the peculiar characteristics of the cocoa; she liked the glass jar and bought.

There is a point in that for grocers who study the public—the useful novelty is usually the seller.

Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa, the only cocoa packed in glass, has a smoother flavor than any other cocoa made. That is because our exclusive process of making takes out certain substances that other manufacturers leave in.

Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

They Wouldn't Imitate It If It Wasn't So Good

The Ramly Cigarette is the finest 10c. Turkish cigarette ever made. It is so good other manufacturers try to make their goods look like the Ramly, but there the similarity ends.

If you want to get a run on cigarettes, get people to go out of their way to come to to you, put in the Ramly. Remember how it is spelled—R-A-M-L-Y.

Left Behind on the Sand

Since you first heard of Ralston Health Food and Purina Whole Wheat Flour, how many breakfast cereals have you known to be born and died?

Hundreds of brands came in on the popular cereal wave, but when the wave receded the shipwrecked brands were left stranded.

More grocers are handling Ralston Health Food and Purina Whole Wheat Flour satisfactorily at this minute than ever before in the history of our business.

Partly because of our wide advertising, but mainly because both brands were fitted to survive. They are perfect foods!

Say, Mr. Grocer:—

Popping corn, like nearly everything else, is mighty high this season, still you can sell a 20-oz. package "Brad's Tip-Top" at 10 cents and make a fair profit; a 10-oz. package at 5 cents, or a 1-lb. package "I-X-L" at 10 cents showing better profit, so it's up to you. This Cabinet Will Attract Your Customers' Attention

Can you think of a better method of selling cakes than by bringing them to your customers' attention in an attractive manner? You do this best by the use of a Durham Display Cake Cabinet. This cabinet enables you to handle your cakes in a clean, sanitary manner, and it soon pays for itself in preventing the losses you are accustomed to having, such as breakage from constantly moving the cans; sampling, all of you suffer from that; moisture and dust, nothing so hard to sell as a musty, dusty cake.

The cabinet is made of highly-polished oak, in sizes to hold 12, 16, 20 and 24 cans of standard size. The cans rest upon elevated roller trays, easy to slide in and out.

Further particulars and prices on request.

We Don't SHAKE the TREES

Olive Oil is usually made from what falls from the olive trees when they are shaken. It won't take you a moment to realize what this means. Other things beside good olives fall, bad ones for example, insects and lots of things that don't improve olive oil.

For DE RAGO we squeeze only perfect olives, the result is perfect oil. If you sell perfect oil, which means DE RAGO, your customers will see the difference and keep coming to you for it.

Besides we have advertised it very widely to your customers.

What Rennet Must Do to Be Good

Good rennet has gotten to be one of the most staple dessert specialties that a grocer can sell.

If it is good. To be good, it must coagulate milk in a few minutes and it must not spoil. James T. Shinn's Liquid Rennet fills these requirements under a double-barreled guarantee. And besides that, it has the flavor—the clean, delicate, penetrating flavor that makes rennet-eating grow into a habit.

As to profit, $3.00 return on a $1.50 investment is good enough, eh?

MARKED "ENTERPRISE"

Grocers who are posted will not accept a Coffee Mill unless it bears the name "ENTERPRISE." The excellence of the grinders has been proven by many years' efficient service. The strength of their construction cuts out the expense of repairs, and the beauty of their finish makes them an ornament in the store. Get our catalogue at once, illustrating every desirable kind of Rapid Grinding and Pulverizing Mills, from the smallest hand mills up to the most powerful electrically driven mills.

Ham Confidence

There is a vast difference between merely "ham" and Swift's PREMIUM Ham.

The grocer who just keeps "ham," who buys no special brand, and buys from no particular packer, is just as certain to have a small and irregular ham trade as night is certain to follow day.

But the grocer who sells only Swift's PREMIUM ham, which is always the same and always fine, will have a ham trade that amounts to something. His trade won't care to experiment with other grocers; they're getting what they want and they're getting it all the time.

PREMIUM Hams are tender, delicious and—this is important—well advertised.

L&S Pickles

SUGAR OR SACCHARINE?

You can easily see the difference between L. & S. Pickles and other pickles. Eat them one after the other, or let your customer do it, and you'll have the best possible argument for the L. & S. brand.

The actual difference is this: L. & S. Pickles are not simply sweetened—they are preserved through and through with granulated sugar. This makes the inside as good as the outside, and gives the whole pickle an appetizing evenness of flavor which no other pickle has.

Many other brands are not preserved at all—simply sweetened with saccharine, a chemical imitation of sugar. This is not only harmful and forbidden by the food law but it doesn't do the work. The saccharine-sweetened pickle is simply sweet on the outside.

LUTZ & SCHRAMM COMPANY, Allegheny, Pa.

How to Answer Their Questions

Put a box of I-V Washing Tablets on your counter. They will be such a novelty that every woman who comes in will ask what they are and what they will do. Tell them this:—

1—They contain no acid of any sort.
2—They wash clothes without rubbing.
3—They make clothes beautifully white;
4—They can be used in hard water;
5—They take stains from table linen without any rubbing whatever.

Any one of these points would sell a package—just see the women's eyes glisten when you name them all.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES

—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

Walker Patent Pivoted Bin Co.

Offices and Showrooms
18 to 24 S. Seventh St.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Don't Buy a Cheap Wagon

If you do, you'll remember this advice. A cheap wagon looks nearly as well in the factory as our "J. M.," but oh, what a difference in six months!

The "J. M." wagon is the best delivery wagon made. Only the finest materials go into it, and they're put together right, too.

If we haven't what you want, though we probably have, we'll build it for you.

A Food Product For Leather

A patent leather polish that will really shine brilliantly, and yet save instead of spoil the leather, is a thing that will sell as staply as bread. And a grocer or a general storekeeper can sell it just as well as a shoe dealer.

Superb Patent Leather Paste makes old patent leather look like new, and it will go far to keep it from getting old. It actually feeds the leather and makes it lustrous and pliable. The shine is water-proof, too.

Large size, per gross, $9; Medium size, per gross, $5

If 1000 Retailers in Philadelphia Recommended Us, Would YOU Believe in Us?

One of the hardest propositions which confront the retailer is to turn their bad debts into cash. Lots of them have tried different collection agencies, paid retaining or subscription fees and got no results; so it is hard to convince them that any one can help to bring the beats to book.

We show you how to collect your own accounts; nobody handles your money but you. We can give you the names of a thousand merchants in Philadelphia whom we have shown how to get money due them which had been charged off long before they heard of us.

It costs you nothing to find out what our plan is—can you afford not to?

Retail Grocer Gets Another Bang

Last Week "Woman's Home Companion" Accused Him of Keeping a Filthy Store. This Week the "Ladies' Home Journal" Persuades His Customers to Go Over His Head and Buy at Wholesale. Portions of a Remarkable Article by Woman Writer.

The women's papers seem to have joined themselves into a conspiracy against the retail grocer. In the last issue the "Grocery World" republished a portion of an article from the "Woman's Home Companion," informing women consumers that their grocers kept filthy stores and were constantly perpetrating low tricks in order to keep the fact concealed.

Now comes the November issue of the "Ladies' Home Journal" with an article on "How Can We Live More Cheaply." The author is a woman named Mary Mills West. The gist of Mrs. or Miss West's ideas on how we can live more cheaply is that consumers should go over the retailer's head and buy their groceries at wholesale. Her views and suggestions on the subject are interesting in the extreme. Part of them are reproduced below:—

The difficulties of individual wholesale buying may be overcome by some simple plan of neighborly co-operation. There is no need to be alarmed at the word, though it may at first suggest something theoretical and technical. No elaborate organization is required; the only thing essential is a small group of families who will agree to put their lists of staple household requirements into the hands of some one of their number who is willing and able to give the necessary time and thought to the buying. The person selected for this task will add together the amounts of the various items—so much sugar, so much flour, so many dozens of various articles—then go to different wholesale grocers for estimates on the consolidated list. Having secured these estimates, if different qualities are bid upon, she may call a meeting of the contributors to help her in deciding where and what brands to buy; or this may be left to her discretion. It may prove advantageous to divide the bill, if the price is noticeably lower on some articles in one estimate than in another. It is likely, however, that a satisfactory bid can be secured on the entire list, which may be subject to a further discount for cash. As soon as the prices are ascertained the bill of each contributor should be made out and presented at once, for unless the buyer or some other member of the group has sufficient faith and ready money to advance the amount of the whole bill success and harmony will depend upon the individual accounts being paid in advance. The buyer will soon find where she can purchase to best advantage, so that after a little experience it will not be necessary to ask for competitive bids except at long intervals.

The simplest form of co-operative buying is where one person takes all the initiative by purchasing some article at wholesale and dividing with one or more neighbors. A 60-pound box of dates, for example, may be bought at about one-half the retail price, but is a larger quantity than one family is likely to use all winter. By sawing such a box in two in the middle two families may enjoy the benefit of the wholesale price. Another neighbor bought a whole crate of oranges—large, luscious fruit, which at retail would have cost 35 cents a dozen—for $4. As there were about eighteen dozen oranges in the crate the cost was about 22 cents a dozen, a saving of 37 per cent., in which several of the purchaser's friends were glad to participate. It would be no more than fair in such cases as this for the person who assumes all the trouble and risk to compensate herself in some degree by selling to her neighbors at a slight advance over the wholesale price; there will still be a considerable gain to each consumer as compared with the retail price. Or a group of neighbors might arrange to buy one article each at wholesale from time to time, dividing with each other at cost.

Of course, wholesale buying is not equally feasible for all kinds of supplies. In determining what things it is best to buy in large quantities the first thing to be considered is their keeping qualities. Perishable goods which have been in cold storage deteriorate rapidly when taken out, and are not to be recommended for wholesale purchase, at least by individual families. On the other hand, there are some things that improve with age, and these should always be bought in quantities. Soap, for example, wastes away rapidly if used soon after it comes from the factory, so there is a double economy in getting it by the case and letting it dry out thoroughly before it is used. Several brands of soap in common use which retail at 5 cents a cake can be had in boxes of 100 cakes at 4 cents each, a saving of one-fifth, besides the great economy in use; while soap powders, which retail at 5 cents a package, sell at 45 and 48 cents a dozen packages, a gain in one case of twenty-five, and in the other of twenty per cent.

After some inquiry among my friends and neighbors I have learned of only two families who actually avail themselves to any considerable extent of the advantages of wholesale buying. One of these families lives in Washington, and the other in Philadelphia. My Washington friends of the storage-closet buy several hundred pounds of sugar at a time, paying 4½ cents a pound when their neighbors are paying 5 cents. They buy green coffee by the sack, at the rate of about 15 cents a pound, and I can testify that it is of excellent flavor. Canned goods of all sorts they buy by the dozen, or by the case of two dozen cans, at a considerable discount; condensed milk by the case of three dozen cans, at about 7 cents a can—a saving of 30 per cent. They have discovered an excellent brand of gelatine which costs 35 cents a pound. As the ordinary 10-cent package of gelatine contains only 1 ounce the price in bulk is less than one-fourth the retail price of practically the same article in a slightly different form. Among the other articles which this family finds it worth while to buy in quantities are cornmeal by the peck, baking powder and cocoa in 5-pound lots, starch and soda by the box, salt by the peck, and vanilla flavoring extract by the dozen bottles. Figs are bought in 10-pound boxes at about 7 cents a pound—less than half the retail price; and an occasional ham of a quality which retails at 20 or 25 cents a pound is bought whole at less than 12 cents a pound.

The Philadelphia family buys its sugar in hundred-pound lots, and its salt by the dozen small sacks, of the kind which usually retail at 5 cents, for 42 cents a dozen or 3½ cents apiece. This family buys roasted coffee, so that wholesale buying is out of the question; yet in 5-pound packages a 38-cent coffee is obtained at the rate of 35 cents a pound. In the case of tea something of the advantage of wholesale buying is enjoyed in getting only 2 pounds at a time; for 2 pounds of the best Oolong costs only 70 cents. Last November this family bought 8 bushels of potatoes at 70 cents a bushel; before the supply was exhausted the current price had risen to $1 a bushel. A 50-pound tin of lard, also purchased in November, cost 11½ cents a pound; the retail price was 13 cents for a time, but then rose to 15 cents. Ten-cent packages of raisins are bought by the dozen for 90 cents, a saving of one-fourth; on currants the saving is about the same. Canned goods are bought by the case at a decided gain. This family has also discovered that brooms come in bunches of six at a $1.20 a bunch; as the same brooms retail at 25 cents each this represents a saving of one-fifth. Matches are bought by the dozen boxes at one-fourth less than the price for one box. The experience of this family shows that it is not always necessary to go to a wholesale grocer in order to get the benefit of wholesale prices, though slightly better figures could probably be obtained by so doing.

The price-lists of mail-order houses sometimes show comparatively slight differences between the wholesale and retail prices, but this is because by selling directly to the consumer these houses eliminate middlemen's profits on both large and small quantities, and need to charge only a little more for goods in small packages to pay for the extra trouble of handling them. These mail-order catalogues are interesting exhibits, and may often help the consumer to avoid paying excessive prices on staple goods to a local retailer. The freight or express charges are often paid by the merchant when goods are bought to a certain amount.

Coffee, tea, dried fruits and many other articles can often be bought by mail to advantage.

Olive oil is another article which connoisseurs sometimes prefer to order from some well-known firm rather than trust to the taste of a local retailer. Olive oil affords an excellent illustration of the difference in price between small and medium packages. For $2.50 one may buy a gallon of an excellent brand of imported oil, which costs 25 cents for a small bottle purporting to hold half a pint, but actually containing only 5 ounces. As there are 16 full half-pints to a gallon the gain in buying the larger package is something like 40 per cent. For those to whom a gallon is too much to buy at one time there is considerable saving in buying oil by the half-gallon or quart, especially if it is purchased in tins to avoid the large "thumb" so commonly found in the bottoms of bottles, displacing an appreciable amount of the liquid. Maple syrup is another commodity which should be bought in tins rather than in bottles, and preferably by the gallon rather than the quart.

In connection with the article appears a list of wholesale prices of staple groceries compared with the retail, purporting to show the savings. The list is as follows:—

Ammonia, 8 cents a bottle, 90 cents a dozen.

Ammonia, 10 cents a bottle, $1.10 a dozen.

Apricots, 12½ cents a pound, $2.88 for 25 pounds.

Cannonsburg (Pa.) Grocers Themselves Go After Adulterated Food.

Plans of Live Retail Grocers' Association at Above Town. Carbondale Grocers to Establish Building and Loan Association.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Erie, Pa., Nov. 7, 1907.

James Foust, Dairy and Food Commissioner of Pennsylvania, gave a very interesting talk to the members of the Retail Grocers' Association of New Castle and vicinity at their last meeting.

The business men of Homestead celebrated Hallow-een on October 31st. Prizes were awarded to the amount of $200. Secretary O. T. Hill was awarded first prize on decoration of his grocery wagon. This was Homestead's first attempt, and proved so successful that it will be continued next year.

The Business Men's Association of Carbondale admitted eight new members at its last meeting, and has now a membership of 101. Arrangements are being made for an annual banquet. The association is also considering the establishment of a building and loan association.

The Merchants' Protective Association of Cannonsburg has applied for a charter, and will hereafter be known as the Canonsburg Business Men's Association of Cannonsburg, Washington County, Pa. A committee of grocers is doing excellent work in the detection of adulterated foods and persons peddling decayed fruits within the borough. Care is used to see that all peddlers have obtained their licenses. The work of the organization has decreased credits at least 40 per cent.

The Salt Industry of Ohio.

"Grocery World" Staff Correspondent Visits Plant of Cleveland Salt Co., and Describes its Tremendous Scope. How Butterine is Made.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 7, 1907.

I wonder if you or many of our constituents know how we get most of our salt? I am free to admit that my ideas on the subject were very hazy until I met Mr. G. L. Meade, the secretary and general manager of the Cleveland Salt Co. Mr. Meade is a most genial and well-informed gentleman, partially explained by the fact that he is a native of Philadelphia.

I learned from Mr. Meade that some 2,000 feet under the surface of practically the whole State of Ohio lies a strata of rock salt some 75 feet thick. The Cleveland Salt Co. has built a plant covering five acres, at each corner of which they have sunk wells to the salt. Into these wells two pipes are run three inches in diameter. Hot water is run down one of them to dissolve the salt and it is then brought to the surface through the other in the form of brine. This brine is put through a series of processes which climax in the salt which finds its way to our tables.

This company brings to the surface, refines and ships from 350 to 400 tons of salt a day. As the brine only yields a small percentage of pure salt, you can imagine the enormous quantities of it that must be handled by their complicated machinery.

The plant is kept working day and night and Sundays, and despite its mighty capacity the company is able to fill only about 50 to 75 per cent. of its orders.

My ideas about Butterine have undergone a great change since my visit to the plant of the Capital City Dairy Co., at Columbus, Ohio. I should never hesitate again to eat their "Purity" butterine. In fact, I would much rather eat it than a great big percentage of real butter which I have had set before me during this trip.

I have visited many plants, but have yet to see one which excels this for immaculate cleanliness, and I have seen mighty few which even aproach it. The floors and walls of the whole place are scrubbed every day with hot water. Every workman is spotlessly clean. Car after car of pure cream coming from the company's own dairies comes to the plant every day and is mixed with the pure beef product. It is worked just as the farmers' wives work it, except that much greater consideration is given to sanitary conditions. It is then pressed into pounds, wrapped in white paper and packed in new cases lined with white paper.

No one, no matter how particular, should hesitate to eat "Purity" butterine after they had seen it made.

It occurs to me that it might be a good idea to pass some laws compelling butter creameries to keep their plants as sweet and clean as that of the Capital City Dairy Co. and to manufacture their product with the same scrupulous attention to sanitary conditions.

Oleo Still Selling In New York. Influence of Financial Trouble.
New French Fish Product. Clerks Move For Shorter Hours.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, November 8,1907.

Recent events have led to the belief that there is a renewal of the illegal oleomargarine trade in New York and agents of the State Department of Agriculture have been busy this week looking for violations of the law. An arrest in one case is said to have resulted from an accidental revelation. After the sale of oleomargarine was made unlawful in this state, several years ago, there were for a time many prosecutions of grocers and others. The imposition of fines and the sending of one man to prison, were effective, and the sale of the prohibited product practically came to an end for a time. Every now and then the possible profits tempt some men to run the risk of dealing in imitation butter.

Eighteen cases of oleomargarine were seized Monday by Acting Commissioner of Agriculture of the State, Henry H. Kracke, and Internal Revenue Officers Moore, McOmber and Long, at 172 Chambers St. Frederick Schaeffer was arrested, charged with having unstamped oleomargarine in his possession. He was later arraigned before United States Commissioner Shields and held in $1,000 for further examination.

Mr. Kracke said that he was recently in a downtown restaurant where he found oleomargarine on the table. From the proprietor he ascertained that Schaeffer had sold the oleomargarine.

Schaeffer, the officers say, claimed that he was working for a man named "Williams," but was unable to give "Williams'" address. A boy found working on the premises said that he received his salary from Schaeffer.

The account of Mr. Kracke detecting the oleomargarine while he was eating lunch, does not give all of the sources of information which came to the authorities. It is said that former employes of concerns handling the article have also supplied information that is deemed to be important.

The authorities say that the temptation to sell oleomargarine is like that to sell liquor without a license. In most of the cases the dealers have been careful to pay the federal tax, so that their only liability came under the state law.

The authorities also say that few retail grocers now take any chance of getting into trouble by selling oleomargarine and any business of the kind may be generally traced to a supposed wholesale dealer or broker. He tries to sell to a few large consumers such as owners of restaurants, stewards and boarding house keepers, who will "keep quiet," just as in the case of the customers who buy liquor from an unlicensed store.

Queer results and annoyances of many kinds are naturally arising out of the banking situation. One of the best known retail grocers in the city sent a check, drawn on a bank which had for the time suspended payment—he did not know it—and the check was protested, although the grocer would have drawn on other banks in which he has accounts, if the holder had only sent it back to him. It was the first time in a long career that a check of the grocer had been protested and he was a pretty angry merchant. The small manufacturer in another city who allowed this to happen will lose some trade from the retailer.

The use of bank checks instead of cash in paying employes, has been confined, thus far, to a few concerns, but the grocers realize that if the practice should spread, as it is said to have done in the west, they must be prepared to make the best of it. If employes get checks instead of money they will look in many instances to the grocer to accept the checks for goods and to pay the balances in cash. This will increase the strain on some grocers' capital before they pass on the checks to jobbers or manufacturers.

BARBER & PERKINS, Wholesale Cash Grocers 29, 31, 33 N. Water Street 28 N. Delaware Avenue Phila., Pa.

More serious at the moment is the situation as to those who have money tied up in several banks in New York and Brooklyn that have suspended. There are some grocers as well as their customers among the depositors. The general assurances as to the ability of the banks ultimately to pay in full does not help pay bills just now, but it is supposed that, with the possible exception of one or two of the smaller banks, arrangements will soon be made so that depositors may get at least some of their money.

Even as to the action of the savings banks in requiring 30 days' notice from depositors—while everybody agrees as to this being entirely proper—still it bears a little on the resources of grocers as well as other merchants by increasing the demands upon them for credit.

It is also observed that some of the people who are always ready to defraud a grocer, are taking advantage of the situation to ask for credit and tell of their money being locked up in a bank, although they have not a dollar in it. The possibility of bad checks being put in circulation is also kept in view by the wise grocer who makes sure as to the identity of the people from whom he accepts these substitutes for cash.

As one of the large western milling companies has insisted on the grocery jobbers paying old accounts before new orders are accepted, some jobbers have passed the thing along by requiring cash from the retailers on orders for this company's flour. This doubtless curtails the sales and the jobbers rather think that the millers will show a little more forbearance after a time.

Small mackerel, eight or ten to the can, put up in oil, in tomato, lemon and other sauces, are among the new articles recently imported from France, and it is said that the scarcity of the sardine crop led to the use of these little fish as substitutes. Other new delicacies also show the ingenuity of the packers abroad and possibly reflect also the influence of the food law in requiring that the labels be specific in describing the contents of each can.

The movement of the Retail Grocery Clerks' Association to obtain shorter hours for themselves and their employers is getting aid in various ways. The La Fayette Avenue Presbyterian Church in Brooklyn last week indorsed the position of the clerks and asked that all members of the church refrain from buying groceries after 7 P. M. It was set forth that 40,000 men in the stores of New York would get the benefit if everybody bought their groceries before the hour mentioned.

In opening a new candy department in his Vesey street store today, L. J. Callanan, for the first time in his long career as a grocer, announced souvenirs in the form of little boxes of exquisite confections given to his customers. He also printed and distributed a statement telling why he would not sell Huyler's candy. He learned that he could obtain a full line of Huyler's candies only by agreeing to sell no other kinds of candy. Without such an agreement he could get from Huyler only the "specialties." So he decided not to sell any Huyler candies, but to have full lines of high-grade candies of other manufacturers.

It is a great pity that some retail grocers so often unthinkingly put themselves in a position to merit the contempt of business men of a larger scope with whom they come in contact.

Forcing a Jobber's Generosity.

For instance, a Philadelphia jobbing house has, or rather had, a retail customer who bought an occasional small bill, but who paid for it promptly, and in other ways presented all the earmarks of an intelligent business man.

In payment of his last bill, this retailer sent a check from which he had made a deduction of 50 cents—"to pay for two tickets for a supper which was to be given by the grocer's church"! Naturally the jobber returned the check, with the statement that he did not want the tickets and would not pay for them. The retailer remitted another check, this time in full, but since that time has purchased no more goods there.

Now, the principle here is not whether the jobber should or should not have considered it good business to contribute 50 cents toward a supper in which a customer was interested. The question is whether he should have submitted to being held up for it. For when that grocer, arbitrarily and without authority, deducted half a dollar from an undisputed debt due, he held the jobber up—literally took money from his pocket. Naturally not with the slightest flavor of dishonest motive; for all the "Grocery World" knows the retailer in question is as honest as the sun. But the result was precisely the same—the jobber was deprived of a sum of money without his consent. It would have been perfectly regular to ask the jobber to contribute, but to force him to, willy nilly, was wholly without excuse.

The Wrong Time to Act.

The National Retail Grocers' Association and other grocers' organizations have recently busied themselves with the problem how the retail grocer could practicably raise his prices so as to get back his old profits. It seems to have been conceded that an unduly large part of the recent advances in food prices has come out of the grocer's profits, he being unwilling or unable to pass along to his customer all the advances that came to him.

For this generosity toward the consumer the grocer is deserving of appreciation, and the first installment thereof is meted out to him in an article in the November number of the "Ladies' Home Journal," portions of which appear elsewhere. The title of the article is "How Can We Live More Cheaply?" and the answer to the question, which the article itself supplies, is, "ignore the retailer and buy groceries of the jobber." The "Ladies' Home Journal" is supposed to be read by 5,000,000 consumers, all of whom, in return for his exacting from them, for probably one year, much smaller profits than he could decently expect to get, are asked to concertedly follow a plan which if carried out will inevitably destroy his business.

The retailer's grievance here does not lie so much in the suggestion for co-operative buying which will leave him out, as in making the suggestion at this time, just after he has borne a burden which belonged to his customer. With co-operative buying among consumers grocers must take their chance. If it is legitimate for grocers to buy co-operatively to eliminate the jobber, as grocers are doing in a hundred places, equally legitimate is it for consumers to buy co-operatively to eliminate the retailer. The two movements belong closely together; they are logical, consecutive steps in the campaign which seeks the elimination of all middlemen. The retailer can take his chance with co-operative buying when it comes, just as the jobber is taking his chance with it now. What he has a right to complain of at this time is simply of the scheme to squelch him while his shoulders are still bending under the consumer's burden.

The Cash Basis.

J. K. Armsby, the widely known broker and commission merchant, gave an interview to one of the New York papers last week on the influence of the financial squeeze upon the grocery business. In the course of this he said:—

> One of the immediate effects of the conservative policy of conducting the grocery business that has been brought into being by recent events will be the contraction of credit. The average time between the date of shipment of goods and the day when the jobber counted upon getting his money from the retailer has heretofore been ninety days. I think we are going to see that time cut to thirty days. The retailers' and the country stores will also contract their credits and this will mean bringing business practically to a cash basis, which will be an excellent thing for all concerned. Long credits encourage speculation and induce people to buy more than they need. With business on a cash basis the buyer is compelled to be careful in his ventures and overtrading is prevented.

Anything which speeds the day when business will be done for cash is a public boon, no matter how much worse than the disease the remedy seems at the time. There is one thing certain: The hotter grows competition, the more remote becomes the prospect of a general cash basis. For such a revolution could only come from unity of purpose on the part of merchants, and for this unity competition, that is, competition beyond a certain point, is the antidote always.

Still, the "Grocery World" has every reason to believe that eventually the cash basis will come.

Resolutions Against the Tobacco Trust.

The St. Paul (Minn.) Retail Grocers' Association has adopted resolutions denouncing the American Tobacco Co. for its efforts to subsidize wholesale grocery salesmen into pushing Trust tobaccos to the exclusion of other brands. This impresses the "Grocery World" as a peculiarly weak attitude to take in the premises for two reasons: The first is that ten thousand resolutions a minute might strike the Tobacco Trust but would glance harmlessly off its elephantine hide without being felt. Second, there is only one effective way of blocking the Tobacco Trust's scheme, and that lies in preventing the subsidizing of salesmen from having any result. In other words, refusing to buy Trust tobaccos from the subsidized salesmen. Unless the plan is to follow the resolutions the resolutions are, as stated, impotent, and if such a plan is to be followed no resolutions are necessary.

Beans from Florida are among the newest lines to come forward. The price ranges from $1.50 to $2 per basket of one-third barrel. The quality is good and the demand fair. The price is too low to make present shipments profitable to growers.

Free to "Grocery World" Readers

The "Grocery World" has on hand about five hundred copies of a book on window dressing, originally published by Sprague, Warner & Co., of Chicago, Ill. It was originally intended to use the book as a premium, but after inspection it was considered scarcely good enough, and since that the copies have lain on our shelves because of uncertainty as to what use to make of them. It must not be assumed that the book is worthless—it has a number of good things in it, but is scarcely up to what the "Grocery World" thinks such a book should be.

Now we propose to give a copy to any subscriber who may want it, free of all cost save the postage of seven cents.

Send seven cents and the book is yours.

Still Fighting for Benzoate of Soda.

nother Meeting of Manufacturers Before Federal Food Board. Two Large Associations Argue That Use of Benzoate as a Preservative is Imperatively Necessary, While Two Concerns Say It is Not Necessary, and Argue Against Its Use. National Food Manufacturers' Association Files Brief.

ecial correspondence of "Grocery World."
Washington, D. C.,
Nov. 8, 1907.

There was a spicy time at the fice of the Secretary of Agriculre on Tuesday, when a further id very spirited discussion was id before the Federal Food oard, together with Secretary of griculture Wilson, upon the ill mooted question whether the e of benzoate of soda shall be rmitted after this year. Pickle, reserve and catsup manufacrers were present. Some ought benzoate should be alwed, while others took the potion that it should not be.

The chief petitioner for the ntinued use of benzoate was the ational Pickle Packers' Associaon, which was represented by an torney. The attorney was the st speaker. He said his clients mprised about sixty firms with combined capital of $100,000,o. His people believed in pure od and would stop the use of nzoate to-morrow if they ought it harmful. They did not ink so, however, and contended at there was an entire absence evidence that benzoate had er harmed any one. The atrney discounted Dr. Wiley's periments, which were said to ve revealed a harmful quality benzoate, on the ground that e subjects knew they were ing dosed, and were therefore prehensive, which had its effect on their health; and also on the ound that the benzoate was not ministered by Dr. Wiley as it ould be in food. The attorney id if benzoate were not permitd most of the members of his sociation would be forced out of siness.

The next speaker was a reprentative of Heinz & Co., of Pittsrg, who said benzoate was not cessary. He declared that einz & Co. had entirely discontinued its use in all their products, t admitted that some old goods ntaining benzoate were now ing sold. The Heinz concern, said its representative, had discovered a way of dispensing with benzoate, and therefore thought it unfair that anybody should be permitted to use it. Asked by Dr. Wiley if he would disclose to other firms the secret of keeping goods without preservatives, he replied that he would not.

The Columbia Conserve Co. also had a representative present who talked much in the same strain. His firm, he said, had abandoned the use of preservative and found it unnecessary. He contended also that nobody should be permitted to use it if his concern didn't have to. Dr. Wiley also got from the Columbia Conserve man the statement that he would not reveal his secret to other concerns.

Several representatives of the other preserving concerns, who had found no way to avoid benzoate, turned to good account the refusals by both of the above concerns to disclose their methods, by emphasizing to the board the fact that the abolition of benzoate would place a monopoly of the business in the hands of Heinz & Co. and the Columbia Conserve Co.

The president of the London Preserve Co., of Terra Haute, Ind., related to the board the results of several experiments he had made with goods packed without benzoate. He said that tomatoes were selected with great care, washed carefully, cooked in live steam, drawn through porcelain-lined pipes, cooked again in sterilized kettles, bottled in sterilized bottles and corked with sterilized corks. The catsup kept perfectly until opened. Then it began to spoil. Some bottles would keep only forty-eight hours. Others lasted twenty days and a few lasted thirty before spoiling. Some differences were noted between goods preserved with whole spices, goods preserved with acetic acid extracts and goods containing essential oils of spices, but there was little

Don't Be Deluded

We admit that there may be a few soaps on which you can make a trifle more profit than you can on Babbitt's Best.

But they are neither well known nor of standard quality. There is no demand for them, and the manufacturers seek to tempt you to create their demand by the extra profit.

Don't be deluded. Where have you gained by your extra cent profit, if you have had to spend three times as long talking the unknown soap up? Your time is money.

uniformity. He was convinced that a little benzoate in catsup at least was necessary, and he thought there should be recognition of difference between products used only occasionally and in small quantities which therefore had to keep a long time and those which were used up at once.

The firm of T. A. Snider & Co., through a representative, also told of some experiments made along the same line. From 10 to 85 per cent. of the goods spoiled in twenty days after opening. A few kept for thirty days. All these experiments were made with carefully prepared apparatus and good material and at varying high temperatures and with different kinds of spices. There was no uniformity in results. Furthermore, the process of fermentation began before the consumer could notice it. This made it important to decide whether it was not more injurious for the consumer to eat fermented goods than preserved goods.

The meeting was closed by some further remarks by the attorney representing the National Pickle Packers' Association, who emphasized the fact that every pickle and preserving concern in the country save two believed it necessary to use benzoate as a preservative.

Shortly after the meeting a brief also advocating the continued use of benzoate was filed with the board by representatives of the National Food Manufacturers' Association. The text of this was as follows:—

> We, the undersigned committee of the Food Manufacturers' Association, desire to call your attention to the vexatious conditions now governing the manufacture of various food products, in the earnest hope that you will, in your official capacity, take such action as you may deem wise and proper to remedy these conditions. Our association comprises about 100 leading manufacturers of preserves, catsups, pickles, cider, soda fountain supplies, bakers' supplies, table condiments, etc.
> We are thoroughly convinced of the fact that some preservative is very desirable and absolutely necessary in these food products and that certain harmless colors are desirable, if not essential. We also appreciate the fact that the Food and Drugs Act does not prohibit harmless preservatives or harmless colors. This encourages us in the belief that the legislators responsible for this law did not intend that they should be prohibited by supplemental rulings. We urge you, therefore, not to prohibit the continued use of these articles.
> Salt, sugar, wood smoke and condiments, which are permitted by the law, are not suitable or satisfactory preservatives for fruit products and kindred articles. Some preservative must be used and the manufacturers are united in the belief that benzoate of soda is the preservative best adapted for this purpose. It is a natural constituent of many fruits and vegetables and, in the small quantities necessary, is absolutely without injurious effect on the health of the consumer. Many years of practical business experience substantiate this, for none of us has heard of any one being injured by it. This is further confirmed by the ablest authorities we have consulted, whose opinions are based on the most thorough personal investigation.
> The manufacturers have, at enormous expense and loss, carefully tested the practicability of every suggested substitute for benzoate of soda, such as refrigeration or sterilization, and under the most favorable conditions, but without success. We have found these methods invariably expensive, unsatisfactory and unreliable. Goods thus preserved will spoil quickly when opened and with greater consequent danger to the consumer than from the use of benzoate of soda. The manufacturers have disregarded labor and expense in exhaustive experiments, in research and in consulting scientists to discover other methods. We have neglected no opportunity to confer with the officials charged with enforcing the food laws.
> Millions of dollars have been spent by the National Government for the assistance and instruction of the American farmer, but although the rulings supplementary to the food law have clearly foreshadowed a revolution in the manufacture of food products, yet no alternative means of relief have been offered.
> If, as intimated, the use of benzoate of soda is prohibited because of its alleged harmfulness, no proof that it is harmful has been published and no satisfactory method or process has been suggested as a substitute therefor, as was promised us by your department.
> To prohibit the use of benzoate of soda without any substitute will paralyze the manufacture of many food products; will cause great financial loss; will throw thousands of people out of employment and will abolish a large market for the growers of fruits and vegetables used in such products.
> We confidently believe that you and your department will exert your influence in every legitimate way to avert such a calamity and that, before prohibiting the use of benzoate of soda, you will be prepared to specify some other mutually satisfactory means for preserving such products commercially.

A decision in the matter, which will probably come closer to definitely fixing the status of benzoate than anything heretofore issued, is expected within a short time.

Another Chapter in a Limited Price Suit.

The Grogan-Chaffee olive oil case, which has been referred to before in this department has now been finally decided by the Court of Appeals of California. The case, it will be remembered, was brought by a manufacturer of olive oil against a Pasadena retail grocer to compel the latter to sell his olive oil at a fixed price established by him. The lower Court decided in favor of the retailer and the final Court of the state affirms the decision.

Following is the statement of the case:—

> The complaint avers that plaintiff is a manufacturer of pure olive oil, sold for food and other purposes; that he has copyrighted certain designs and words which are placed upon every bottle guaranteeing its purity; that by reason of extensive advertising and rewards offered to any one establishing its impurity a large demand has been created for this brand of oil; that attached to every bottle, can or parcel of said oil offered for sale is the following notice: "The goods contained in this case are sold on the condition, which is made a part of the consideration for the sale of these goods; that the purchaser, if he retails these goods, will maintain my fixed retail price on them, and that if he wholesales them he will sell them subject to this same condition. My fixed retail price for Purity olive oil is $1.35 per can for the half gallon size, and $2.50 per can for the gallon size." The defendant, a grocer, purchased a quantity of oil, each bottle whereof bearing plaintiff's label and was so purchased under agreement that the purchaser would maintain plaintiff's selling price for such oil and not sell the same for a price less than as specified in the notice affixed to such bottles. That defendant, in violation of said agreement, sold a part of said oil at the price of $1.20 per can for half gallons and after notice to desist from sales at such prices threatens to continue the same. That other merchants having seen cut in prices refuse to buy or handle plaintiff's oil, and he has thereby lost many sales which he otherwise could have made but for defendant's acts, to plaintiff's damage in the sum of $1,000, for which he prays judgment.

The decision of the appeal court does not decide the limited-price question finally, because it is based on a technicality rather than the real merits of the case. The Court says in substance that the only sale sought to be restrained by Mr. Grogan was sale at retail, while the plaintiff's briefs contain no allegation whatever that the sale which formed the basis of the suit was at retail. For all the record of the case shows, says the Court, the sale may have been at wholesale and thus unrestricted. Without this proof the case is not complete, and the decision must be for the defendant.

So that while the decision is based on a technicality rather than the principles involved, it is still the law as to limited prices in California until other cases are decided on their merits.

Says Fleer & Co. Misrepresented.

Battle Creek, Mich.,

Editor "Grocery World."

Gentlemen:—It has come to our notice that Frank H. Fleer & Company, of Philadelphia, has sent out to publishers of trade journals a statement in regard to the suit we have recently brought against that concern for interfering with our rights.

A restraining order was issued by the United States Circuit Court against Frank H. Fleer & Co., enjoining them from doing the acts we complained of and another to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not issue is now awaiting argument. We have no objections to the facts appearing, but this statement sent out by Fleer contains numerous misstatements.

As to the "Woman's Home Companion."

Shamokin, Pa., Nov. 4, 1907.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—It is with pleasure we read your paper every Monday when it reaches us, and we note particularly the always up-to-date stand you take to help business men along.

Your editorial, "Do You Know Your Grocer?" is very just in defending business men. We are certainly being done up by the editor of the "Woman's Home Companion," who in our opinion has very little experience as to the methods used by the up-to-date grocer of to-day. We don't believe there is one grocer out of fifty half as bad as we are made to appear in the "Woman's Home Companion," when we are accused of preferring to do our business through telephones and solicitors because of our dirty stores.

The business man's success depends upon the greatest number of customers he can get into his store, and that is his aim.

We, for example, are always on the alert in making fine displays of our goods and particularly about cleanliness. If the editor of the "Woman's Home Companion would call at our store we would soon convince him that his article is next to rot.

The "Stroller's" column is always full of good hints and is alone worth the subscription price.

Yours truly,
M. J. HAILE.

The Shoe Dressing a Grocer Should Sell

Gilt Edge Shoe Dressing is one of our leading brands. It is as staple in the shoe dressing line as sugar in the grocery line. Any grocer or general storekeeper can build up a trade on it and hold it, for there is no better shoe dressing on earth.

We guarantee Gilt Edge to be the only black dressing for ladies' and children's shoes that contains oil. This is important, for a shoe polish that contains no oil will rot and crack leather. Gilt Edge softens, preserves and polishes, and all this without brushing. It has a tremendous sale and you ought to have it.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

Last Tuesday's holiday has greatly interfered with the activity of the tea market. The demand has been considerably reduced, and taking the week through can be called only fair. There have been no changes in price during the week and no developments of any character. From now on until after the holidays the demand will likely be slack, but no recession in prices is looked for. On the contrary, low grades especially can be expected to advance somewhat as the season advances.

Coffee.

The market for Brazil options was maintained on a steady basis until last Monday, when the liquidation of December options set in and caused a decline of 15 to 25 points. When the market had declined to this extent the speculative came to its support and held the situation on that basis, where it is at the present basis. Actual Brazil coffee shows very little change during the week. What would happen to the market for Rio and Santos coffee if the bankers back of the valorization scheme felt compelled to call their loans and force on the market the coffee held as collateral is an interesting query. The majority of the trade scout the possibility of such a catastrophe, as it would unquestionably split the market wide open and the bankers might after all be the chief sufferers. Mild coffees are very firm. There is no surplus and very light offerings. Java coffee is firm at the last quotation and Mocha is steady.

Sugar.

There have been no developments in the sugar market during the week. Raws are unchanged and dull. Refiners seem to be well stocked up. Refined is unchanged for the week. All refiners are now on the same basis which has ruled for several weeks, the Federal still being 10 points below the market, but nevertheless seeming to have very little sugar to offer. The demand for refined sugar is fair.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose remains unchanged for the week. Compound syrup is in fair demand at unchanged prices. Sugar syrup is in moderate demand at unchanged prices. Molasses is in fair demand at ruling prices. No new molasses has reached Northern markets as yet.

Fish.

The demand for fish during the week has been comparatively slack, partly because the trade are supplied for the present and partly because of the high prices. There has been no recession of prices, either in Norway, Irish or shore mackerel, as the receipts are still light. Cod, hake and haddock are all unchanged and in light demand. Salmon is steady to firm and in fair demand. Sardines are unchanged, the imported brands being in light supply and very firm. Domestic sardines are steady, unchanged and in light demand.

Canned Goods.

The tomato market is weak. Not so much because of any condition inherent in itself as the result of the financial squeeze. There has been some talk of offers at 82½ cents f. o. b. during the week, which is a further decline of 2½ cents. As stated there is apparently nothing in the tomato market itself to cause weakness. The largest estimate of the pack which has been heard from any responsible source is 10,000,000 cases, which would justify a strong rather than a weak feeling. The demand for tomatoes is very light. Corn is dull, but strong. Shoepeg and Maine style are both scarce and in good demand at firm prices. As an example, one packer of Maryland corn who opened at 55 cents now asks 8 cents for his surplus. Peas are dull at unchanged prices. Peaches are in light demand at ruling prices. Stocks are light. Apples are now obtainable at $3.25 for New York State gallons, but other holders are still asking $3.50 and some even hold out for $3.75. The demand is fair. The California line shows no change in price and very little business from first hands. Shipments are still very late. The Baltimore line of canned goods is unchanged.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes show a little more demand, but at no advance in prices. The coast people predict an advance, and if the consumptive demand brisks up an advance will probably come. The present de

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

mand, however, is light. Peaches are still low, prices being unchanged. There is some demand for export, which is strengthening the market in the face of a dull domestic demand. Apricots are dull and unchanged. Currants are doing well, but rule at unchanged prices. Raisins are unchanged. Seeded are scarce and very firm. There have been no deliveries of new seeded yet. Loose raisins are dull and weak. Apples are firm and in light demand.

Eggs.

Fresh eggs are very firm at an advance of 1 cent over last week. The arrivals of fresh eggs are very light and there is a ready sale at outside prices for everything which will grade fresh. Storage eggs are unchanged on the basis which ruled one week ago. Stocks in storage are gradually decreasing, although there is still plenty to go around. There is a disposition to keep prices where they are so that stock may be readily moved. The outlook is for unchanged prices both for fresh and storage eggs for the next few days.

Butter.

The butter market shows a further decline of 2 cents for the week, due to the same causes which caused last week's decline, viz., curtailed consumption due to extreme high prices and the fact that certain holders of storage butter had to realize money quickly in order to pay called loans. Since the decline, however, the situation has improved, and the trade now look for a firmer market at higher prices in the near future. The advance may not be over 1 cent per pound, but the market is in a very healthy condition, and the future price depends largely on financial conditions.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are quoted at various prices, according to quality. The range is $2.25 to $2.40, which is a decline from previous extreme prices. The supply is still hardly ample for the demand, and on spot stocks are low. Marrows still average $2.25 for old and $2.30 for new. The demand is fair. California limas are unchanged and in fair demand. Split and whole dried peas are both unchanged and active.

Cheese.

The cheese market shows a decline for the week of ½ cent per pound on all grades, due to the falling off in consumption. The extreme high prices have at last had their effect and the result is an instantaneous increase in the supply as compared with the demand and a consequent decline in prices. There may be a slight further decline, but the future depends on consumption. Stocks of cheese are considerably below last year.

Produce.

Sweet potatoes, primes, 50 to 70 cents per basket; culls, 20 to 25 cents per basket, demand fair; Pennsylvania potatoes, 68 to 70 cents per bushel; York State, 60 to 65 cents per bushel; Jersey, 40 to 45 cents per basket, demand fair; carrots, 30 to 40 cents per basket, demand fair; cabbage, $2.50 to $3 per 100, demand fair; yellow turnips, 35 to 40 cents per basket; white turnips, 40 to 50 cents per basket, demand fair to good; beets, $2 per 100, demand fair; yellow onions, 60 to 70 cents per bushel, demand fair; horseradish, $5 to $6 per barrel, 10 to 12½ cents per bunch, demand good; watercress, 2 to 2½ cents per bunch, demand fair; salad, $1.50 to $2 per barrel, demand fair; celery, Pennsylvania, 7 to 12 cents per bunch; York State, 35 to 45 cents per bunch, demand fair; cauliflower, $2 to $2.25 per barrel, demand fair to good; parsnips, $2 to $2.25 per barrel, 45 to 50 cents per basket, demand fair; pumpkins, 25 cents per basket, $6 to $8 per 100, demand fair to good; spinach, $1.25 to $1.50 per barrel, demand fair; oyster plants, 2½ to 3 cents per bunch, demand fair.

Provisions.

Everything in the smoked meat line is about unchanged. There is a disposition among some local packers to reduce prices ¼ cent, while others hold firm at ruling prices. There is a seasonably moderate demand for smoked meats and if any change occurs during the week it will probably be a decline of ¼ cent. Both pure and compound lard remain unchanged and show an active demand. Barrel pork, dried beef and canned meats are all dull and unchanged.

Green Fruit.

Apples, 20-ounce $4.50 to $5.50; Kings, $5 to $5.50; Baldwins, $3 to $4; Hulbersons, $3.50 to $4; Greenings, $3.50 to $4; Pippins, $4 to $4.50; bulk apples, $2 to $2.25 per barrel, demand good; bananas, firsts, $1.25 to $2.50; 8-hands, $1 to $1.25; 7-hands, 65 to 90 cents; 6-hands, 50 to 65 cents; demand poor; lemons, $3 to $4.50 per box, demand fair; Florida grapefruit, $4.50 to $6.50 per box, demand fair to good; pears, Duchess, $2.50 to $2.75 per barrel; Keifers, 50 cents per basket, $2 to $2.25 per barrel; demand poor; pineapples, $2.50 to $5 per crate demand fair to good.

Nuts.

Peanuts, green, choice, 5¼ cents; fancy, 6 cents; jumbo, 7¾ cents; roasted, choice, $1.25 per bushel; fancy, $1.45 per bushel; jumbo, $1.65 per bushel, demand fair; almonds, 19 to 20 cents; Brazil, 11½ cents; filberts, 11 cents; walnuts, greenobles, 12 cents; marbots, 13 cents; mixed nuts, 11 cents, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Spices.

The market for spices is fairly active at steady prices, although it has been indirectly affected by the recent financial disturbances. Practically everything on the water at this time is sold before arrival.

Spot stocks are small and there appears to be no great pressure to sell

Pepper.—The demand is steady and spot stocks have been greatly reduced during the last fortnight. It is apparent that prices in our country are really lower to-day than elsewhere

Cayennes.—The demand is very fair and the prices are unchanged.

Cloves.—In good demand. Futures are held at firm prices. There is, however, no large trading.

Pimento (Allspice).—Quiet but steady. Crop is unquestionably short and indications are for higher prices.

Mace.—The demand continues good at steady prices. Prime stock of good color continues scarce.

Nutmegs.—In much better demand and prices are steady.

Cassias.—In good demand at practically unchanged prices. China in mats is now practically off the market.

Gingers.—Are unchanged during the week. The demand is steady.

Seeds.—Very steady demand. Prices firm with upward tendency. Celery is higher. Coriander, mustard, caraway and poppy seed are much called for and prime stock is scarce.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

No. 1.

Contrary to expectation, in view of the unsettled financial condition, business in canned goods was good in this market, and some articles stiffened up in price—sweet potatoes, for instance, advanced to $1 dozen strong for No. 3 Standards and the Gallon size are all sold out of the city packers' hands. The only article that exhibited an easier feeling was tomatoes, and they find ready buyers at any concession in prices, showing, apparently, that many of the buyers are in the market looking for any bargains that may be offered in that line. Those jobbers who take advantage of opportunities to secure strictly choice quality tomatoes at an attractive price will probably not have reason to regret the purchase. Such opportunities are worth watching for.

Baked beans was another strong article this week. Corn was less active and the same was true of the remainder of the list of vegetables, but there was no weakening in the prices of any of them. New spinach is now being packed and our canners are able to make prompt shipments. The quality of it is excellent.

In the line of canned fruits one would naturally expect some decline in prices, after being advanced to the present high level under a full head of steam all summer, but the extraordinary demand and comparatively small pack of nearly every article in the list has left in the hands of the canners such small stocks that the holders would not be troubled about carrying them if the demand stopped until after the turn of the new year. Apples and pears are the only articles in the line of fruits that are still being canned though in a small way only and at high cost on account of scarcity of the fruit.

The season for dredging oysters in the Chesapeake Bay opened yesterday according to the law of this state, but the demand for fresh oysters from all directions discourages the hope of the canners of Cove oysters for cheaper supplies this fall. Still, that is largely a question of weather and it may yet come the canner's way.

No. 2.

The buying of tomatoes this week has been fair, though not active. The market is a little bit easier, but is, as far as we can see, in excellent, healthy shape. The stock of tomatoes held by Baltimore packers is, we believe, as light, if not lighter, than at this time last year. Baltimore packers are carrying practically no tomatoes, and Peninsula packers who had a heavy pack are not giving any evidence of possessing a large surplus. In fact, though the market is somewhat easier, and in spite of the tight money market, there is no glut of tomatoes being offered.

Packers are now working on spinach.

There is some oyster packing going on from day to day.

The sweet potato market seems to be growing stronger from day to day. This is only natural, considering the scarcity of raw stock. Country packers seem to be heavily oversold, and arrivals of the raw material in Baltimore are light.

Thos. G. Cranwell & Co.
Baltimore, Md.

Imported Fish Products.

The present financial situation has effected business so far, as buyers are very careful and are buying only from hand to mouth.

Holland and Scotch herrings are in good supply and market is easy. Prices in buyers' favor.

Norway herrings are in good demand and owing to the low price at which they are offered they are taken rather freely.

Mackerel.—The situation is unchanged. Prices are firmly held, because there is not sufficient stock pressing for sale. In our opinion, there is no chance for a lower price on Norway mackerel this season. The catch is over, it is more than $7,000 barrels less than last season and first arrivals have gone already into consumption and what is to come yet is not enough to affect the market one way or the other. It is a fact that Norway mackerel are scarce and those who will have to have them will have to pay a good price as the remaining stocks are held in just very few and very firm hands.

Imported Oil Sardines.—The situation is unchanged but for future delivery subject to catch of fish, the prices asked by the packers are quite considerably higher than those prevailing last season, so there is no likelihood of sardines and sprats being any lower in the near future. On the contrary. Exactly the same may be said of Norway smoked sardines. They are scarce and will remain scarce this season.

This is the season for the sale of stockfish, and the quality arriving here this season is particularly fine, especially of the round stockfish used principally by the Italian and German trade.

Sugar.

This market has been going along on a good foundation, prices not fluctuating and affected only to the extent of a 5-point decline in raws by the losses recorded in the European values. Our prices didn't get as high as those of Europe, speculation has not been a part in making our price, and our demand and supply conditions have been evenly enough adjusted to about maintain the level at which we did arrive. We don't expect any advances, we'll be doing all right if we keep at 3.90 to 3.95 cents, and with a continuation of the present ordinary business the sugar trade should be able to look back at the end of the season upon a fairly satisfactory year. What next season is to bring cannot be foretold. Business will probably be confined within narrower limits, prices of the things our people need have been advancing too rapidly, consumption will diminish and a normal state be thus again brought to prevail. It is a readjustment that always happens when the laws of supply and demand become disarranged: we had an illustration of it in the sugar business two years ago when raws reached 5¼ cents and refined 6.15 cents. There was not enough sugar then, at the rate consumption was traveling, to last until the end of that season. But the price got too high. The world learned it could do with less sugar and instead of a deficit in stocks we had a surplus. There was justification in that advance. One million tons of sugar had been lost through drouths in Europe and consumption on the continent was being stimulated because of the abolition of the sugar bounties. Since then sugar has never got beyond a reasonable price; most of the time it has been at a basis that barely paid the planter the cost of production. Prices of other commodities have been advancing steadily, not a few, but almost all. Can we not expect that the same thing as happened in sugar will be repeated in other lines of trade? Happening then in only one instance, sugar, the industrial progress of the country was not stopped, hardly knew that anything was wrong; but we have been bringing up a condition in other commodities that is becoming irksome to consumers and those who have passed through these periods before, periods of great industrial expansion and over-extending of credits know the consequences. We won't go back to where we started from. The larger part of the progress has been real. We will keep that. The fictitious values will be cut away. The law of supply and demand will regulate. Demand has been equal to the supply, exceeded it in many cases, and prices have kept pace. The serious part now is that it will not be a readjustment in one line or a few, but in nearly all of them, and the whole country will feel it. In the grocery business for some time past conservatism has been an element not lost sight of. There has not been anything to worry about in so far as concerned sugar. That has been safe. It will stay so. Prices can't fall off much there; they haven't had a chance to get high.

Refined Sugar.—The American Sugar Refining Co., Howell, and Arbuckle, quote a basis of granulated at 4.80 cents, less 1 per cent. cash. The Federal is selling at 4.70 cents, less 1 per cent. The Federal announces that they are two weeks delayed in filling orders.

MARKET NOTES.

Jamaica oranges are now plentifully in market, but the demand is rather light. The price is $5 to $5.25 per barrel.

Cranberries are rather weak than otherwise, on account of heavy receipts. The price ranges from $2.25 to $3 per crate and the demand is light.

Box apples from California are coming forward regularly, the quality being fine, but the demand light. The Jonathan variety range from $2.25 to $2.50 and Bellflowers $1.85 to $2.

Florida oranges are beginning to come in more plentifully and the range in price is still $2.50 to $3.50. There are very few good oranges among present receipts. The demand, however, is fair.

Tokay and Cornichon grapes from California are in market and range from $2.60 to $2.75. The demand is fair.

Near-by grapes are higher by reason of greater scarcity. The average price for Niagaras is 15 cents and Concords 16 cents. The demand is fair.

Florida grapefruit is selling better than Florida oranges mainly because the quality is better. Fancy fruit commands $4 per box, and from there the price declines to $3, according to size.

A few Florida tomatoes are coming forward, the price ranging from $1.50 to $2 per crate. The demand is moderate.

Florida eggplants are plentiful. The price ranges from $1.50 to $2 per crate. Jersey eggplants are done.

Some very good Florida squash is coming forward at present averaging $2 per bushel for the best. The sale is limited, however.

Florida cucumbers are now coming forward, averaging $2 per basket. They are not wanted yet.

Hothouse radishes are in market, averaging $2 per 100 bunches. The demand is only fair.

Salad is coming from various points. New Orleans salad ranges from $4 to $5 per barrel. Southern hothouse 75 cents per dozen, and North Carolina crate frame $2 to $2.25 per basket. The demand is fair.

THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

This Department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent in for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be filed in their order and taken up according to strict rotation.

A rather odd bit of advertising comes into this department from the Industrial Commissioner of Winnipeg. It shows that various communities where living is considered cheap are advertising that act as an inducement for outsiders to locate there. In my judgment the little circular referred to is sufficiently interesting to reproduce, particularly as it gives the prices of a list of staple food products, which grocers in other sections may compare with their own.

CHAS. F. ROLAND, Industrial Commissioner

Such developments as the above make me feel as if advertising were one of the most powerful forces in the world.

But not, however, as conducted by some grocers. Apropos of certain remarks which I made in a recent issue as to whether it is good policy in advertising to attack one's competitor, an old friend of mine who conducts a country weekly newspaper in a small town in New York State told me during the week of a case of abortive advertising which has been transpiring in his city, and in which his paper was involved. Two of the local grocers up there, who were both advertisers in his paper, became angry at each other fully eighteen months ago. Before that they each had a six-inch advertisement in the paper every week, of very fair quality, as country advertising went. The cause of the trouble the publisher had forgotten, it occurred so long ago, but it suspended all friendliness between them. For a while it was kept out of their advertising, but soon a slurring reference crept to one man's advertising, and it was at once vigorously answered in the other. In a very few weeks, says the publisher, the fight through the advertising became so warm that all semblance of grocery advertising disappeared. For over one year those two grocers have simply used their space to bang each other. Not a line of real advertising has appeared in either's space during that time. The angry discussions, says the publisher, have included almost every conceivable subject, politics, religion and what not. I asked the publisher whether the advertising had attracted any attention, and he said that it had; that it greatly amused the townspeople, who egged the combatants on in every conceivable way.

But what ridiculous fools these men are! Can it be conceived that such advertising could bring either of them any business? Certainly not—it is money just as surely wasted as if thrown into the street. For over a year they have spent their good money simply to maintain a quarrel that held them both up as laughing stocks before their fellow townsmen. This is simply childish.

Pennsylvania News Items.

During the week Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust issued the following new rules regarding the sales of oleo:—

No license will be granted to a non-resident of the State of Pennsylvania, as such non-resident would be beyond the jurisdiction of the department.

No license will be transferred from any person, firm or corporation convicted of any violation of the Acts of Assembly under which such licenses is issued, nor when proceedings are pending for violation of said acts.

The attention of intending applicants for license is specially directed to that portion of the act which reads: "Upon conviction of any subsequent offense, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $500, nor more than $1,000, and by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than six months nor more than twelve months."

The express direction of said act is imprisonment in addition to the minimum fine therein expressed.

In addition to the fine and imprisonment imposed for second offense, injunction proceedings will be instituted, and no license will be transferred from any person against whom proceedings are pending; the intention being to invoke the law upon parties who persistently violate the same.

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

Coffee Display.

A very attractive and neat coffee display can be made with very little trouble and expense.

Procure a small Japanese stool, standing about a foot high, upon which place a tray or platter with a cup and saucer, sugar bowl and cream jug. In the front of the window arrange coffee beans forming the words "special blends" or something similar. A little to the rear of this on both sides of the stool have ground coffee displayed in neat open cartons, as shown in the illustration. In the rear of the window have cans, such as are used for holding tea and coffee in the store, full of coffee and displayed. If these tin boxes are not available have small bags full of coffee with the tops of the bags rolled down displaying the coffee in the bags. The above display is also suitable for the display of tea.

The centre of window is to represent a kiln or oven in which cornmeal is dried. It is built with 10-cent packages of Reliable Flour Co's Reliable Prepared Flour, Graham Flour and Corn-cake Flour. This also gives it a brick appearance, as the color of these packages are a brick color.

In the bottom opening have several old sticks. Cover with red tissue paper to give appearance of fire. In the top opening you can have cornmeal to show.

To the right of window use 5-pound bags of cornmeal. To the left 5-pound bags of buckwheat.

To the front of window have self-raising buckwheat in 1-pound packages and granulated cornmeal in 2-pound boxes. Then have a few cans and jars of syrup and your bulk syrup you can display in glass molasses jug.

Have two signs to read thus:—

1st.—FRESH KILN DRIED CORN MEAL.

2d.—TRY OUR 10c. SYRUP.

JOTS FROM A JOBBER'S NOTE BOOK

Retail grocers who think they are aggrieved when compelled to wait sixty days for the money due them from their customers should enter the brokerage business and go out to sell futures, particularly canned goods and dried fruit futures. In some cases the brokers wait a full year for their commissions. For instance, some future 1908 corn has already been sold. Although the contract has been signed and accepted, the broker making the sale will not get a cent of commissions until the goods are delivered, which will not be until the fall of 1908, nearly one year hence. This is not done through any provision of the law of brokerage, but simply by reason of custom. I am advised, as a matter of fact, that a broker's work is done as soon as the order he secures is accepted by the seller, and that he can demand and recover his commissions at once, without waiting for delivery. Custom, however, has stepped in, and in order to hold his accounts, and because there are plenty ready to take them if he loses them, the broker waits for his money until his seller gets his. This makes it actually necessary to have capital nowadays to engage in the brokerage business, as no man who depends upon his commissions for his daily expenses can get along. A certain Philadelphia broker who represents a large Pacific coast canned goods packer, informed me during the week that although he had been selling goods for his house continuously since January 1, 1907, he had not yet received a cent of commissions.

The reason why it has become customary for brokers to wait until delivery for their commissions is because it has also come to be a custom for brokers to receive commissions only for goods actually accepted by the buyer. For instance, if a broker takes an order amounting to $1,000 and the buyer rejects a portion of it amounting to $300, the broker's commissions will be reckoned on $700. This, too, is not according to the law of brokerage, under which a broker could claim commissions on the full $1,000, since the fact that $300 worth of the goods were not up to sample and were therefore rejected, was not the broker's fault, and he therefore should not suffer for the seller's shortcoming.

This sacrifice of their own legal interests leads brokers to rub it into themselves rather deeply at times. For instance, a certain Philadelphia broker representing a large manufacturer of preserved and candied fruit took orders last summer, for the 1907 holiday trade, for goods amounting to several thousand dollars. His commissions on the season's business amounted to a very large sum. Before the goods were delivered, in fact, before they were manufactured, the factory burned down. Since it was about the only one of any size in the country, the goods to fill its orders cannot be obtained and the business is therefore lost. Naturally under the custom above discussed, the broker loses his commissions also. Though advised by an attorney that he could collect every dollar of them, he still prefers to pocket the loss, on the ground that the account is valuable, and a lawsuit would lose it for him.

The New York trade have a much more equitable method of paying the broker than the Philadelphia trade. The New York broker is paid a part of his commissions when his order is accepted, one or two further installments through the year, and the balance when the goods are delivered.

Must the Little Retailer Go?

A Philadelphia Writer, Who Closely Watches the Trend of the Times, Sees in the Proposed Parcels Post Law a Blow in Favor of the Large Trader as Against the Small.

The agitation among the majority of the retail merchants all over the United States in opposition to a parcels post has brought to the attention of many of them a seeming tendency toward the elimination of the small merchant by the larger one. During the last twenty years the manufacturing interests of the country have undergone a rapid change, there having been an actual decrease in the number of manufacturers in the face of a large increase of population. This is not a relative but an actual decrease. Is the distributer of merchandise to be subjected to the same experience? And is the establishment of a parcels post to be an important factor in his disappearance?

It was a noticeable fact that at the dinner tendered to Postmaster-General Meyer in Philadelphia recently to discuss the parcels post the guests present consisted of only those connected with large establishments and of Congressmen, who are as notorious for being acute to hear the requests of the large interests as they are deaf to the requests—in their estimations—of their less important constituents. Mr. John Wanamaker in his speech made the remarkable statement that his mail-order business was conducted at a loss and therefore the inference was that his interest in this matter was purely unselfish. He called upon Mr. Lit and Mr. Snellenburg, other department storekeepers who were present, to give evidence as to the truth of his statement. Such self sacrifice is touching. Of course a more liberal parcels post would have no effect in making that which, according to Mr. Wanamaker, is now profitless then profitable!

Let us for a moment survey the local position in the grocery field. In the city of Philadelphia since 1890 there has been no increase in the number of retail grocers in face of a large increase in population, and in the wholesale trade there has been an actual decrease of 50 per cent. The same conditions are also found in the dry goods trade. It can readily be seen that there are sufficient signs of the disappearance of the smaller retailers to warrant the close attention and concerted action of that class. Whether or not this disappearance is in the line of economic progress and therefore justifiable cuts no figure in the position the retailer finds himself in. An old Irish epitaph runs, "It's very nice for Mary Ann, but devilish hard on Abraham," and in this case Abraham is the retailer.

In the city of Chicago there are two mail-order houses doing a business between them said to be over $70,000,000 yearly. They reach out to every little hamlet west of Chicago to the Pacific, and they are said to be extending their trade rapidly toward the Atlantic border. There are few general merchandise dealers who do not feel competition from this source.

While the parcels post as outlined by Postmaster-General Meyer will not be as liberal as the English system, there can be no doubt that it is an entering wedge for a much more sweeping measure. Various speeches by and interviews with the Postmaster-General indicate this decidedly. The retailer must make his power felt by the politician if he wishes to save his class from being swallowed through the capacious thirst of the monopoly interest. Business is conducted on the basis of selfishness and each class must look after its own interests or find itself crushed by those opposing it. Copy-book moralists may give voice to other doctrines, but every sane business man knows that self-interest must actuate his every move or he must eventually face failure. The letter recently published in the "Grocery World," signed by the president of the National Retail Grocers' Association, will prove of no avail unless the retail trade show that they have the power to back up their requests by powerful pressure.

It is unfortunate that they should have allowed their executive officers to place them officially in the position of "humbly begging," even from Theodore the strenuous. Only as a militant class can they succeed in getting legislation in their favor or preventing legislation unfriendly to them. Their recent experience before the Pennsylvania Assembly in endeavoring to get a garnishee law passed proves this. The officers of the Retail Merchants' Association of Pennsylvania are known to be men of ability far above the average of many similar organizations in other States, and yet they could accomplish nothing against the more powerful interest opposed to this measure. If they stand together as a class they can withstand the encroachments of the plutocratic class and perhaps drive the enemy backward. Failing this they are positively doomed to extermination. They want to get busy in organizing right now.

JOHN! JOHN! JUST IMAGINE

That Smith, your most aggressive business rival had installed a Johnson "EVERSHARP" slicing machine and had laid in a stock of Libby, McNeil & Libby's First Quality Dried Beef Knuckles, and was advertising bright, rosy-hued sliced beef in full size sandwich slices, thin as paper, smooth as glass, soft, moist and deliciously fresh at 36 cents a pound and your best customers were using and praising Smith's handsomely sliced dried beef and remarking what an enterprising, up-to-date fellow Smith was. Of course you could say if Smith was foolish enough to pay three dollars a month for a patented slicing machine you were satisfied. Brave words John —— if you could only deposit them in bank like Smith does his profits on dried beef.

No use trying to compete with Libby, McNeil and Libby's best dried beef, freshly sliced to perfection on Johnson's "EVERSHARP" SLICER. Our experience proves there is no dried beef that can be sold at all in competition with this the finest in the world.

It will build business quicker than selling staples at cost and pay a princely profit besides.

Send for a sample of these delicious slices and order one of these superb machines before Smith secures your territory.

Useful Facts About Groceries

The department which will henceforth be conducted under the above head is best explained by the letter which appears below, and which was recently sent to the "Grocery World." In the hope that a little such matter may be of interest and value to "Grocery World" readers, a short educational article along the lines indicated will appear under this head from time to time.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as near as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long-looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. BRECKENRIDGE.

Kippered Herrings.

A name for herrings which are first split and flattened out like finnon haddocks and then slightly salted and smoked.

Kosher Food.

This is food or meat of any kind which has been killed or prepared by the Jews after their own manner, according to the Talmudic ordinances as to the knife to be used, its shape, etc., and for the consumption of the members of that community.

In the Talmud, "Kosher" means pure, clean, lawful; and Trep, or Traifeh, unlawful or unclean.

Oil of Lemon.

The essential oil of lemons is a fragrant and aromatic oil obtained from the outer rind of the fresh lemon, and not from the inside juice. It is easily extracted by rasping or scratching the lemon with a sort of brush made of small needles. This sets the oil free, and it may then be collected with a sponge.

In fact, this sponge process is now the one generally adopted in Sicily. The way it is got at Messina is as follows: One man with a large knife adroitly cuts off the peel of a lemon in three slices, another man takes them and presses the outer sides against a sponge, bending the peel inside out so as to break the oil globules but not the peel. This sponge is periodically squeezed, and a man working this way extracts about 1½ pounds of oil of lemon a day. A thousand lemons yield about 1 pound avoirdupois of oil, besides about 9 gallons of lemon juice.

As soon as the oil is thus extracted it is allowed to settle, and the clear portion is poured off. The thick at the bottom is pressed into a small bag, but this quality is inferior.

Oil of lemon having a similar composition to that of turpentine, and developing much of the same odor, it is very frequently adulterated with turpentine, which is specially purified in a peculiar way so as to have very little smell.

Tons of turpentine are used in this sophistication, and it is very difficult to determine with certainty when oil of lemon is or is not adulterated with this refined turpentine, because they are both closely related terpines and have both the same specific gravity.

The sense of smell is largely depended upon. In Sicily it is tested as follows: A sample is poured out into a tumbler and shaken up after placing the hand on the top. Great attention is then paid to the deviation and size of the bubbles and froth, the color is noted, and one smell is taken with the glass full and another after emptying it. Turpentine will certainly be detected in this way if over 5 per cent. be present.

Oil of lemon, often miscalled essence of lemon, is of very agreeable odor and flavor. It is used extensively in fancy pastry, sweets, liquors and summer beverages, and is not only a luxury but very wholesome.

Light Gets People Into Stores .....

Which store will be most sought by consumers—that with plenty of light but indifferent fixtures, or that with indifferent light but fine fixtures?

The brightly-lighted store—every time. For light is more important than fine fixtures, because light gets people into stores, while without a flood of light the fine fixtures can't be seen at all.

There is no question about it—nothing makes a store so attractive at night as plenty of light. If you must economize between handsome fixtures or plenty of light, take the light. Baked Beans Ought To Be Baked

Most "baked" bean manufacturers are much exercised over the status of their goods under the National food law. Why? Because their beans aren't baked at all—they are merely boiled or steamed. It's a question whether they can be sold as baked beans.

Actual baking makes a big difference not only in the flavor but in everything else. Boiling or steaming swells the bean and makes it mushy. Baking reduces the size and make it not mushy but mealy. Anybody can see and taste the difference instantly.

The tomato sauce used on L. & S. Baked Beans is genuine tomato sauce made from the ripe tomatoes; not the catsup that is often used.

Look At It and Taste It

The minute you see Nicelle Olive Oil you feel sure it's a high-grade article. The package is unique and exclusive—you can't associate poor goods with it.

Taste Nicelle Oil, and you know it's high grade. Nowhere else have you met that rich smoothness, that delicate yet penetrating olive flavor.

Women have told us repeatedly that their salad dressing came quicker and better with Nicelle Oil than with any other brand they ever tried.

Give it a chance for your own good.

Buying Canned Goods You Don't Get?

No better canned goods are packed in Maryland than our Blue Bell and Clover Farm brands. That in itself is a sufficiently good reason for handling them. Another reason quite as strong is that we sell these brands to the jobber under a guarantee of 100 per cent. delivery, and he can sell them to you in the same way.

When you buy future canned goods, wouldn't you feel more comfortable to know exactly what you are going to get? Under the average canned-goods contract you can get all, half or none, just as the packer pleases.

This Tells the Tale

A product which has been on the market fifty-eight years is a product which has stood the hardest of all tests—the test of time. "Knight's Cooking Extracts" is a phrase familiar to man, woman and child, from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Lakes to the Gulf. It is easy to tell why; no housewife ever had a bottle go back on her and no housewife ever will. Good extracts must be on your shelves. Grocers, if you sell Knight's Extracts we need say nothing more to you; if you don't, we want one order from you—we are sure of more. You are certain of their absolute purity and a good profit.

What The Seven Washings Are For

WE believe we are not unjust to our competitors when we say that probably no one of them goes to the length we do in the manufacture of starch.

Why the raw materials in Murdoch's Laundry and Corn Starch go through seven washings before we are satisfied. Why? To eliminate every atom of gluten, so that the starch will have the snowy whiteness that users of our brands have come to associate with them.

Every other manufacturing detail is taken care of in the same way. We must, we will and we do make the cleanest, purest, snowiest starches on the market. Both the laundry and corn starch are now packed with universal coupons.

Heart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED.]

he History of Some Copper Stock.

How many of you fellows either old stock in scheme companies—ining companies, usually—or ave been tempted to hold some?

Hold up your hands.

By George, looks like a hold-up, on't it?

How many have ever made any oney out of 'em?

I don't mean gotten dividends -most of these fake concerns ake a specialty of "declaring vidends" out of the money you ay for stock. That isn't making oney for you—it's simply pay-g you back a little of your own oney.

How many have ever made al money?

By gravy, nary a hand!

One of these scheme promoters ho sell stock at 30 cents a share as nabbed in Philadelphia last eek after he had sold a fearful unch of it.

The stockholders wanted him tell what he had done with the oney they paid for stock.

"Why, I had to live, didn't I?" e said innocently. And that's here their money went—to keep fe in his old carcass. And that's here the money you fellows put to gold mining stock goes—into e living expenses of the perfect entlemen who pull your legs.

If that old fellow had said to e "I had to live, hadn't I" I'd ell him mighty quick no, I idn't think he did. On the ontrary, he'd perform a public rvice by doing the other thing.

You fellows may remember a w years ago when the McKin-y-Barber Copper Co. was or-anized. The widow of President IcKinley was interested in it and o were some of her relatives. hey got possession of a copper ine in the West and told great ings about what they were oing to do. Fifty cents a share r something like that was the rice of stock, which was offered or sale to the general public.

The general public went right n. Everybody said surely here's n honest scheme, for Mrs. Mc-inley wouldn't have anything to o with it if it wasn't, and they pulled the coin out of their old stockings to beat the band.

One of my friends among grocers is a thrifty German who was worth quite a bit of money. Somebody got hold of him and unloaded six hundred shares of the McKinley copper stock on him!

I saw him only a week or two after he had gotten his certificate. He told me about it in great glee.

"What did you pay for this?" I asked him.

"Three hundred dollars," he said.

I looked at him in amazement.

"You don't mean to tell me you've actually gone in this scheme that deep, do you?" I said.

Sure he had. Why the solicitor told him they would probably declare 30 per cent. dividends the first year! Biggest chance he'd ever had! Certainly there was no fake about it! With Mrs. McKinley in it? Ach, Himmel!"

"All right," I said, "I'll bet you anything you never get a cent out of it! Not a cent!"

He wouldn't bet—it was too sure, he said, and he didn't like to steal my money.

A year ago I saw him again. Having no reason to, I don't follow the stock market, and I didn't know what had happened to the McKinley-Barber Copper Co.

In fact I almost forgot to ask him about his stock and had left his store. Then it just occurred to me and I went back.

"Say," I said, "did you ever get anything out of that McKinley copper stock?"

He conversed furiously with himself in German for a minute, as is his way when riled. I waited for the storm to blow over.

"All lost!" he finally said mournfully, and then went off into German again. In a minute he walked back and fished out of his desk some circular letters "To the Stockholders of the McKinley-Barber Co."

I looked 'em over—the concern had busted, that was all. Couldn't find any copper or something. At any rate it had gone up without declaring a single dividend.

The latest letter had come just that morning. It was from the "committee of bondholders" or something, and said that another copper company had made a bid for the property of the McKinley Co. and if the stockholders said so they could either trade their stock for stock in the new company, or could sell it outright to the new company. The price they could get, my German friend figured up and found it would net him about $80. There were a lot of charges that had to come out before he got anything.

"Better take the $80, and call the deal off," I said.

No, he wouldn't do that; he'd get the stock. It might pan out. Some time afterward he told me that he did get the stock, and that still another copper company was now trying to buy it out. Any dividends? Nein.

Simply one game of freeze-out after another. How can you tell what's going on—a little stockholder, miles away from headquarters? You can't tell. You've simply got to take exactly what they please to give you and no more.

I'm just as sure that that German grocer will never get a cent out of his $300 worth of stock as I am that I'm sitting here this minute. He never even had a chance to get anything. Never even had a run for his money.

The people that cooked the scheme up "had to live," didn't they, and his money looked good.

If I could write about all the cases like this, where grocers had been pulled in mining schemes or bucket-shop schemes or things like that, I could fill every issue of the "Grocery World" for a year.

Why, do you know that these mining people buy lists of grocers' names from people who deal in such lists and send their red hot prospectuses to thousands of 'em at a time! I positively know that to be a fact. Why? Because the grocer is known to be easy for any game that promises big returns. And there never was a scheme like this that hadn't made beautiful money before it started.

Don't have your leg pulled. If you've got any spare money to invest, put it where you can see it. Or even better, lend me it. You'll get just as much out of it if you lend it to me as you will from the mining company.

Ain't I got to live, too?

Armour Involved in Sale of Bad Eggs.

The Minnesota State Dairy and Food Department, in its campaign against the marketing of eggs which are unfit for consumption, has begun proceedings against one of the big cold storage concerns. The eggs were seized by the State Department as unfit for food, and the bakery from whom they were bought reported that they had purchased them from Armour & Co. Proceedings were immediately instituted against Armour & Co. by the State Department and a representative of the concern was arraigned in the St. Paul municipal court. It is not known what Armour & Co's plea will be, but it is expected they will deny responsibility for the condition of the eggs. The outcome of the case is being awaited with much interest, as this is the first time the State Department has found it necessary to proceed against one of the big cold storage concerns in the present campaign.

How to Get a Roll Top Desk Free.

The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., of New York, have made an arrangement with the Manufacturers' Trade Mark Association, the big premium clearing-house of New York, which enables them to substantially reward retailers who show an interest in increasing the sa of Barker's Hasty Lunch Chocolat Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoas.

These goods are so fine that it is ha to sell anything else to consumers on they have had them; so besides the r ward the Knickerbocker Chocolate C give grocers for pushing them, they a certain to please their trade.

Suppose, for example, a grocer nee a new roll-top desk, a safe, a chee cutter, a computing or platform scal instead of drawing on his bank accou to pay for them he pushes the sale the Knickerbocker Co.'s goods with h customers, saves the Universal Coupo packed in every case for him and ad them to those coming to him from oth manufacturers, and in a short time will have collected enough to entitle hi to any of the articles named.

The Manufacturers' Trade Mark A sociation issue a handsome illustrat catalogue which they send free to gr cers, showing an almost unlimited arr of useful articles of merchandise whi they will send grocers in exchange f the Universal Coupons, together with list of all the manufacturers througho the country who give these same coupo to the grocers.

The Knickerbocker Co. is the on manufacturer of chocolate and coc from whom a grocer can get these Un versal coupons; so grocers who wa valuable free merchandise as well their regular profits will concentrate the efforts on the sale of the Knickerbock Chocolate Co.'s goods.

An Indiana store issued a long holiday circular purporting to come from Santa Claus. It contained a long list of toys and this announcement: "I have opened up my workshop in the show window of the Blank stores right at the foot of the big snow-covered hill where you can see me most any time between now and Christmas. The telephone company has furnished me with a special telephone service and I will be glad to answer calls from giris and boys at any time from now until Christmas, whenever I am at my shop. I will make a record in my big book of all the children who call me up and give me their full address and will write to each one of them a personal letter. Call Santa Claus, 'Phone 200. Toyland is filled with toys and dolls and I invite you all to come and see them. I will be glad to see you any time you come. Santa Claus.

Cover a large hoop completely with holly, smilax or green cheese cloth. Suspend this wreath by two wires half way between ceiling and floor a couple of feet from the rear of your window. Hold it tight by two additional wires to the floor. Cover all four wires with long strands of smilax. For the figure of Santa Claus, cut armholes in a flour sack and sew in muslin sleeves, filling the arms with excelsior and the body with pillows or cotton bats. Make a loose, square cornered coat of red canton flannel, trimming the edges, collars and cuffs with narrow strips of white cotton. Make a little round cap of the same material and trim it the same way. The head can be made of a block of wood or a rubball, covered by a mask, with the little cap on top, using a wig or cotton for hair. The figure should be placed on a pedestal painted or covered with green cloth, as high as the bottom of the wreath and standing about a foot behind it. Use white cheese cloth painted, festooned with green as a background and above. On this you can display holiday novelties to advantage. Hang the larger articles on the back, sides and top, using the body of the window for the smaller toys.

An Iowa merchant used this plan to get a mailing list and at the same time found it the best holiday advertisement he had ever had. A slip with blank lines followed this notice: "A Christmas present of a box of candy will be given free every boy or girl who will fill out the slip below with the names of three of their neighbors and bring them in to us."

Advertise that you will give the turkey to the family making the largest holiday purchases of you this year, the goose to the one buying the next largest bill and the duck to the one making the third largest purchase.

You can make an attractive window display by building a platform in the centre of it and on it a chimney, say 15 inches square and 4 feet high, covering the wooden frame with some dark red cloth and outlining the "bricks" in black. Have an incline from the front of the window to the platform, giving the idea of a sloping roof. Cover this with cotton and sprinkle over it diamond dust or bits of tinsel. Arrange a Santa Claus and two boy and two girl dolls. Better still would be a live Santa Claus cutting up capers with two little children.

Exhibit in your window or in some prominent place in your store a large Christmas tree more or less elaborately trimmed. Have a large placard announcing the tree will be given free to the Sunday school receiving the largest number of votes—a vote to be given with purchases to whatever amount you may choose to specify.

A good form for the voting slip would be a small Christmas tree at one side with a statement that "this vote is cast for the ———— Sunday School"—the name to be written in the blank left for that purpose.

You can force the plan still more upon the attention of your customers by having a large locked box for each Sunday school. Two, or three, or more such boxes, depending upon the number of Sunday schools intending to have Christmas tree exercises, each box covered with printed matter explaining the plan, will make an effective exhibit in your window.

It will be necessary to fix upon a day ahead of the earliest date set for the exercises in any Sunday school and also to arrange for some influential man, or a committee of influential men, to count the votes at the end of that time.

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XVIII—Closer to the Salesman Than a Brother.

The retailer should be closer to the traveling salesman than his own brother.

If there is any one man in the entire world who should be treated well and met with a cheerfulness which will make him feel glad that he came to see you, it is the traveling salesman who has been selling you goods regularly and also seeing that all little differences between you and his house are properly adjusted.

The retailer who feels that he is bothered to death by traveling men, and must let off steam once in a while to relieve the tension will do well to choose a traveler who may be termed an outsider to practice on. The best way is to just decide at the start that travelers are as necessary to your business as they are to the business of the house which employs them, and treat each one exactly as you would like to be treated if places were exchanged.

Some retailers get the idea that the traveling men come around at regular intervals so they can be nasty to them, and tell them all the things they would like to tell their customers, but dare not. This is a great mistake, for the traveler can be a better friend to you and make you more money than any one customer you will ever have, and he will do more for you to make your business profitable. Why should he not? Your profit is also his profit, so your interests should be the same. Your customers probably feel that they would get better values by buying your goods at bankruptcy sale, but the traveler and his house would not enjoy that same kind of a treat, so the traveler should be closer to you than your customers. Money Savers

This truck will do more work than two double teams at about half the expense. The delivery wagon shown below will do more work than three teams at a third the expense.

Saving money is making money. You want to make money, don't you?

When you can do your hauling and delivering cheaper and quicker by Rapid Automobiles than you can by horse-drawn vehicles you have two very good reasons for using them. There is another, the Rapid Machines are so handsome they are the most effective kind of street advertisements.

What's the Difference?

The answer—"the bottom is as good as the top." You know what this means in Evaporated Apples. It means that your customers will keep buying that kind, and we know you will keep buying that kind to supply your customers. APELPI on a package of evaporated apples is a positive guarantee that the fruit is the finest that can be had, and its preparation can't be excelled.

Ritter's Guaranty

In compliance with the rules and regulations for the enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act published by the Commission appointed for this purpose, we have filed a guaranty covering all our products with the Agricultural Department in Washington under the serial number 1017.

In the future all our products will be labeled in accordance with Regulation Nine as follows: Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906, No. 1017.

This guaranty is sufficient and covers every sale we make and no individual guaranties are necessary.

It has always been our aim to manufacture pure and wholesome food, to comply with existing laws and to protect all who buy our products, and we shall carry out this principle in the future.

We hope to deserve your continued confidence and patronage.

WHERE the GLASS JAR COMES IN

The glass jar in which Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa—and that only—is packed offers the entering wedge to a sale, because it is unusual.

No woman ever saw cocoa packed in glass before; the sight is novel; she asks about it, and if you help a little, she buys.

Bought once, Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa will always be bought again, for it has a flavor which has never been successfully imitated. Our exclusive making process removes the bad, develops the good, and the result is the smoothest, most delicious drinking cocoa on the market.

Karo
CORN SYRUP

Karo Corn Syrup is no longer an experiment. It is a rich syrup made straight from corn, much smoother than sugar syrup, and will be preferred to sugar syrup by nine out of ten persons.

Gives the grocer a staple and very ample profit. Packed at the factory in sterilized cans of three sizes, 10, 25 and 50 cents.

Obtainable from any wholesale grocer.

Corn Products Manufacturing Co., Davenport, Iowa

The GREAT Ramly

Is the one spelled R-A-M-L-Y, the finest Turkish cigarette ever made to sell for 10 cents. So good, other cigarettes are made to look like it, so they will sell on the Ramly's reputation.

If you want to give your customers an ideal smoke, sell them the Ramly. You won't have to tell them about it the second time—they'll ask for it.

Why We Do It

You've noticed that in nearly all our advertising to grocers we reproduce one of the advertisements we use to consumers.

We can't let you forget that we are working night and day to get you orders for Ralston Health Food and Purina Whole Wheat Flour.

These foods are unexcelled and cannot possibly be excelled, either for their purity and nutritive value or as cold-blooded business propositions for you. Both brands sell easier and oftener and pay better than any other cereal brands we know of.

RALSTON PURINA MILLS

ST. LOUIS, MO.

T. A. James & Co., General Distributers, 12-16 Chestnut St., Philadelphia

It Made No Difference to Us

No gelatine sold in this country was less affected by the Federal Food Law than Chalmers'.

Our brands complied with the legal standard even before there was one. How could they help it? They were simply unsophisticated gelatine, made of pure unadulterated calves' stock and spring water. There was nothing to change about them, nothing to alter in any way.

We take a just pride in the fact that while the Federal Food Law caused some manufacturers to completely transform their business, it made no more difference to us than if it had never been passed.

Two styles—granulated and shredded.

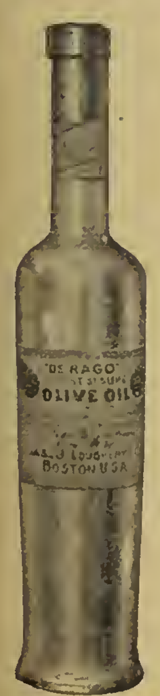
MEDICINE AND FOOD



Lots of people, although they need it, won't take medicine because it's unpleasant. One of the finest medicines ever discovered is DE RAGO OLIVE OIL, and in taking it you get the effects of the medicine without the unpleasantness. On the contrary, the delicious flavor of DE RAGO OLIVE OIL makes everybody who takes it as a medicine WANT it as a food. Recommended by physicians everywhere for infantile and delicate stomachs.

Pickles Packed in Tin

The Hoffman House little pickles have special features that ought to interest you in them.

First, they are packed in sanitary cans.

Second, they are prepared by a new process, and have a pickle taste instead of a vinegar taste.

They are guaranteed to keep in any climate, and are altogether the tastiest, meatiest, spiciest little pickles ever put on the market.

Being packed in cans, they are a novelty. You can sell novelties.

See What You Can Do With This

This W. & D. Special Combination Fixture temptingly displays bananas on the top tree, which revolves, and pickles in the tanks below. A space-saver, a constant salesman, an ornament. Oak or cherry, handsomely finished with nickel bolts and ball-bearing casters. Uses only two square feet of floor space.

Interesting price; write for it to-day.

"The Pickles and Table Condiments prepared by The Williams Bros. Co., Detroit, Mich., are the very best. For sale by the wholesale trade all over the United States."

Hams That Always Sell

There is another sort of ham much less preferred to the absolutely unidentified and unbranded ham, and that is the ham of the packer who gets good raw material to-day and poor to-morrow.

Both of these kill the grocers' trade, because they are so irregular. They please his customers to-day and provoke them to-morrow. No trade can last long under hot and cold applications.

Swift's PREMIUM Hams are always regular. We have the pick of the hogs of the whole country and hence we can keep the quality even the whole year through. Swift's PREMIUM Hams hold and increase trade.

SWIFT & COMPANY, U. S. A.

Rae's Lucca Olive Oil

An Olive Oil of the purest quality—pressed only from perfect olives and carefully preserved from contact with anything that would hurt its exquisite flavor; beautiful to the eye and agreeable to the taste.

WALKER STORE FIXTURES

—Attract Good Trade—

There is so much to be said to the merchant about to buy new fixtures that we prefer to send our catalogue, which will set him wise on many points that he should know. Our designs and our workmanship are unsurpassed. Our customers write that they are more than pleased with the appearance of their stores.

WE KNOW HOW TO DESIGN ARTISTIC INTERIORS

We are ready at all times to offer suggestions covering any detail. And our catalogue is sufficiently explicit to make it both interesting and instructive. Send for it.

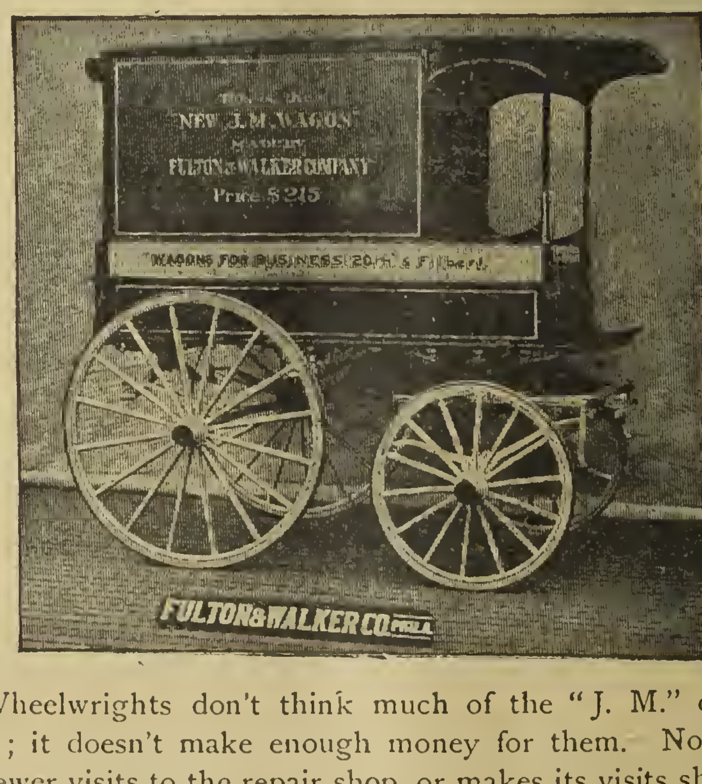
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

No Friends Among the Wheelwrights



Wheelwrights don't think much of the "J. M." delivery wagon; it doesn't make enough money for them. No wagon pays fewer visits to the repair shop, or makes its visits shorter.

The most celebrated delivery wagon made—the best wagon ever built for the grocery trade. Strong as iron, yet easy-running; finest steel tires, and wheels from second-growth hickory.

COFFEE AND TEA BINS THAT PROVE THEIR "METAL"

Picture your store fitted out with Tea Canisters and Coffee Bins like these. They are trade winners. Effective store decoration brings the people in—your sales force do the rest.

When installing Coffee Bins, get the kind that will stand the racket—you'll never have to replace them. Our bins are constructed of the heaviest tin.

And for Over Fifty Years They Have Proven Their "Metal"

What Washing Powder Do You Sell?

Some old and half-forgotten brand, sold only because you always have sold it?

Or Snow Boy Washing Powder, a powder made of pure soap and other cleansing ingredients, quickly cleaning everything water won't hurt; containing none of the skin-eating alkalies that some of the old brands do; carrying beautiful and high-grade premiums to your customers?

There is room in your store for a good washing powder, but be sure that you handle the best.

Glazed Coffee Salable But Must Be Labeled to Show Glazing

Federal Food and Dairy Board Issues Decision Fixing Its Status. Places No Ban on Its Sale, But Requires Labeling. Caramels Must Also Be Labeled Truthfully.

Two more decisions were issued during the week by the Federal Food and Drug Board, F. I. D. No. 80 and 81. The first fixes the status of glazed coffee and the other the labeling of caramels. The full text of the decision is as follows:—

(F. I. D. 80.)

GLAZED COFFEE.

There have been frequent inquiries made regarding the application of the food and drugs act to the practice of glazing coffee. The following is a type of the communications of this nature:—

> It has been the custom with many roasters of coffee to use a finish, made out of supposedly harmless ingredients, on their coffees, especially the lower grades, the main object being to lessen the natural loss in weight during the process of roasting, and thus reduce the cost.
> We used a finish ourselves, made up of lemon juice, flaxseed, gelatine, bicarbonate of soda and lime water, until January 1, 1907, when we ceased, as we were uncertain as to its lawfulness under the pure food and drugs act which went into effect that day. If it is against the law, we would ask that the pure food commission prepare a ruling on coffees, such as has been done on rice, and have this ruling take effect as soon as possible, as manufacturers who are adherents to this method of roasting are enabled to undersell those who are using the natural roast, thereby placing them at a decided advantage.

Coffee is coated for one or all of the following reasons:—

1. To restore, at least in part, the loss of weight incident to roasting.

2. To conceal damage or inferiority.

3. To prevent the depreciation of the roasted coffee due to the escape of the aromatic constituents.

4. To prevent the absorption of water which renders the roasted grains tough.

It would appear that the questions involved in this practice are similar in many respects to those involved in the polishing and coating of rice, which is discussed in F. I. D. 67. As in the case of coating rice, it is the opinion of the Department that no coating of any kind can be applied to the coffee "if the product be mixed, colored, powdered, coated or stained in any manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed." In each case, whether or not such a result be secured is a question of fact to be decided by the evidence.

It is held by the Department that coffee treated in the manner indicated with lemon juice, flaxseed, gelatine, bicarbonate of soda, and lime water should be labeled in all cases with the name of the extraneous substances, as

COATED WITH LEMON JUICE, FLAXSEED, GELATINE, BICARBONATE OF SODA AND LIME WATER.

In such declarations all of the substances used for coating should be mentioned. Any coloring matter or other substances that may be employed to change the tint of the coffee should be declared on the label.

(F. I. D. 81.)

LABELING OF CARAMELS.

The Department is in receipt of the following inquiries from manufacturers of confectionery:—

> 1. Milk caramel.—This piece contains no milk, but is composed principally of sugar and glucose, and we would like very much to know if milk were added to this formula whether we could still continue to call it "milk caramel."
> 2. Peaches and cream caramel.—This piece is made up principally of sugar and glucose and milk, and flavored with peach flavor. As there are 50 pounds of milk to a batch of 116 pounds, would this be considered as one of the principal ingredients?
> 3. Whipped cream caramel.—This piece does not contain any cream or milk, but is made up principally of sugar and glucose. The batch is, however, whipped, and if we should add milk to it, would it be misbranding to continue to call it "whipped cream caramel"?

Section 8 of the food and drugs act of June 30, 1906, provides that any article of food is misbranded (1) if it be an imitation of or offered for sale under the distinctive name of another article; (2) if it be labeled so as to deceive or mislead the purchaser; (3) if the package containing it or its label shall bear any statement, design or device regarding the ingredients or the substance contained therein, which statement, design or device shall be false or misleading in any particular.

These portions of Section 8 bear directly on the above as concerning the labeling of different types of caramels. Caramel No. 1 would be distinctly a case of misbranding, since it contains no milk.

In regard to caramel No. 2, it is evident that if milk is used in that product, it is false and misleading to call it "cream caramel." It is thought that this product would be properly labeled as "peach-flavored caramel" or "caramel, peach flavor," if the peach flavor is not produced by the use of an imitation product. If an imitation peach flavor is used, the caramel could be properly branded only as "imitation peach-flavored caramel," or, preferably, "caramel, imitation peach flavor." The question as to whether the 50 pounds of milk used to a batch of 116 pounds forms one of the principal ingredients would have to be determined by the proportion of the ingredients found in the finished article. This question, however, is immaterial in considering the question as to whether the name "cream" can be applied to the caramel.

To caramel No. 3 the above statements apply equally well. Since it does not contain any cream, the label "whipped cream caramel" would be false and misleading. Even if milk were added to the batch and the whole were whipped, the product would not be entitled to bear the label "whipped cream caramel."

Northwest Grocers Demand More Freedom for Butterine.

Pass Resolutions Demanding That Congress Repeal Tax and Color Law. Spokane Retailers Hold Large and Successful Food Show. Live Trade News of Great Northwest.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 11, 1907.

Resolutions to be submitted to the Washington State Association and referred to the national body were adopted by the Spokane Grocers' Association, urging Congress to repeal the law placing the heavy taxes on the butterine and to give the right to color the product to make it as attractive as possible, that it may be more successfully placed on the market. E. N. Cory, secretary, said in explaining the matter:—

> It is not the idea of our association to secure a concession from Congress authorizing the sale of butterine under any other name than "butterine," but, owing to the fact that the manufacturers of this substitute are not allowed to use coloring, it is not marketed as successfully as it would otherwise, though butterine is palatable and can, by observing the pure food laws, be made as clean as butter, and at least 15 cents a pound cheaper than the dairy product.

The Spokane Grocers' Association, of which U. G. Allen is president, ran its ten days' pure food show at the State Armory from November 4th to 14th. The big arena was tastefully decorated with bunting, cereals, food products and electrical displays, and everything to eat and drink offered was with the guarantee of purity. Flour mills using wheat grown in the Big Bend and Palouse districts in eastern Washington, on which 2,000,000 acres in twelve counties produced more than 42,500,000 bushels of wheat this season, had attractive booths in which the manufactured products were served. Among the larger concerns making exhibits were the Empire Cracker and Candy Co., Genesee Pure Food Co., Inland Cracker Co., Michigan Cider Co., Spokane Extract and Spice Co., Spokane Flour Mills, Centennial Mill Co., Keller-Lorenz Co., Hazlewood Co., Washington Cracker Co., Spokane Broom Factory, H. J. Heinz Co., Spanish-American Food Co., Washington Water Power Co., Portland Flouring Mills Co. and the Golden Grain Granules Co.

Spokane's need of a city market was brought up at a recent meeting of the Board of Managers of the 150,000 Club, and G. C. Corbaley and Harry J. Neely were named a committee by President F. W. King to make inquiry as to the requirements. The charter of Spokane does not permit the city to conduct a market. Mr. Corbaley said in discussing the proposition:

> The need of a central market is becoming more apparent with the growth of the city. Spokane is undergoing a new era of development that is going to make it a great produce market, and it is only a question of time when there must be some central place where buyer and seller may meet together. The rural districts are rapidly being divided up into small garden tracts, and it is necessary that they have a market. As it is now, there is no organization whatever for handling the produce raised by the truck gardeners about Spokane. Either the commission men are obliged to go into the country to buy their produce, or the gardeners are forced to come into Spokane and dispose of their produce as best they can. A central market in the city, where buyers and sellers could meet together, would be a great advantage.

What is to be known as the Ancient Order of Gobblers will be established as an adjunct to the Spokane Grocers' Association. There are few rules, but these will be rigidly observed. One of them is to boost for Spokane and the Inland Empire and to keep everlastingly at it for the good of the country.

* * *

Coupled with the growth of Wallace, Idaho, east of Spokane, the richest lead-silver mining camp on the continent, the business houses are also on the increase, and the latest in this line is a new wholesale house to be called the Wallace Produce Co. The Ryan-Newton Co., of Spokane, is the heaviest stockholders in the new concern. Fred. Day, who has represented the Ryan-Newton Co. in the Coeur d' Alene district for years, will be manager.

Pennsylvania Food Commissioner's Monthly Talk on Food Law Subjects

Interesting and Instructive Extracts from the Current Number of the Dairy and Food Bulletin. The Inside of Some Soft Drinks. Pennsylvania Department Takes Issue with Federal Government on Sulphured Fruits. No Adulterations Reported.

The current number of the monthly bulletin of the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department contains an unusually large volume of reading matter, this containing many valuable observations and suggestions.

Some selections from the reading matter pages follow:—

The present Pennsylvania food law could be better if it were simpler. Why not eliminate everything referring to the guaranty or the misbranding of goods? Let the National food and drugs act, as interpreted and enforced by the officials of the Agricultural Department at Washington, regulate these matters. The question of misbranding is largely a matter of opinion. Since all goods manufactured in Pennsylvania bearing a label are shipped into other States, while goods manufactured in other States are sold in Pennsylvania, they all come under the National law, and there should be no difficulty in enforcing it in the interest of good health and the protection of the consuming public. The truth is that our laws should deal with the question of adulteration alone. The Federal Governernment could manage everything else.

Reports have been received at the office of the Dairy and Food Division from Dr. William Frear, professor of chemistry at State College, on two samples of root beer and six samples of pop, all purchased from vendors at the Tipton camp during the last encampment of the National Guard of Pennsylvania.

One sample of root beer was simply "thin syrup, colored brown with dye, flavored with birch and sweetened with saccharine." The other sample of root beer was "thin syrup, colored brown with vegetable dye, flavored with birch."

A sample of pop made at Gallitzen was "slightly acidified sugar syrup, colored with coal-tar dye, flavored with artificial banana flavor, thickened with gum."

Another sample of pop made at Gallitzen was "chiefly sugar solution, flavored with birch and colored artificially."

Pop made at Hastings was "thin syrup, flavored with imitation raspberry, thickened with gum, colored with coal-tar dye and sweetened with saccharine."

Pop made at Altoona was "diluted syrup, flavored chiefly with birch, colored with vegetable brown and contained saccharine." Another sample of pop made at Altoona was found to be "a thin syrup acidified, flavored with synthetic flavor, thickened with gum, dyed with coal-tar dye, sweetened with saccharine."

Pop made at Lock Haven was "thin syrup, thickened with gum, flavored chiefly with birch, colored with vegetable brown, sweetened with saccharine."

Two samples of lemonade that were taken from stands having no apparent owner or proprietors were made entirely from acctic acid and water. The fakers in charge of these particular lemonade stands fled when they learned that the agents of the Dairy and Food Division were on the ground.

One retail dealer in Westmoreland County recently did precisely what he was repeatedly and urgently warned not to do. He kept a lot of old goods on his shelves. When asked for, he sold them, although he had no guarantee of their purity. In due course of time, as is always sure to happen, agents of the Dairy and Food Division visited this man's store and purchased some of the goods for which he had no guarantee. These goods did not measure up to the standard required in this Commonwealth. The result may be easily surmised. The dealer has been arrested for selling articles that were adulterated. He has paid the fine provided in such cases. It was not the wish of the State to mulct him in a fine and costs; but his own carelessness brought punishment to pass. He had ample warning, and neither he nor his friends can blame the Dairy and Food Division or its agents.

By direction of Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust, agents of the division recently purchased samples of all the breakfast foods sold in Pennsylvania. The Commissioner is anxious to know something about the elements that go to make up these foods and has sent the samples to Professor William Frear, of State College, who is now busily engaged in dissecting and analyzing them. In due time his work will be completed and the result made public.

The Federal authorities are allowing California fruit growers to use sulphites, or the fumes of sulphur, in the preservation of their fruits until some other method can be devised. Concerning which two observations seem to be pertinent. One is that so long as the use of sulphites is permitted there is little likelihood that any other method of preserving fruit will be discovered. The other is that is has been established again and again by juries in the formal trial of cases that sulphites are not only injurious to health, but also positively the worst and most mischievous of all known preservatives.

The use of this mischievous and dangerous preservative is forbidden in Pennsylvania. Articles thus preserved or embalmed cannot be sold in this Commonwealth without violation of law. Rule 2 of the rules and regulations prepared by the Dairy and Food Commissioner in pursuance of Section 3 of the Act of June 1, 1907, says:—

> The use of boric acid, salicylic acid or sulphites in meats or other articles of food will be regarded as an adulteration and treated accordingly. Any poisonous or deleterious preservative or coloring matter applied externally which has been permitted to permeate or penetrate the meat or other food product, or any portion thereof, will be regarded as an adulteration.

Is Pennsylvania on the right track or is the Federal food department? Is it right to permit the health of consumers to be injured by the use of mischievous preservatives in order that the fruit dealers of one section or the preserve manufacturers of another may be rid of certain inconveniences? Or is it better to insist upon the continued absence of all dangerous drugs or other equally deleterious substances from the food of the people?

The Bulletin is willing to go to the farthest possible limit in facilitating the comfort and convenience of manufacturers and dealers. But whenever the health of the consumer is involved it stops. It believes life and health should not be tampered with under any consideration. And it thinks conscientious fruit growers and others should be of the same mind.

The bulletin reports no cases of adulteration whatever, a condition which preceding bulletins show has no precedent. Following is a summary of the work of the month ending October 15th:—

Expected New Coffee Ruling.

There is a rumor that the Federal Board of Food and Drug Inspection has determined to require in future that dealers in coffee shall designate that coffee by the name of the geographical locality from which it comes. This will mean that "Java" coffee shall be so designated only when actually brought from the island of Java, while "Mocha" will be bona fide Arabian coffee. Brazilian coffee, which is now called by many different names, often appearing as "Java and Mocha" mixed, will have to be denominated Brazilian coffee. It will be permissible for the dealers to speak of "East Indian" coffee, indicating thereby coffee from the islands near Java, but the intention of the board is to have the coffee names properly descriptive of the places or geographical sections in a general way from which the coffee is drawn. Other practices will be treated as cases of misbranding. As yet nothing official has been issued on the subject.

Won't Buy From Cudahy 'Till Cash Order Is Rescinded.

New Brighton Retail Grocers' Association Resolves to Boycott Cudahy Packing Company Until Objectionable Order for Cash Payment Is Rescinded. General News of Local Associations.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Erie, Pa., Nov. 14, 1907.

The Grocers' Association of New Brighton met Tuesday evening and decided upon a course which will meet the approval of every one who has the interest of his home valley at heart. For some days the Cudahy Packing Co. has required its customers in this valley to pay all bills cash, refusing to accept checks. This cash the local agency of the company shipped by express to the head office in Omaha, Neb.

This not only resulted in the cash being taken out of the county, but was unfair to the banks and to the merchants and buying public. The grocers have decided to buy nothing more from the Cudahy firm until this order is rescinded.

It was also decided to appoint a committee to unite with similar committees from the several towns of the valley in working up interest in the State Merchants' Association which will be held next summer at New Castle. A movement is on foot to have a Beaver County Day at Cascade Park on one of the days of the convention, so that the merchants can avail themselves of the opportunity of attending at least one session of the State Association.

Heart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—Ed.]

GETTING A PROFIT.

One of you made a remark the other day that we don't have enough cut prices. Well, that's worthy of comment! In the first place the canned goods, especially peas, string beans and asparagus that we cut a year ago is out of the question now. The same with flour, cocoa, tapioca, rolled oats, and in fact nearly all the staples. Prices have advanced in proportion to our selling advance. In fact, more so. In the second place wholesale cut rates is expensive. Getting a profit is the thing.

THE BUSINESS CLERK

is the man that takes profitable orders. Get this cut-price idea out of your head. Talk quality; talk service; reliability; freshness. Get the confidence of your customer. Convert the bargain hunter. She isn't half as mean as you picture her. She tells you she can buy pea beans for 7 cents a quart. Does she? If you know your business she'll go out our door with a quart of beans that cost her 10 cents. It's all in the way you present some things. Maybe her 7-cent beans were the cheapest German kind; maybe those stony Michigans. But ours—new crop! York State grown; thoroughly cleaned; mealy eaters; easy cookers, etc. Be a salesman.

THINGS YOU'RE TO OFFER.

Those glass jars of dark dates at 25 cents; the stuffed figs at 25 cents, and the round boxes of stuffed dates at same price are all very pretty—are attractive looking and they all appeal to the nicer class of trade. Raise one up politely and name the price. That's all. Don't push them. Don't say another word. They're sufficiently attractive in themselves to go without any advertising.

ABOUT RAISINS.

The Valencia raisin is an old timer. You'll have little trouble selling them if you use discretion. Don't show them to a new housekeeper—the seeded article is what she is after. Here you have the 4-crown loose muscatels as well as the seeded Californias and imported Sultanas.

Our Scotch and English, as well as our Irish-born customers, know all about the Sultana—they want a good one. Don't confuse the California seedless with the genuine imported Sultana. Ask for information.

Catch the Sharp Appetites

Your customers will come home from their vacations with freshly sharpened appetites—more than ever receptive to good food and drink.

Give them Hotel Astor Coffee now and it will meet with an instant response. Hotel Astor succeeds always, but more quickly than ever just now when appetites aren't jaded.

The finest blend of the finest Coffees, packed handsomely and backed with a record of perfect success in the most exclusive hotels of New York City.

Food Law Absurdities.

The Federal food law has bred a great many absurdities, on the part of concerns who perhaps wisely believe in taking no chances. The Federal food law is aimed to prevent adulteration or misbranding in everything used for food by man, or as medicine, either internally or externally. And while there is no question as to what is food, it is not always clear as to what is medicine, particularly medicine for external application.

This uncertainty has led to most of the absurdities referred to, one instance of which was noted one day last week while standing in a Philadelphia drug store. Conspicuously posted on the counter was a placard solemnly asserting that somebody's corn plasters were guaranteed not to be adulterated within the meaning of the Federal food law.

Naturally this hurts nobody. On the contrary, absurd though it is, it is a real benefit. The more manufacturers who, wrongly or not, conclude that the food law compels their products to be decent and honest, and so concluding, make them decent and honest, the better it will be for all concerned.

The Oil Trust's Press Bureau.

The press bureau of the Standard Oil Co. keeps unremittingly at work trying to batter down with its feeble and self-interested efforts the great wall of public animosity which the Trust, by its own acts, has erected against itself. In the "Outlook" for November appeared an extensive article on "Standard Oil," ostensibly written by one Harold J. Howland. The article was illustrated and quite attractively presented, and the "Grocery World" doubts not was paid for by the Standard Oil Co. at so much per line. Public journals with no axe to grind do not in this day publish matter complimentary to the Oil Trust. The "Outlook" article is highly complimentary, as witness the following paragraphs:—

> The name of the Standard Oil Company has come to mean a number of things, good and bad, to different people, with how much justice in each case would be hard to determine. But one very definite thing it does stand for: a standard of quality, an inflexible requirement of the highest excellence in its product.
> The question was recently propounded, "What has been the greatest contribution to the progress of civilization in this country?" The natural replies—the printing press, the steam engine, the telegraph—were all negatived by the propounder and the true answer declared to be, "The Standard Oil Company." Further explanation was offered somewhat in this wise: "The Standard Oil Company, by improving the processes of refining petroleum, by raising the standard for refined oil and by lowering its price, has made it possible for the farmer, the dweller in the small towns and villages, the ranchman and the miner in their isolation, to have a safe, efficient and cheap light, and by its help to read at will through the longest evenings of the winter. The availability of an inexpensive standard illuminant has made possible the extension of the mission of the printing press; by bringing the distant dwellers into contact, through their reading, with the world has increased their desire and their need for travel, has spread civilization into the far corners of the land." The claim is doubtless exaggerated, the ranking far too high for any one body of men; but there is more than a germ of truth in the suggestion. The Standard has steadily improved the quality of refined oil, till, as an officer of the company said, "The poorest refined oil to-day is probably better than the best twenty years ago."

All this the Standard Oil Co. might do, and probably has done, without making it less of the thief and scoundrel that it is commercially. Unquestionably the Standard has enhanced the American oil industry very materially—for its own benefit, however—but while with one hand it has done that, it has with the other debauched and befilthed everything it touched. The concern has led a veritable Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde existence, and the evil in its black career is not lightened in the least by the fact that there is some self-interested good in it.

The furtive habits of the Standard Oil Co. have become engrafted upon it and are a part of its very existence, even in this day when it is posing as reformed. Somebody sends the "Grocery World" a copy of all the matter emanating from the Trust's press bureau; naturally no one is interested to do it but the Trust, but the main reason why the sender is sure to be the Trust is that everything comes in anonymous envelopes.

Business Asininity.

The recent investigation of a bankruptcy case in which the bankrupt was a retail grocer doing business on the outskirts of Philadelphia, revealed an astounding condition which inspires wonder that a man with the capacity to break into business at all can develop such asininity after he gets in there.

This grocer had a small store in a poor rural district, yet there was $4,000 on his books! One poor family owning nothing, making almost nothing, had been permitted to incur an indebtedness of $80! A cripple without the use of either leg, earning $9 a week at a near-by mill to which he daily crawled, and with five children, owed the store $56! Poverty-stricken couples living with their children in two meagre rooms, with scarcely more resources than the beasts of the fields, were on the books as debtors to as much as $30 and $40! At first it was suggested that the grocer's sympathy with his customers' forlorn condition had perhaps inspired him to excessive leniency in the matter of credits. Closer examination of the case, however, showed that that was not true; the case was genuinely one of bad business.

The adage which makes self-preservation the first law of nature, and which has always been supposed to have no exceptions, should be amended to read, "self-preservation is the first law of some natures." The instinct of protecting one's self seems totally lacking in some people.

The Financial Condition and Collections.

The extent to which the present, or rather, the recent financial stringency has been increased by the hoarding of families all over the country is being revealed by complaints forthcoming from grocers in all sections.

Almost every wholesale grocer in business will to-day report cases of retailers who for years have never failed to discount their bills, now taking from 30 to 60 days. The reason is always the same—failure to make their own collections. This failure has apparently come, not from lack of funds on the consumer's part, but from a simple reluctance to let go of the money

Free to "Grocery World" Readers

The "Grocery World" has on hand about five hundred copies of a book on window dressing, originally published by Sprague, Warner & Co., of Chicago, Ill. It was originally intended to use the book as a premium, but after inspection it was considered scarcely good enough, and since that the copies have lain on our shelves because of uncertainty as to what use to make of them. It must not be assumed that the book is worthless—it has a number of good things in it, but is scarcely up to what the "Grocery World" thinks such a book should be.

Now we propose to give a copy to any subscriber who may want it, free of all cost save the postage of seven cents.

Send seven cents and the book is yours.

nder present uncertain conditions. While at no time during the ecent flurry was there any real anger of a commercial panic, nevertheless the thinking portion of the country has lived in fear, than which there is nothing more disturbing to business.

Winter Does Not Represent National Retail Grocers' Association

His Recent Published Statement Approving Postmaster-General's Parcels Post Scheme, Ostensibly as Representative of National Retail Grocers' Association, Repudiated and Denounced By National Officers. Winter Called Down Hard. Tight Money Inspires to Greater Credit Watchfulness.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 14, 1907.

Conditions existing in the money market and the unsettled conditions in business circles everywhere calls forth a warning to the retail trade.

It is at such times as this that much interest is taken in the Retail Grocers' or Merchants' Associations. The weaker members look to the stronger members for advice. The stronger members look to the weaker members for support in any reformation which they seek to bring about.

The question of credit at a time like this is of much importance to the retailer. The jobber finds it necessary to curtail lengthy credit; to seek a quicker return for the goods sent out, so that he may feel safe. This places the retailer who has been indifferent to a settlement of his accounts in a very strange position, for the man who usually is derelict in a settlement of his own accounts is also slow to collect that which is due him.

The secretary of the local association has a work to perform at this time that will test his ability. The question with him should be, what can be done to help or assist the retailer in his embarrassing position.

The blue book that is issued by many agencies is a great help. The credit-rating office is also a great help, but the great trouble is that the retailer first extends the credit and then looks into the blue book or inquires from the credit-rating office as to the standing of the customer to whom he has extended credit, only to find that the customer has been unworthy of credit from the very first.

If such a thing could be done the entire matter should be left in the hands of the secretary of the local association, without whose indorsement no person should be given credit.

Carrying out this proposition, while no doubt there are many who have a like method, or even better, I cannot help but print for your consideration the rules of the Grocers' Credit Exchange of Erie, Pa., which says:—

> No credit without security.
> Applicants must have satisfactory credit records with the exchange.
> No credit extended for longer than thirty days.
> The carrying forward of a balance is forbidden.

If this could be accomplished, and it can, what a boon it would prove to the retail grocers of the United States.

During the last three years the National Association of Retail Grocers and the retail merchants' associations in many of the States have been making a determined stand against the passage of what was known as the parcels post bill.

Through a campaign of education, the trade has been thoroughly aroused to a sense of the injustice that such a bill would be to the retail merchants all over the union, whether it be the large cities, towns or villages.

The new Postmaster-General, Mr. George Von L. Meyer, is determined to amend the postal laws to such an extent as to begin at the earliest moment a parcels carrying business by the Government, not as radical perhaps as the Henry Bill, but on a smaller scale, thus putting in operation the entering wedge for a more radical measure in the near future.

This he claims is but an experiment.

We would warn the retail merchants against any such policy.

It was with much chagrin that the officers of the National Association read in the Eastern press an interview of Mr. Elisha Winter, signing himself as a representative of the National Association of Retail Grocers, and giving his approval of the Postmaster-General's recent recommendation as expressed before the Postmasters of New England at Boston.

Let it be known that Mr. Winter is not now, neither has he been in the employ or under the supervision of the National Association.

While we have given him our moral support in the work of organizing he has always been under the jurisdiction of others, and in no way directly associated with the National Association of Retail Grocers. He has no right to speak for them, and we call upon the retailers to denounce in no uncertain terms his attitude in regard to the parcels post bill.

There is no officer of the National Association who would have undertaken to have given an opinion such as Mr. Winter has given out to the Postmaster-General and the press at large, and in fact the National Association in three conventions assembled has passed resolutions against any extension of the parcels post system.

Every effort has been made to counteract any influence that may have been brought about through the attitude of Mr. Winter. Mr. Kramer, the president of the National Association, immediately wrote Mr. Winter and the Postmaster-General. Letters have come to this office from almost every State denouncing Mr. Winter in no uncertain terms, and we call upon the retailers to assist us in the work we have so vigorously carried on to protect and perpetuate the retail business of the United States.

Failures Show Large Increase.

Both Grocery and General Store Disasters Much Greater in October 1907 Than in October 1906.

The figures covering grocery and general store failures for the month of October show a decided increase over the same month of 1906.

The comparison is as follows:—

General store failures—October, 1907, 116; liabilities, $925,721; October, 1906, 70; liabilities, $387,970.

Groceries—October, 1907, 219; liabilities, $1,041,686; October, 1906, 169; liabilities, $485,344.

Trade Still Watching the Financial Status. Checks Figuring More Largely Than Ever Before. Retailers Profitably Jobbing Future Goods. Complaints Over Slow Government Inspection of Imported Food Products. Chain of Delicatessen Stores. More Trouble Over Manufacturers Who Sell Retailers.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, Nov. 15, 1907.

Retailers, jobbers and packers continue to watch the financial developments more sharply than anything else this week, and even the meetings of associations seem of secondary importance. Credits, currency and checks are the general subjects of discussion. The sudden extension in the use of checks that are payable "through clearing house banks only" and the accumulation of checks from other cities that have not been met promptly because of delay in getting New York exchange have become factors of moment.

At the West Side banks, at which the large jobbing houses have their accounts, assurances are general as to the fact that conservative methods have prevailed and that there is a genuine spirit of co-operation among the people in the trade and their bankers, as a result of which the troublesome conditions are made less annoying than they might be otherwise. But even with the banks doing everything possible, the scarcity of currency here and elsewhere has been troublesome in a variety of ways.

One of the largest jobbers said that retailers seem to be paying bills more promptly than usual—at least many are doing so—but delays in the settlement of checks from other cities weigh against such promptness.

As was expected, retailers are being called upon more generally to accept payment for goods in checks given by employers of labor. Every grocer has customers who go to him in order to get checks cashed. The retailer turns the checks as expeditiously as he can over to the wholesale dealers or to the banks. One result of the situation is that merchants, retail and wholesale, are conducting business with the utmost care, and to a large extent the dealers are buying from hand to mouth, except as to lines for which contracts were made early in the season.

How long the conditions will continue is the question that is keeping large as well as small dealers guessing.

Some retailers who made desirable contracts in the early season for products on which the prices have since advanced are making profit now, according to talk in the wholesale grocery district by reselling to other retailers. To what extent jobbers and packers have sacrificed their holdings of various products in order to obtain cash, on the suggestion of banks or otherwise, can only be conjectured. It is claimed, however, that there is now little disposition to sacrifice, as the holders feel that they will get their own prices later, after the stringency of money is relieved.

The New York sections of the American Chemical Society and of the Society of Chemical Industry, who speak for the big drug and chemical houses of this city, met Monday and passed resolutions on the enforcement of the food and drug law. The chemists have been individually at various times severe critics of the work of those charged with the enforcement of the law, but the organizations, although working quietly to protect chemical interests, have generally shunned publicity.

The organizations now declare that the circulars sent out by the Department of Agriculture in promulgating rules for the enforcement of the law often show a lack of expert knowledge. The Secretaries of Agriculture, of Commerce and Labor and of the Treasury are requested to suspend the publication of these circulars, and before doing anything more of that sort to consult with a carefully selected committee of experienced chemical manufacturers and of scientists recognized as authorities in these fields. It is added that such conferences are the rule in European countries when laws affecting important industries are to be enforced and the members believe a similar practice should be followed here.

Importers of food products also got after the Department of Agriculture recently and complained that there is unnecessary delay in the inspection of food products, resulting in the food being held in the Government's possession for an unreasonable length of time. The olive oil importers were especially aggrieved.

This week the service has been improved by allowing the inspectors here to pass on questions that arise, according to the precedents established by prior decisions given out by the department. Only when a new issue presents itself will the inspectors here wait for Washington to give its decision. This is expediting the work, as much of the delay has been caused by the fact that the local inspectors waited to hear from Washington. Quite often the question was as to allowing an importer to paste slips on the labels so as to make the latter conform fully with the law.

The United Delicatessen Co., the incorporation of which was noted in a recent letter, is apparently about to open a chain of stores of the delicatessen character with the expectation that the enterprise will prove as successful as the chain grocery stores. As the fronts of the new stores have some resemblance to those of the United Cigar Stores Co., some people have supposed that the two concerns are identified. This is denied, however, by representatives of both.

The Caswell-Massey Co., druggists at Fifth avenue and 25th st., with five branch stores and a laboratory, is in financial difficulties. A petition in bankruptcy was filed Tuesday against it and Judge Holt, of the United States District Court, appointed Horace E. Deming receiver, fixing his bond at $100,000. The petition in bankruptcy was filed by three creditors, the largest being the National Cigar Stands Co., with a claim for $8,085 for cigars, of which $7,842 is secured by a demand, indorsed note of the company.

Attached to the petition is a statement of John J. McEntee, secretary. He says that the treasurer submitted a report of the financial condition of the company to the directors showing liabilities at $244,000 and assets at a fair valuation of $216,000. The directors accordingly agreed that the company is insolvent and they consented that it should be adjudged bankrupt.

Receiver Deming is to continue the business at the six stores for twenty days and longer if the majority of the creditors are willing. The business was established in 1876 by the firm of Caswell, Massey & Co., and was incorporated on April 19, 1906, with a capital stock of $500,000. George C. Lyon, of Providence, was president and William H. Massey was vice-president.

Two refineries of the National Sugar Refining Co., at Yonkers and Long Island City, have been shut down in the last week, also the Jersey City refinery of the American Sugar Refining Co. It is said by representatives of both companies that the stocks on hand are ample and the shutting down of the plants will tend to prevent overproduction. The Arbuckle refineries will not shut down, as far as can be learned.

The financial situation may have been a factor leading to the shutting down of the three plants mentioned. The Government must be paid its taxes in cash and with the pressure on banks for currency it may have been deemed wise to curtail both taxes and operating expenses for a time.

Among the members of the Wholesale Grocers' Association a new grievance has arisen and is to be brought up at an early meeting of the organization, it is understood. The trouble is with the manufacturers who sell direct to retailers and who are said to give the preference to the latter in making deliveries when there is any scarcity or delay in shipping. The jobbers think that it is bad enough, from their point of view, that these manufacturers give to retailers the same prices as to jobbers, but claim that it is quite beyond reason to expect the wholesale dealers to take a back seat in rcspcct to deliveries. So threats are heard again that unless some of the manufacturers change their ways they will lose the tradc of thc organized jobbers.

The labor unions have appointed committees to co-operate with the grocery clerks in their movement to have all the stores closed at 7 o'clock evenings. Wives of all members of labor unions are urged not to buy groceries of any kind after the hour mentioned. It is expected that this work will give the movemcnt a greater impetus than it has yet received. Much aid is also expected from church organizations.

Only Rice Crop Beyond Last Year.

Yield of Corn, Buckwheat and Potatoes All Below Last Year, Says the United States Department of Agriculture. Rice Shows Large Increase in Production.

The Crop Reporting Board of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Agriculture finds, from the reports of the correspondents and agents of the bureau, as follows:—

The preliminary returns in the production of corn in 1907 indicate a total yield of about 2,553,732,000 bushels, or an average of 26.0 bushels per acre, as compared with an average yield of 30.3 bushels per acre (2,927,416,000 bushels) as finally estimatcd in 1906, 28.8 bushels in 1905, and a ten-year average of 25.4 bushels.

The preliminary estimate of the average yield per acre of buckwheat is 17.9 bushels, against an average yield of 18.6 bushels as finally estimated in 1906, 19.2 bushels in 1905, and a ten-year average of 18.1 bushels. A total production of 13,911,000 bushels is thus indicated, as compared with 14,642,000 bushels finally estimated in 1906. The average for quality is 87.3 per cent., against 90.4 last year, 93.0 in 1905, and 91.5 in 1904.

The preliminary estimate of the average yield per acre of potatoes is 95.3 bushels, against an average yield of 102.2 bushels as finally estimated in 1906, 87.0 bushels in 1905, and a ten-year average of 85.5 bushels. A total production of 292,427,000 bushels is thus indicated, as compared with 308,038,000 bushels finally estimated in 1906. The average as to quality is 88.3 per cent., as compared with 90.0 one year ago, 85.4 in 1905, and 93.4 in 1904.

The preliminary cstimate of the averagc yicld per acre of rice (rough) is 33.1 bushcls, as compared with 31.1 bushels finally estimatcd in 1906, 28.1 bushels in 1905, and a four-year average of 31.0 bushels. A total production of 21,412,000 bushels is thus indicated, as compared with 17,855,000 bushels finally estimated in 1906.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market has began to feel in a very pronounced manner the financial stringency. Nobody in the market seems to have any surplus money, and the demand has consequently fallen off very decidedly. As yet no weakness has resulted, and none will result which can affect low grades, as they are scarce and in strong hands. The better grades, however, if the present dullness continues, as it seems likely to, will probably soften up a little very shortly.

Coffee.

The market for Rio and Santos options has remained comparatively steady during the week, despite the weakness in other lines which one would expect to show more strength than coffee. The factor which has held coffee up, however, has been the small outside interest in options, which have caused them to be affected less than almost any other gambling medium. The receipts of actual coffee in Brazil indicate a much smaller crop than last year, but this is simply what everybody expected and what the market must have if it is to hold up at all. Notwithstanding the comparatively small receipts, however, the purchasing power of the trade in this country is at present so limited that stocks of Rio and Santos are actually greater than at this time last year. This is beginning to attract some attention. Bogota coffees have declined somewhat from the recent high figures, owing in part to the financial conditions, which have prevented roasters from buying milds in large quantities from the holders. The general market for mild coffees is steady and with very little demand. Java and Mocha are also steady and unchanged.

Sugar.

The sugar market of the week shows some changes. The Federal Refinery, which was already 10 points below the others, dropped 5 points more on Monday, and on Wednesday the other refiners declined 10 points, making the list price of granulated now 4.65 cents and 4.70 cents respectively. The decline was not due to any slump in raws, as the European market is stronger rather than otherwise. The refiners probably concluded that they had kept the market up too long. Stocks of sugar in jobbers' hands are low, and the demand is very light. New Orleans raw sugar shows a rather marked decline, due to the lack of money to carry it.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose remains unchanged for the week. Compound syrup is also dull, prices being unchanged. Sugar syrup is in light demand at ruling prices. Some new molasses has reached Northern markets, ranging at 42 cents up. Sales as yet are small. Old crop molasses is unchanged in price and in very light demand.

Fish.

The fish market shows a decided falling off in demand, due partly to lack of ready funds on the part of buyers, and partly to the fact the trade are to some extent filled up. Norway, Irish and shore mackerel are all dull, but at absolutely maintained prices. Codfish is dull, but firm, upon reports of interference with fishing by heavy storms. Domestic sardines are steady, unchanged and quiet. French sardines are very scarce and high, and their scarcity has brought considerable demand to Norwegian sardines, which are also firm in consequence. Salmon is unchanged, but steady, and in fair demand.

Dried Fruits.

No change has occurred in prunes, and the demand is fair. Secondary markets are comparatively weaker than the coast, but the coast prune market may weaken somewhat, as all California banks are accepting drafts simply for collection. That ties money up, which condition usually produces an inevitable result. Peaches are exceedingly dull, and rule at unchanged prices. Seeded raisins have broken since the arrival of new goods. On spot the market, through scarcity, reached 14 cents in second hands. To-day the same goods sold in the same way command only 10¼ cents. Loose raisins are also very weak, but have declined no further during the week. Apricots are dull and unchanged, a few moving. Currants are in good active demand at ruling prices.

Canned Goods.

The tomato market is undeniably weak. Last week it was reported that sales were rumored at 82½ cents; this week it must be said that sales actually have been made at 80 cents, and this for full standards. It cannot be said that the market has dropped to 80 cents, for that price comes simply from certain

Window-Dressing Articles Wanted

For several months the "Grocery World" has been looking for the right man to take charge of its "Window-Dressing Department" and contribute a good, suggestive weekly article. We have tried several, but none was exactly what was wanted.

We will now attempt to get these articles from our subscribers, probably every one of whom has some technical knowledge of window-dressing. What we want is articles clearly describing window displays that can be made by the average retailer; not necessarily new or original—in fact, those which have been used successfully are perhaps preferable to all others.

For all acceptable articles, the "Grocery World" will pay an average price of $5 each. All matter sent in under this arrangement should be addressed to the "Window-Dressing Department." If drawings are also sent they should be made throughout in black ink (not pencil).

holders who are pressed for money. There are enough of these, however, to make the price worth quoting. Some holders, however, are holding for 85 and a few even for 90 cents. And it is by no means uncertain that the market will not only reach 90 cents, but pass it. Stocks are low in jobbers' hands, and if money loosens up again and buying starts, very probably the weakness will disappear. There is no active demand at present. Corn is in some little demand, but without change in any grade. Apples still rule at $3.25 for New York State gallons, having been kept there by the financial stringency. The demand is slow. Peaches are unchanged and dull. The Baltimore line shows no change, but all lines are very dull. No change can be reported in the general California line.

Butter.

The butter market has advanced 3 cents per pound during the past week, owing to the falling off in the make and the increased consumption caused by the decline. On the present basis the market is exceedingly healthy. It still lacks 3 cents of the highest prices reached. The outlook is for a firm market at unchanged prices for the next few days. The above applies both to Western and near-by butter.

Eggs.

The egg market is firm at an advance of 1 cent per dozen. New-laid eggs continue very scarce, and receipts are clearing up as fast as they come in. The market on storage eggs is unchanged at all points. Stocks in storage are gradually decreasing, and if any change occurs in the near future it will probably be a slight advance.

Cheese.

The cheese market has declined 1 cent, owing to the falling off in consumption, which the "Grocery World" said several weeks ago was the only factor which could weaken the price. The make of cheese continues very light, and stocks in storage are about 40 per cent. less than a year ago. There has been a better movement since the decline and large traders believe in better conditions. It seems likely that the market will be firm at steady prices during the coming week.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are off, the present market being $2.30 on spot. Better supplies are responsible. Marrows have also declined to $2.25. The demand for beans is fair. California limas are unchanged and in moderate demand. Split and whole dried peas are firm and wanted at maintained prices.

Provisions.

The consumptive demand for everything in smoked meats is very light. Prices ruling to-day are about ¼ to ½ cent below a week ago. There has been an increase in the make of pure lard, which has always declined ½ cent in consequence. Compound lard shows the same decline, owing to a decline in cotton oil. The consumptive demand is about normal, and no further change in either grade is looked for during the coming week. Barrel pork and dried beef are firm and unchanged. Canned meats are dull at ruling prices.

Poultry.

The outlook for turkeys is for a scarce and high market. The receipts for Thanksgiving have not yet begun in any quantity. Present prices for fancy turkeys range from 20 to 22 cents and it looks like at least high prices for Thanksgiving. Chickens, however, are weak. Prices now ruling are lower than for some years. The supply is large, and holders to make sales shade prices. The quality of the fowls now arriving is good and the average price is 14 cents.

Produce.

Pennsylvania potatoes, 60 to 68 cents per bushel; York State, 58 to 65 cents per bushel; Jersey, 30 to 40 cents per ⅝-basket, demand fair; sweet potatoes, house, primes, sweet, 75 cents per basket; house, culls, 40 cents per basket; primes, fresh dug, 50 to 60 cents per basket; culls, fresh dug, 25 to 30 cents per basket, demand fair to good; yellow turnips, 70 cents per bushel, 40 cents per basket; white, 30 cents per basket, demand fair to good; cabbage, $2.50 to $3 per 100, 15 to 20 cents per basket, demand poor; carrots, 30 to 40 cents per basket, demand fair; yellow onions, 58 to 68 cents per bushel, 35 to 40 cents per basket, demand fair; horseradish, 10 to 12 cents per bunch, $5 to $6 per barrel, demand fair; watercress, 2½ to 3 cents per bunch, demand fair; salad, $1.50 to $2 per bunch, demand fair; Pennsylvania celery, 8 to 12 cents per bunch; York State, 30 to 45 cents per bunch, demand fair; cauliflower, $1.75 to $2.25 per barrel, demand fair; parsnips, $1.75 to $2 per barrel, demand fair; pumpkins, 25 cents per basket, demand fair; spinach, $1.25 to $1.50 per barrel, demand fair; oyster plants, 3 to 3½ cents per bunch, demand fair; beets, $2 to $2.25 per barrel, demand fair.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Spices.

The market is quite satisfactory, general conditions being considered. Spices, of course, are in demand at this season and inquiries and orders should hold up fairly well until the holiday season.

Pepper.—Can report a steady market, with no very important trading in spots or futures. Prices are lower than for years past and the present is an advantageous time to buy.

Cayennes are practically unchanged, but very firm. Stocks are small. There is a good demand for bright Japan Chillies at this time.

Cloves are somewhat lower and in good demand. However, old dry cloves are higher in price than new crop.

Pimento (Allspice) is stationary and in fair demand. We, however, look for a slowly rising market.

Mace is in good demand. Stocks are short and prices are steady and firm.

Nutmegs remain unusually low, although some sizes are scarce. In our opinion the bottom has been reached. Would advise buying freely.

Cassias are steady, but practically unchanged. Demand quite satisfactory.

Gingers are steady; demand quite fair, and it is quite likely that prices will go lower.

Seeds are quite active, with good demand. Coriander is stationary. Celery is tending upward. Poppy is very firm and prices looked for Caraway is slightly easier, although not offered at a lower price.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

No. 1.

Usually the demand for canned goods in this market begins to slow down in November as the season for the holiday trade in fancy groceries draws nigh, and we anticipate less activity in them until after New Year. In the present condition of the money market it is almost useless to expect any improvement in the market prices of any article of merchandise, and the owners of the goods must be content to await a return of normal conditions in banking circles to market their holdings to advantage. It is a fortunate circumstance that there has been no speculative buying of canned goods this year, no building up of large blocks of any kind of goods packed in this section, or elsewhere that we know of, and the market is free of menace from that direction, otherwise there would be cause for uneasiness as to the stability of prices. The large warehouses here and throughout this section of the country that cater to the canning business have almost bare floors, a condition unknown to them during the previous three years. It is a known fact that the stocks of almost every article in the list are the lightest held here in the last six or eight years, excepting tomatoes and possibly corn. Every one seems to feel pretty sure that the supply of canned corn in sight does not exceed the customary requirements of the jobbers between November and September next, and an advance, rather than a decline, in that article may be looked for after the turn of the year. Concerning tomatoes opinion is divided as to the immediate course of the market, but leans strongly toward an improvement in prices later in the winter. During this week the demand for them was less than it was last week, but there were ready buyers for any good bargains offered, especially if choice quality suitable for buyers' private label. Outside of those two articles the buying during the week was principally of small lots of assorted goods sufficient to make a minimum carload, and the volume of business done was about up to the average week in November. Apples weakened on freer offerings, but that was the only decline of interest in the line of fruits.

The first week of the fall canning season for cove oysters was quiet and devoid of much interest because of the small receipts and stiff prices for the raw stock. A warm, open winter is the only hope for lower prices on them.

No. 2.

The present weakness in tomatoes is due to the tight money market. Those buyers who are short of tomatoes now have a chance to buy some cheap lots. While there is not a large business on tomatoes, yet there is enough inquiry to indicate that a good many tomatoes are still wanted and there is some little buying going on each day.

The sweet potato market here continues very strong. This is due to actual scarcity.

The packing of oysters is now going on here, though not very heavily.

Imported Fish Products.

Imported Sardines.—There is not enough in the market to fill supplies. There is still no catch, and all hopes of even a most moderate catch in France must be abandoned. In Portugal they have caught a few fish, but prices are very much higher; and even at the advanced prices every case is taken up eagerly by buyers as soon as it is offered. Where a few hundred cases are packed a few thousand can easily be sold.

It is exactly the same with Norwegian smoked sardines. While there are cheap offerings of some principal brands of Norway smoked sardines in the market, buyers will find upon careful scrutiny that all concessions are made on account of the former case, because every good brand can be sold regularly to-day at full asking prices. We have no trouble in selling our brands of smoked sardines as soon as we have a cable from abroad stating that the goods are shipped.

Sprats.—Our packers abroad are quoting prices for next season's delivery, subject to catch, but all prices are 60 cents per case higher than last season. This advance is accounted for by the high prices of oil, tin, labor and all raw materials.

Mackerel are scarce.

Irish Mackerel.—Very short supply and in good demand.

Norway Mackerel.—While the first large demand has been satisfied, there is a good hand-to-mouth demand, especially for the best brands, and prices for those have not been reduced in the very least. The entire stock of Norway mackerel is held in a few strong hands, who, not being in need of ready cash, can well afford to hold their stocks until buyers will be eager to take what is offered to them, as Norway mackerel are sure to be in short supply this season, catch having been considerably smaller than last season.

MARKET NOTES.

Near-by grapes have fluctuated somewhat and are still comparatively high—15 cents per basket for Concords and 20 cents for Niagaras. The demand is good.

Florida eggplants are coming along in good volume, and the price is still low—$1 to $2. The demand is slow.

Florida squash range about unchanged—$1 to $2 per crate. The demand is light.

Florida cucumbers range from $1.50 to $3 per crate and are selling in a limited way.

Florida tomatoes are now in full swing, but most of the receipts are poor. The price has a wide range—$1.50 to $3 per crate. The demand is good. California tomatoes of very fine appearance are coming forward and averaging $2.25 per crate of four baskets. Hothouse tomatoes range from 20 to 25 cents per pound and are in good demand.

Florida oranges are firm and rather high—$3 to $4 per crate. The quality shows steady improvement and the demand is good.

Florida grapefruit ranges from $3 to $5 and are in good demand.

Florida beans are plentiful and comparatively low—$1.50 to $2.50 per crate. The demand is good.

There are a few baskets of Florida peas on the market, but the quality is poor. The price has averaged $2. Good peas would bring $4.

Florida salad ranges from $1.50 to $2, and the quality is good. A goodly quantity is moving.

Hothouse radishes range from $2 to $2.50 and are in fair supply.

Water cress ranges from $2 to $2.50 per 100 bunches. Shipments are from Delaware and Virginia.

JOTS FROM A JOBBER'S NOTE BOOK

. There is plenty of evidence that in foreign business men, mighty from a financial standpoint as many of them are, one does not find the same keenness that characterizes the merchants of this country. Take as an illustration the recent advance in all brands of imported Swiss milk chocolate. As I remember it, it was a straight 25 per cent. advance. The largest seller was the 15-cent cake, of which there was an enormous quantity sold. The foreign firms who made the brands included in the advance decided that there should be a straight advance, which was done. The 15-cent cake became 20 cents, and all other sizes and grades advanced proportionately. The result, as the "Grocery World" reported last week, has been a very heavy falling off in the sale. Now, an American business man would not have gone about making the advance in that way at all. Instead of making a straight advance, which retained the present size packages and simply made them cost more, he would have kept prices where they were, but reduced the size of the packages, so that the consumer who had been accustomed to buy a 15-cent cake would still be able to get it. Had they done this in the beginning their loss of trade would probably not have been one-tenth as great, for human nature is such that it is much easier to get a person to continue paying the same price he has always paid, 15 cents, even for a smaller quantity, than to induce him to pay 20 cents for the same quantity which has heretofore cost 15 cents. Some American has probably given the foreigner a tip, for they are hurrying now to introduce a 15-cent package, somewhat smaller than the old one.

* * *

A wholesale grocery salesman who passed through a small borough close to Philadelphia last week was struck by its apparent deadness. Asking a veteran real estate dealer in the neighborhood why this particular place seemed so much deader than other towns of the same size in the same district he was told that it was because the place supported three saloons, where there was really only room for one. In other words, the saloons simply sucked the town's blood. In all such places there is no plentitude of money anyway, and when it goes to the saloon it cannot go into legitimate business channels. I happen to have some knowledge of the town referred to here: its financial condition is reflected in the credit of its merchants. I, of course, have no special knowledge of the dealers in other lines than groceries, but no sane jobber would sell a single retail grocer there for anything but cash. I assure you that this is literally true.

The Jobber.

AMONG THE TRADE.

The decree by the New York banks refusing to accept Philadelphia checks for deposit has had no particular effect on the grocery trade as yet. Local jobbers, however, report a greater disposition on the part of certain New York sellers to demand New York drafts in payment of bills instead of simple checks, which ordinarily are accepted without question. This is probably because of the New York banks' rule to accept Philadelphia checks only for collection, which prevents the holder of the check from drawing against it until the collection is actually made.

Dear Sir:—I have a grocery store and also carry a general line of other goods, as stated in the inclosed advertisement. Am in a small town of about 500 people, and am ten miles from three county seats, but this circular sure got the business. I mailed them within eight miles of our town, and it would surprise you to know of the many strangers who have come to me by reading this advertisement. I agree with you in circular advertising, especially in small towns. Tell the gentleman who writes in issue of October 28th, to go after them. He can get 1,000 circulars printed for a very small cost, and every one he sends out will be read.

Yours truly,
O. H. KNIGHT.

The circular inclosed, which as this correspondent says, "sure got the business," is printed on green paper, 8 x 13 inches. Here is the reduced reproduction:—

This circular doesn't say so, but I conclude that the articles named in the four lists are 5 and 10-cent articles, since the heading exploits that department of Mr. Knight's business. I feel somewhat delicate about criticising a successful advertisement, but I still think it would have been better to say exactly what the prices of these goods were. It is plain that it would have kept nobody away from the store, and if it had had any effect at all it would naturally be in the way of getting more people in.

In spite of the fact that this circular paid, I should improve the quality of the paper, if I were Mr. Knight, simply for my own satisfaction if not for anything else. It is pretty poor paper, and a few cents a thousand would improve it and the consequent appearance of the circular very much indeed.

I believe a 5 and 10-cent counter is a good thing both for a general storekeeper and an exclusive grocer.

Our Tremendous Business in Tropical Food Products.

Figures of Last Year Shows Heavy Increase in Imports of Practically Everything in Above Line. Cocoa Values Now Exceed Value of Tea Imports. Large Increase in Coffee Imports Over Last Year. This Country Dependent on Tropics for Many Articles of Food and Drink.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Nov. 15, 1907.

Some figures obtained from the Department of Commerce and Labor during the week reveal the enormous business done in the United States in tropical food products and the extent to which this country is dependent on tropical countries for many of its most choicely prized articles of food and drink. During the calendar year 1907 the United States will bring in over $600,000,000 worth of tropical and sub-tropical products. This is against $218,000,000 in 1885.

Practically all of the articles of tropical production imported show an increase in 1907 over the figures of the preceding years, most of them in both quantity and value, though in some cases the increased value is due to an advance in price rather than an increase in quantity.

Foodstuffs form approximately one-half of the large total of material drawn from the tropics for use of the people of the United States. The United States is a larger user of cane sugar than any other country of the world, and this article is, of course, entirely of a tropical or sub-tropical production. Its people also consume a larger quantity of coffee than those of any other country, and this article is exclusively of tropical origin. Of cocoa, the importations are rapidly growing and now exceed in value the importations of tea.

A large increase in the importation and use of cocoa has developed only in recent years. The quantity of cocoa imported a decade ago, in the fiscal year 1897, was but 31,000,000 pounds, while in the fiscal year 1907 it was 92,000,000 pounds, the value having grown from about $3,000,000 in 1897 to over $13,000,000 in 1907. In 1897 the value of cocoa imported was but about one-fourth that of tea; in 1907 it fell but a few thousand dollars below that of tea, and in the nine months ending with September, 1907, exceeds the value of tea imports by more than $1,000,000. The total value of cocoa in the crude state imported in the nine months ending with September was $11,750,000, against $6,750,000 in the same months of 1906.

The coffee imports in the nine months ending with September, 1907, amount to practically $56,000,000 in value, against a little more than $46,000,000 in the same months of 1906; and the quantity imported in the nine months of the present year aggregate 732,000,000 pounds, against 532,000,000 pounds in the same months of the preceding year. Of tea, the importations in the nine months ending with September, 1907, amounted in value to $10,500,000, against $9,500,000 in the corresponding months of 1906, the quantity imported in the nine months of 1907 being 63,000,000 pounds, against 60,000,000 pounds in the same months of the preceding year.

Cane sugar brought into the United States amounted to $112,000,000 in the nine months ending with September, 1907, against $98,500,000 in the same months of last year; the quantity brought in being 4,733,000,000 pounds, against 4,133,000,000 pounds in the corresponding period of last year. These figures include the sugar from Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippine Islands; that from Porto Rico and Hawaii being no longer included in the official returns of imports from foreign countries by reason of the fact that both those islands are now customs districts of the United States, but their product may be properly considered in a discussion of the tropical products brought to the mainland of the United States. The sugar brought from the Hawaiian Islands in the nine months ending with September, 1907, amounted to 752,000,000 pounds, valued at $25,750,000; and that from Porto Rico, 399,000,000 pounds, valued at $14,500,000 while from the Philippine Islands whose products are still included in the figures of imports from foreign countries, the quantity of sugar brought in was 4,500,000 pounds valued at $68,000.

Fruits and nuts also show a large increase in importations in 1907 compared with earlier years, and especially with the immediately preceding year, the total value of the imports in the nine months ending with September of the present year being over $26,000,000, against a little less than $21,000,000 in the same months of 1906, and a little more than $17,000,000 in the same months of 1905. The most important article in this class, in point of value, at least, is bananas, of which the value of the imports in the nine months ending with September, 1907, is slightly below $10,000,000, against a little more than $8,000,000 in the corresponding months of 1905, lemons being the next largest single item, $4,500,000; almonds, $1,500,000; walnuts, $1,500,000, and currants $1,000,000 in value in the nine months ending with September of the present year.

HOLT.

Condemned Carton Fruits as Canned Goods.

Food Commissioner A. C. Bird, of Michigan, last week created a stir in the dried fruit trade by condemning practically the whole season's shipment of package currants, raisins and dates, under the Michigan pure food law, or more exactly, under its labeling provisions. Because these goods, packed in cardboard cartons did not bear the name of the packer he has held them to be misbranded, under an interpretation which classes them as "canned goods." The trade claims that cartons are merely temporary packages, which can be opened easily and are sold not as a proprietary article, but like any other staples of the grocery trade, merely in packages for convenience. They agree in future to have cartons printed with all the details the Commissioner desires, unless the trade prefer their own name on the package. In view of the circumstances the Commissioner has agreed to handle the question with leniency and has already passed the goods for this season.

HOLIDAY FRUIT CAKE

This is the regular so-called English Dark Fruit cake.

It was baked several weeks ago and has been laid aside to acquire that rich blending of the flavors of the various ingredients that cannot be obtained in any other way.

Among the good things in Ivins' Holiday Fruit Cake that "cost money" are Citron at 18 cents per lb., Lemon Peel at 10 cents, Seedless Raisins at 12 cents, Walnut Kernels at 25 cents, Cinnamon at 40 cents, Cloves at 20 cents, and Mace at 45 cents.

We just mention the above to show that we are using the best materials and putting out the finest quality of cake. Thousands of people will pay 40, 50 and 60 cents for fruit cake at confectioners this fall and get nothing better than what we will sell you for 15 or 16 cents.

Useful Facts About Groceries

The department which will henceforth be conducted under the above head is best explained by the letter which appears below, and which was recently sent to the "Grocery World." In the hope that a little such matter may be of interest and value to "Grocery World" readers, a short educational article along the lines indicated will appear under this head from time to time.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as uear as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long-looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. BRECKENRIDGE.

Liebig's Extract of Meat.

An essence of River Plate meat, originally prepared by the late Baron Liebig, of Munich.

The process is as follows: The meat of the animal after being killed is allowed to cool for twenty-four hours. It is then placed in round iron rollers (armed inside with points), which, being revolved by steam, reduce the meat to a pulp. This pulp is thrown into a large vat with water and allowed to steam for an hour, and is then passed into a reservoir (shaped like a trough, with a sieve at the bottom), whence the liquid of the meat oozes into another vat, whence the fat is drawn off. The pure gravy is then put into open vats, supplied with steam pipes and with bellows on the surface, which produce a blast and carry off the steam, thus helping the evaporation and preventing condensation.

Here it remains from six to eight hours, when it is passed into a filtering vat and drawn off in the form of extract of meat; when cool it partially hardens and is ready for packing in tins for exportation. It is afterwards divided into small pots and tins as required for retail purposes.

Limburger Cheese.

A kind of cheese made at Herve, near Limburg, in Belgium. It is usually eaten in a state of putrefaction.

Lime Fruit or Limes.

The fruit of the citrus lime tree, a species of lemon or orange, of which, like apple trees, there are several kinds. Their flavor is generally better liked than that of lemons, they are more juicy and their acidity more acrid.

The lime produced in the West Indies, Florida, and in Southern Europe is of globular shape, much smaller than a lemon, has a thinner rind, and its color when the fruit arrives at a perfect state of maturity is a fine bright yellow.

The Limetta lime of India is a sweet variety. Ogeechee limes are of Floridan growth, rather larger than the others. Bergamotte limes are another kind cultivated in the Mediterranean region, and are often, but erroneously, called "shaddocks."

Limes are classed by several botanists as hybrids, between lemons and oranges, and the fruit is used for similar purposes as the lemon.

A barrel of fruit yields six to eight gallons of juice, and a gallon of this will produce 12 to 15 ounces of citric acid.

Jamestown Gold Medals.

In the awarding of medals for the exhibits at the Jamestown Exposition, it is noted that McCormick & Co., Baltimore, have received gold medals on their Bee and Banquet brand teas and spices and Bee and Clover brand flavoring extracts and root beer.

These gold medals are the highest that have been awarded at any exposition in the United States. The Commission of Judges was appointed by President Roosevelt and are the highest authorities in the country, being composed of the following:—

Dr. H. W. Wiley, Chief Chemist United States Agricultural Department, Washington, D. C.

Dr. John H. Long, Northwestern University Medical School, Chicago, Ill.

Prof. F. W. Clarke, Chief Chemist, United States Geological Survey, Washington, D. C.

That the Commission made a very wise selection is undoubted, as these brands of extracts, spices and teas are noted for their absolute purity, strength and flavor.

The diplomas were given to each brand of teas, extracts and spices, and not on the exhibit as a whole. Each article was taken separately and its merits passed upon and given the gold medal.

I Laugh at 'Em.

I don't know when I've read anything with as much interest as I did those two articles from the "Woman's Home Companion" and the "Ladies' Home Journal."

The "Grocery World" seemed to get a little riled about 'em. I never would. They amuse me.

The "Ladies' Home Journal" says it issues a million copies and that five people read each copy. That means that 5,000,000 people read that article on co-operative buying for consumers.

I don't know what the circulation of the "Woman's Home Companion" is. Let's say 500,000, which at five readers to a copy means 2,500,000 people who read the article about the dirty stores.

Seven million and a half people read 'em both, and yet I'd bet my wife's entire fortune that not a line in either one will have the slightest effect upon the business of any grocer.

Before I get through you're going to agree with me.

Take the "Woman's Home Companion" article on dirty stores. I read every line of it; the substance was "watch your grocer, madam, he's keeping a dirty store—dirty in places where you don't see it."

Now.

My wife read this article too. I talked it over with her.

"What do you think of it?" I asked her when she read it.

"Oh, I suppose there are a lot of dirty grocery stores," she said, "but I wouldn't deal at one."

"If you knew it," I interposed.

"Oh, I'd know it," she replied. "A grocer who is naturally dirty will keep a store that's dirty all through. If he's naturally dirty he won't see the dirt, and it will crop out so you can tell he's a dirty grocer."

I thought that was real intelligent reasoning—for my wife, and I complimented her on her lucid moment.

But without joking she's plumb right. And that leads directly up to the reason why articles like the "Woman's Home Companion" can never have any effect.

Take a grocer that's born dirty. He don't hate dirt like the rest of us, and you can't make him. From the day he began to look after himself until the day he dies he is probably never spotlessly clean, neither he nor anything belonging to him. His store least of all.

Such a fellow opens a grocery store. Women buy goods there. The store is dirty. One by one the women get sick of the dirt and drift away to cleaner stores. All women are not so clean and those that are not stay on, seeing nothing wrong.

In time all the clean women will have gone, and the only women dealing at that dirty store will be women who don't care whether it's dirty or not.

Now bring on your "Woman's Home Companion" article.

It has no effect on the clean women, for—if they can—they are already dealing at stores whose cleanliness they are satisfied with.

It has no effect on the dirty women, because they don't know dirt when they see it, and cleanly instincts don't come as premiums with the "Woman's Home Companion."

Don't you see?

No clean woman ever deals with a dirty grocery store if she can help it.

And all but a very few can.

Some can't, worse luck. Not long ago I dropped in at the house of a cousin of mine who lives in a dinky little suburb out on the main line.

I found her in the kitchen washing apples and whimpering to beat the band.

"Good Lord, Mame!" I said, "what's the matter with you? What are you washing those apples for?"

"Oh, I wash everything I can that comes from that store!" she complained. "There never was such a dirty hole! It's the filthiest place I ever saw!"

"Why do you deal there?" I asked her.

"Because there's no other store in the place, that's why!" she said. "The idea of living in a place with only one grocery store!"

So that the "Woman's Home Companion" article don't have any effect even on clean women who for reasons beyond their control do deal with dirty grocery stores.

Why? Because they know the store's dirty already and would escape if they could.

Now, ain't I came pretty close to proving my case? If there was

The high-class, wealthy trade comes to the store that uses the AMERICAN SLICING MACHINE, because of the appetizing, uniform slices just the right thickness.

The poorer trade, which has to count the pennies, but whose money is just as good, comes to the store that uses the AMERICAN SLICING MACHINE, because of the greater number of slices they receive for the same money.

The progressive merchant, therefore, instals the machine and catches the trade both ways.

You're progressive, aren't you?

such a thing as a clean woman innocently and unknowingly dealing with a dirty grocery store, then the "Woman's Home Companion" might wake her up and make her look about a little closer.

But there ain't such a thing.

Next, the "Ladies' Home Journal" article telling consumers they could live cheaper if they would buy wholesale quantities from the jobber.

My wife read that one, too.

"Why don't you do that?" I asked her, when she laid the paper down.

"Because it takes a lot of money," she retorted, "and you won't give it to me."

My brother, who was in the room at the time, said something behind his hand that sounded like "stung!"

If what my wife said is true—mind you, I say "if"—there's a lovely reason why I don't introduce co-operative buying into my happy home. Also I am persuaded that there are some thousands of other happy homes with the same reason.

But suppose some of 'em try it. In some little town a lot of ambitious females who read the "Ladies' Home Journal" and are up to the minute in the latest style of wet-nursing, drink in the co-operative buying article and decide they'll do it.

Mrs. Hustle is elected manager of the Co-operative Buying League and starts out to get up an order.

Say she gets it—maybe it's quite a good-sized one. She finds out the nearest wholesale grocer and hopefully gets on the train one day with the order in her pocket.

While the other dear sisters stay home figuring what they've saved and laying out plans to spend it.

Mrs. Hustle finds the jobber and lays the order before him, sweetly explaining that she and some of her friends had decided henceforth to buy their groceries in wholesale quantities, and would he please give her the very lowest wholesale prices.

Can you see anything doing? I can't. That jobber sells all the retailers in Mrs. Hustle's town. Or wants to. He can see his finish if he fills Mrs. Smith's order, and he don't fill it.

Time was when he might have filled it, but too many retailers have lately organized co-operative buying departments of their own to make it safe nowadays. He's afraid to fill it, and Mrs. Hustle goes back to her village with her tail, etc.

Of course there are other jobbers, but she can't get very far away, and ninety-nine chances out of a hundred she won't find a jobber to fill her order. Piff goes another good scheme.

I say again, I wouldn't get mad at such articles; I'd laugh at 'em.

New York Chemists Attack Federal Food Rulings.¶

Charging that the Federal Department of Agriculture has shown a lack of expert knowledge of facts in making regulations for carrying out the provisions of the national Food and Drugs Act, the New York Sections of the Society of Chemical Industry and the American Chemical Society have passed joint resolutions asking that the publication of these circulars be suspended until steps can be taken for better protecting the interests of the manufacturers. For this purpose the Secretary of Agriculture, Secretary of the Treasury and Secretary of Commerce and Labor are requested to confer with a selected committee of experienced chemists and manufacturers recognized as authorities in this field.

The resolutions passed by both societies are similar and read as follows:—

Whereas, The Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906, is generally approved of by the chemical world, and in the opinion of the New York Section of the Society of Chemical Industry is one of the most important measures which have been taken for the protection of the public; and

Whereas, On the other hand, we cannot but feel that the rules and regulations published from time to time by the Department of Agriculture for carrying out the provisions of this act show frequently a lack of expert knowledge of the facts in the particular case and an apparent failure to consider at all the interest of the manufacturer; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, who are given the authority to administer this law, be requested to suspend the publication of these circulars at present and before taking further steps in this direction to consult with a carefully selected committee of experienced chemical manufacturers and scientists, recognized as authorities in these fields, since a broad knowledge of the several branches of chemistry and commercial usage and conditions seems to us to be necessary for those who are to establish these regulations. As such conferences are the rule in the European countries where laws affecting important industries are to be enforced, we believe this plan should also be followed here.

First make a board platform about 15 x 25 inches on which to erect your tent. The poles are about 15 inches high and are nailed to the platform; the ridge pole is the length of the tent (15 inches). Use twine for ropes and fasten about 6 inches from the ends of your stuff. Stretch your twine and fasten to tacks in your platform. The front and back flaps of your tent can be sewed or

E. W. ALEXANDER.

Oxford, Pa., Nov. 14, 1907.

Manufacturers who have adopted premium schemes to create a demand for their products, have always given the premiums to consumers. Where manufacturers have offered an incentive to grocers to push their goods, the incentive has always been small. It had to be small, because no individual manufacturer could afford to give a grocer from his individual profits anything more important than a silk hat, an umbrella, etc. But when twenty or more prominent manufacturers, whose products are sold by grocers everywhere, set aside a part of their advertising appropriations to put into a fund to buy something substantial for the merchant, that something represents an article of sufficient value to make it worth the grocer's while to take a real interest in pushing the goods of the manufacturers who take this means of showing their appreciation of the grocer's services. That the importance of this matter may be plain to you, figure out the following: The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., New York, gives you a quantity of Universal coupons with their Hasty Lunch Chocolate, Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoa. No better goods ever came into this market. Add these coupons to the ones you get with the products of the following firms and you will find you can save enough coupons in three months to entitle you to a first-class set of harness, a platform scale or a roll-top desk. In six months you can save enough to get a good runabout, in a year a good piano:

The American Premium Co., Philadelphia; Wrigley Manufacturing Co., Philadelphia; Franklin Baker Co., Philadelphia; the Porcela Co., Philadelphia; McCanna & Fraser Co., Philadelphia; John Scott & Co., Philadelphia; Weber & Loesch, Philadelphia; Wm. Dreydoppel's Sons, Philadelphia; J. W. Beardsley's Sons, New York; Dixon Crucible Co., Jersey City; Sea Foam Baking Powder Co., New York; Flodon Manufacturing Co., Boston, Mass.; Potter & Wrightington, Boston, Mass.

Within a month a number of other big local houses will join this enterprise. Don't you think this matter is important enough for you to push the goods of these firms? Don't you think the manufacturers who have been been first to recognize the grocer's right of consideration should have the grocer's hearty co-operation?

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XIX.—Adjusting Jobber's Errors.

Mistakes will happen, even in the best regulated business houses.

If the retailer will make up his mind that the traveling men who call on him regularly are his friends, and will see that he gets an absolutely square deal with their houses, and will just make memorandums of goods which open up wrong, so he can notify the house, and then talk it over with the traveler when he comes, he will find this to be by far the easiest and most equitable way to adjust claims.

No use flying into a rage and throwing your trade to another house. If you change houses, do so after your grievance has been settled one way or the other, for then you are in a better position to make a sane selection. All houses make mistakes, and all should be willing to rectify them if brought to their attention in the proper manner.

The retailer makes mistakes, but does not do so intentionally, and feels that his customer is very unreasonable if an opportunity to rectify the mistake is not given. The man who sells to the retailer should be accorded the same privilege, and it need never be doubted that he will make it right.

The retailer nearly always has an opportunity to examine the goods which go out to his customers, but the jobber, who sells in original packages, does not have this opportunity, and goods may reach the retailer which do not open up right, although the buyer may have paid a high price and seen a very fine sample line. A report by the retailer, and a display of the goods to the traveler, will cause the jobber to examine the balance of his stock, see its condition, and then go back to the factory for satisfaction.

As to Organizing.

New Castle Pa., Nov. 7, 1907.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—The retail grocers of New Castle, Pa., have been organized for some time, and we have a pretty good organization of our trade, but of course it could be better. We have been lately discussing the matter of organizing the other merchants of the city and ourselves into a merchants' exchange, and I along with two others have been appointed as a committee to get some information along the line of the benefits of such an organization. Please write and give me what information you can in regard to how to organize, and especially the benefits as you in your experience see them personally. I think they should be of great benefit to each trade. We, of course, would have to have a good argument to other business men to organize their separate business or organize into a general organization. Please let me have your ideas as soon as you can. I am a subscriber to your paper and think a whole lot of it. I am satisfied it is money well spent. Please answer as soon as convenient, and oblige,

Yours truly,
JERE BLUCHER.

To the above letter the following reply was sent:—

While I do not know, of course, what sort of a grocery organization you have in New Castle, if it is worth saving I advise you not to merge it in a general mercantile association. The reason for that is, that where a local organization includes merchants of all classes, the subjects upon which they have a common interest are necessarily limited. Outside of credits, for example, and projects for the general good of the community, there are few, if any, topics upon which the members of a general mercantile organization can unite. This means that the merchants belonging to a common class, such as the grocery business will derive but little trade benefit from their connection with such an organization. In order to derive benefits which shall closely affect their own line of business, they should unquestionably maintain an organization of grocers solely.

You ask for an argument upon which to begin a general organization of merchants. I know of no argument stronger than the fact that such an association could absolutely control the matter of credits in your town, by which I mean that they could maintain a list of undesirable customers which would practically prevent the formation of bad debts. Upon other things also, such as weekly half-holidays, evening closing and similar matters, the merchants of a community, if they work together, can secure many privileges which without organization would be denied them.

A Variety of Questions.

Milltown, N. J., Nov. 13, 1907.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—Can you give me names of any firms that make postal cards to order from negatives or prints?

Is it necessary to label home-made jellies, etc., if known to be pure?

Is it practical for a grocer to make a clerk shareholder and profit-sharer in his business, and if so, what steps would be necessary to make things legal and binding?

Thanking you in advance, I remain,

Yours truly,
D. D.

For postal cards from negatives write Williams, Brown & Earle, 9th and Chestnut streets, Phila., Pa.

It is not necessary under the food laws to label pure jelly.

It is perfectly practical to make a clerk a shareholder or profit-sharer in the business without making him a partner. A proper agreement should be drawn up for the signature of each, but particular care should be taken to so frame it that no partnership relation is created.

Organizing an Association.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 11, 1907.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—Kindly advise me how to start a retail grocers' association. There is now going on a movement about starting an associaion which may prove of some protection and such other benefits to the retail grocers of Baltimore. A good many grocers have been consulted and all speak well of such a movement. It only needs a little ginger, or it may be well to join the National Retail Grocers' Association. Your "Grocery World" is taken so well by the retailers of this city, I think if you can interest some it would help well towards raising the standard of our line to a greater extent.

Many thanks for your favor in advance for giving this your attention.

Yours truly,
S. FINE.

The organization of a retail grocers' association is not a matter that can be comprehensively described in a few words. In brief, the best plan is to call a general meeting of the grocers of a community, and out of that form the organization, electing officers and creating committees who shall give outline to the work by adopting a constitution and by-laws, providing plans for the perment work of the organization and so on.

An Insurance Scheme.

Troy, N. Y., Nov. 9, 1907.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—Inclosed is literature of an insurance company which is getting a good many members in this section.

They are organized on the mutual plan and promise remarkable things—a dividend of $500 at the end of five years from a weekly payment of $1. This seems almost impossible, but when all things of their plan of operation are taken into consideration, small expense fund, lapses, which run as high as 60 per cent. in other companies, interest and small death payment ($200 instead of $1,000 in other companies) it looks more feasible.

Do you know anything of this concern, and would you advise joining? The scheme is peculiarly attractive to those who are looking more for investment than insurance, though incidental insurance is no objection. Many grocers here are going into this association, and we would like to if we were assured it was all right.

Do you consider an order route of seventy-five customers, bringing in $150 per week, in proper shape, if the outstanding debts amount to $250 on the average, or is that sum excessive? Most of the customers are weekly and a few monthly.

Yours truly,
BOWMAN & ROWLEY.

The paths of life are strewn with the wrecks of life insurance schemes, all of which offered great advantages over the old line companies. The writer has been bitten in some of them, and has watched a large number of others very closely; they are alluring, but practically never do they keep their promises. Insurance is too important to be gone into on any scheme basis; the wise man seeks the strongest company he can find. The strongest company does not always mean the oldest, but very often it does. Every scheme insurance company which the writer has ever known, with one exception, has either gone completely to pieces or has had to raise its rates. The very low rate with which it allures its members will do very well for a while, because the death rate is low—most of the applicants are young men or hearty men. But as time goes on the members grow older and weaker and the death rate increases. The treasury is soon drained of its surplus, and in order to keep afloat the company must increase rates. This has been the fate of every mutual life insurance company of the type of the one inquired about here (the People's Mutual Life Insurance Association and League, of Syracuse, N. Y.) which the writer has ever known, with the exception of one, and the members of that one are daily expecting an advance to be announced.

The strongest and most emphatic statement has been left until the last. Any insurance concern which promises a dividend of $500 after five years' payments of $1 a week, which means an offer of $500 for $260, is to be viewed with grave suspicion. The "Grocery World" advises that it be left severely alone.

In the case of an order route of seventy-five customers, amounting to $150 per week, the writer believes that outstanding debts of $250 constitute rather an excessive liability. This naturally depends on the character of goods sold on the order route. If they are goods yielding large profits and the selling expenses are light, a man might be able to extricate himself from a load of $250 without special trouble. If the goods sold are the general run of groceries, which might mean a net profit of 10 to 12 per cent., a $250 indebtedness could not easily be paid out of the profits, and would therefore constitute a heavier burden than in the other case.

Western Beet Sugar Sold as Far East as York, Pa.

Another Instance of the Rapid Progress of the American Beet Sugar Industry Now Controlled by the Sugar Trust. Beet Product Underselling Eastern Sugar Ten Points. Trust's Domination in Southwest.

The Sugar Trust seems to be exercising a greater degree of domination over the refined sugar market than has been the case for some years.

For instance, the Trust is now heavily interested in the Western manufacture of beet sugar. For several months there has been a campaign on to bring that sugar into the Eastern markets and sell it in competition with sugar refined on the spot. Recently beet sugar made in some of the Western States has been selling in the East at 4.60 cents, a price 20 points below the Eastern refiners' price at that time. One of the places where it was offered was York, Pa., where sales were made at 4.60 cents, plus the New York freight rate. As the quality was said to be fine, this advantage in price was the means of doing some business, and will probably be the means of doing more.

Thus has the Trust invaded the territory of the Eastern independent refiners.

In New Orleans, La., the cane sugar season is now on, and the necessities of the planters have enabled the Trust to do another shrewd thing. Scarcity of money placed the planters at the mercy of anybody who would buy their sugar, and the Trust did buy it at a very substantial fraction below the market, and below the prices other refiners had paid for raw sugar. This cheap sugar the Trust has refined in its New Orleans refinery and has sent all over the South and Southwest, at every point having the advantage over all other refiners.

So that while the other sugar refiners go right ahead making and selling sugar, the American Sugar Refining Co., through its beet sugar connections and its Louisiana refinery, is clearly the dominating influence.

ASSOCIATION NEWS

Louisanna.

A general discussion on the Louisiana pure food law and its effect on the grocery trade occupied the attention of a largely attended meeting of the New Orleans Wholesale Grocers' Association last week. For some time this pure food bill has been attracting a great deal of attention among the grocers and they have been seeking a conference with the State Health Board representatives in hopes of securing certain changes and modifications that are desired. Some time ago a committee was named to confer with Dr. C. H. Irion, president of the State Board of Health, but this conference has not yet been held.

Little Rock, Ark.

The last number of the weekly bulletin issued by the Retail Grocers' Association of Little Rock, Ark., contained the following timely suggestions:—

Money Situation.—If there ever was a time when extreme care and caution should be displayed by retailers, now is the time. The precautionary measures adopted by the banks, not only in Little Rock, but all over the country, should be an object lesson to the merchants to "put on the brakes" on loose and indiscriminate credit giving. Just as much care should be exercised in buying, and every department of the business should be closely observed. Your goods on the shelves at such times are a better asset than accounts on the books and the greatest care should be exercised in extending credit.

Cashing Checks. — Merchants should also be very careful about cashing checks for parties unknown to them, and a little caution along this line may avert a considerable loss to you. With so many firms paying off their employees with checks it is a splendid opportunity for the bogus check men to get in their work.

Lancaster, Pa.

The Lancaster Retail Grocers' Association, at their regular meeting held last week, received their charter and are renewing their efforts to have all grocery stores close on Sundays, and will succeed, as their intention is to prosecute all who do not comply with the law in that respect.

The nomination of officers for the ensuing year were made, and a lively contest is looked for in the election of directors, quite a number contesting for the places to be filled.

Slices Everything from 6-pound Knuckles to half-ounce Ends.

Be A Successful Specialist

Do some one thing better than your competitors possibly can and your success is assured.

The Grocer equipped with Johnson's "EVERSHARP" slicing machine can without trouble slice Libby, McNeil & Libby's best dried beef to perfection. And these moist, delicate flavored, full size, rosy hued, freshly cut wafer slices are all alone. A class by themselves—so much larger—so much thinner—so much brighter, attractive and better tasting, their superiority so marked and self evident—so far above comparison, that delighted housekeepers once acquainted with Johnson's sandwich sliced beef use it so frequently, in so many different ways, with such gratifying success, nothing could induce them to buy dried beef cut on any other machine.

A chance to secure a complete monopoly of this most profitable rapid-selling, trade-drawing specialty is yours to-day—to-morrow may be too late.

Send for a sample of the best dried beef sliced to perfection.

A. W. JOHNSON, New Brunswick, N. J.

A full attendance is looked for on that night, not only on account of interest in the election, but because a smoker will be tendered the members and friends.

Prospects of the association are very encouraging. The work of the association during the past year has been full of interest to the grocer, and the great majority seem to appreciate the efforts of the association in uplifting the condition of the trade.

Neither Side Wants Pennsylvania Sulphured Peach Case Tried at Once.

Case Brought Against Altoona Grocer Likely to Be Postponed Until Federal Department Issues Definite Ruling on Use of Sulphur in Food.

There is much reason to believe that the Pennsylvania Dairy and Food Department is not at all desirous of bringing the case started against sulphured peaches to trial at any time in the near future.

Under the new Pennsylvania food law appeals from magistrates' decisions are not a matter of right, but must be granted by the Common Pleas Court. The department is opposing the appeal of the Altoona case, and argument upon it will be heard in January next. There is hardly any question but that it will be granted and the case set down for trial in due course. Just when "in due course" means that it will be reached is uncertain, but neither the grocery interests representing the defendant, nor the Dairy and Food Department, are anxious to try it, and the case will therefore probably be postponed from time to time. There is a definite motive in this—holding the matter up until the Federal department issues something official concerning the use of sulphur in food. Everything issued so far has been tentative. The Federal Food and Drug Board are reported as strongly in favor of no trial for the time being, as they do not wish their hands to be forced. If the Federal Board decides to permit the permanent use of sulphur the Pennsylvania case will probably be dropped.

DO YOU WANT TO SELL YOUR BUSINESS?

We find buyers for grocery and general store businesses—nothing else. We are specialists in that and we know what we are about.

In the term "grocery stores" we include butter and egg stores, tea and coffee stores, green groceries and anything else in the same line.

If you want to sell your business, we have a customer. If you want to buy one, we know where something is that we're sure will suit you.

Write, call or telephone.

WHO WANTS TO GIVE A GENERAL STORE FOR A GOOD FARM?

A client of ours in Atlantic County, N. J., has a 13¼ acre farm, high, cleared and level, directly on the new electric line from Philadelphia to Atlantic City and only seven miles from the latter; good house, barn and other buildings, including large chicken house and yard; two good wells; 100 fruit trees. Splendid place for profitable poultry business, owing to closeness to Atlantic City. Owner wants to exchange for general store in New Jersey or Pennsylvania. He will sell for $4,000 cash or $4,500 trade, subject to mortgage of $2,500.

Say, Mr. Grocer:—

Popping corn, like nearly everything else, is mighty high this season, still you can sell a 20-oz. package "Brad's Tip-Top" at 10 cents and make a fair profit; a 10-oz. package at 5 cents, or a 1-lb. package "I-X-L" at 10 cents showing better profit, so it's up to you. Ask your Jobbers, or write,

WE HAVE THE BEST OF REASONS FOR TALKING ABOUT IT

We make a point of exploiting the fact that you will find "The Bottom as Good as the Top" in Apelpi Evaporated Apples, simply because usually the top is very much better than the bottom. We pride ourselves on this particular brand, have built up a big demand for it on its quality alone—you can do the same thing.

Ritter's Guaranty

In compliance with the rules and regulations for the enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act published by the Commission appointed for this purpose, we have filed a guaranty covering all our products with the Agricultural Department in Washington under the serial number 1017.

In the future all our products will be labeled in accordance with Regulation Nine as follows: Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act, June 30, 1906, No. 1017.

This guaranty is sufficient and covers every sale we make and no individual guaranties are necessary.

It has always been our aim to manufacture pure and wholesome food, to comply with existing laws and to protect all who buy our products, and we shall carry out this principle in the future.

We hope to deserve your continued confidence and patronage.

HERE IS YOUR QUESTION ANSWERED

Why put in Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa when you are selling five brands now? Well, because it is different from the rest, for one reason. It is the only cocoa packed in glass. It stands alone, and you know how novelty helps a thing to sell. The grocer who infuses a little novelty into his business is the grocer who succeeds.

Another thing, Croft's Swiss Milk Cocoa is better than the rest. That isn't a bluff, honestly. We take out of our cocoa, in the making, a substance which other manufacturers allow in, greatly to the injury of the flavor of their goods.

Now do you know why you should sell it?

Will you mention the "Grocery World" when you write?

40 cents a pound

Packed in ½-lb. jars, 6 and 12-lb. boxes

Do You Want to Make $300 More Every Year?

It is a mighty nice thing to be able to increase your profits by such a tidy sum as $300 a year on an investment of less than $20, but that is what you can do if you will put in an Acme Peanut Roaster (equipped for kerosene, gas or gasoline), the simplest and cheapest automatic roaster made. Anybody can operate it. There is nothing to get out of order and little or no expense in running it.

Give your customers a chance to buy freshly roasted peanuts and you will make from $1 to $3 a day. We would like to tell you more about it.

BLOOKER'S COCOA

IS A LUXURY TO THE PALATE
A NECESSITY TO THE STOMACH
AN ECONOMY TO THE POCKET

ALL GROCERS SHOULD HAVE IT

American Depot, 46 Hudson St., New York

In stock by H. KELLOGG & SONS, 19 South Front Street, Philadelphia, Penna.

Anker's Bouillon Capsules

SEE THEM MELT!

Put a package of these on your counter, with a little card telling what they're are good for, and they'll melt away like snow. ANKER'S BOUILLON CAPSULES make bouillon, soup or beef tea, and everybody likes one of the three, especially when they're so delicious as they are. Ten capsules in a box—drop one in hot water. Good goods and a good profit.

ROYAL SPECIALTY CO., Sole Manufacturers 92 READE STREET NEW YORK

They're Tired of the Imitations

Don't you think your trade are about tired of the rainbow-hued imitation gelatine that desire for novelty has given some vogue during the last few years?

Don't you think they'd like some real gelatine—the pure, fresh, old-fashioned gelatine made of fine calves' stock, clear spring water and nothing else.

You'd probably be surprised at the eager welcome Chalmers' Gelatine would get from your customers. Try it. Granulated or shredded.

SOLVING HAM PROBLEMS

All of the problems of your ham department are solved by selling PREMIUM HAMS — the same yesterday, to-day and forever. We can and do control our raw material, and so PREMIUM HAMS steadily maintain the same perfect quality.

And the advertising we do for them brings a steady stream of trade to the grocers' door.

Swift & Company, U. S. A.

Do You Know What Ramly Stands For?

We'll tell you—the finest Turkish cigarette ever made to sell for 10 cents. It is the one that is so widely imitated by our competitors.

If you want particular smokers to come to you, put the Ramly in stock.

$3.00 FROM $1.50

James T. Shinn's Liquid Rennet has been on the market so long that it seems hardly necessary to speak of its quality; most people know it as the finest, cleanest rennet made.

Not all grocers know that they can double their money on this specialty, however—an unusual chance with an article so high-grade.

Costs $1.50 per dozen, brings back $3.00.

Bell's Seasoning
Always Found Upon Your Mother's Pantry Shelf

A NICE TURKEY DRESSING.—Toast 7 or 8 slices of white bread. Place in a deep dish adding butter the size of an egg. Cover with hot water to melt butter and make bread right consistency. Add one even tablespoon of Bell's Seasoning and 1 even teaspoon salt. When well mixed, stir in 1 or 2 raw eggs. For goose or duck add one raw onion chopped fine.

(From Bell's Receipts. Ask your Grocer.)

Sausages Flavored with Bell's Sausage Seasoning Are Delicious.

Everybody wants seasoning, and everybody will buy the seasoning that will make poultry and meats taste their best.

Bell's Seasoning is as far ahead of other prepared seasonings as it is of home-made seasoning. It makes every dish a delight to the palate, while it saves work and prevents many a failure.

The above advertisement tells some of its uses. You can sell it. Most Philadelphia jobbers handle it.

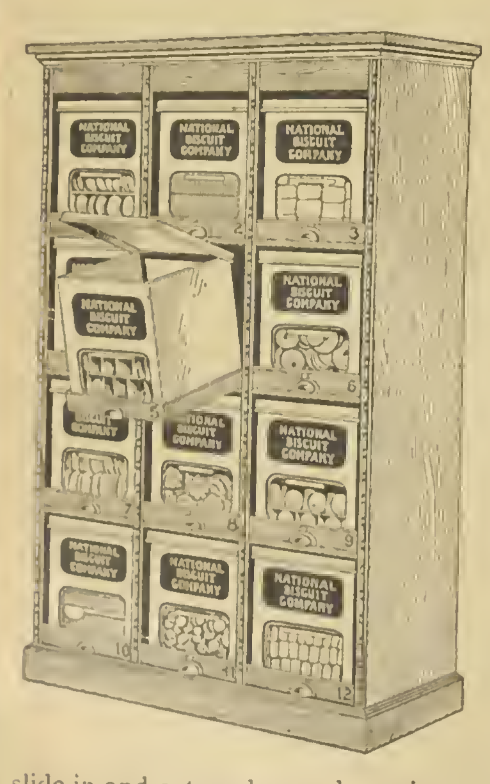
How to Make Your Cake Trade Pay



The easiest, cheapest and simplest way to make your cake trade pay a decent profit is to put in a DURHAM DISPLAY CAKE CABINET.

This cabinet is the most useful store fixture ever introduced to the trade. It prevents your most serious losses—those caused by sampling and breakage.

The saving on these items alone will soon pay for the cabinet.

It is made of highly polished oak, in sizes to hold 12, 16, 20 and 24 cans of standard size. It is light in weight and so arranged that the cans rest upon elevated roller trays, easy to slide in and out, and as each can is numbered you save time and labor in taking and filling orders.

Send for full particulars and prices.

HOW TO SEASON POULTRY

Cool weather brings the demand for poultry, and the demand for poultry brings the necessity of seasoning it with something. Will it be with home-made seasoning—a few herbs and spices thrown in and mixed at random, never twice alike, or will you sell our Spiced Poultry Seasoning?

Spiced Poultry Seasoning is composed of garden herbs and spices, blended always the same, in precisely the proportions needed to produce the acme of savoriness. It is safe to say that home-made seasoning can never be half as good as Spiced Poultry Seasoning. Just tell your customers this.

Do you know how cheap Electricity is? Ever think of using it to Grind Coffee? Ask the Manager of the nearest Power House. He will post you on the convenience and economy of Electricity in your business. An will save your clerks' time, your customers' time, and advertise your store. Write for catalogue describing our various Electric Mills, with capacities for granulating from four ounces to nine pounds of coffee per minute.

The illustration shows our double mill No. 08712, with motor for direct current; one mill fitted with grinders for granulating, and the other for pulverizing. Each iron hopper holds six pounds of coffee. There are two speeds, fast and slow, which can be instantly changed from one to the other; at fast speed this mill granulates three pounds of coffee per minute. Fitted with ¾ H. P. motor for direct current, or with ½ H. P. motor for alternating current. The latter for slow speed only. Can be regulated while running for grinding either fine or coarse.

We will gladly give any information desired about these mills.

MAKE MONEY
—WITHOUT WORKING FOR IT—

The difference between the Ariosa proposition and other package coffees: With the others you create the demand and get your profit on what you sell and that's all. With Ariosa the demand is already created everywhere, so you get your profit without working for it and in addition the vouchers coming to you with every case will be exchanged for almost anything you may need in your home or store.

For Pickles Alone

Here is the T. & S. Pickle Cabinet, made revolving or non-revolving, as you like. Has no banana tree and is for pickles exclusively.

A handsome fixture. Solid oak or cherry, ball-bearing casters, with four three-gallon clean glass jars with covers. Dirt and insect proof and occupies only two square feet of floor space. Keeps pickles clean, fresh and inviting. A silent but effective salesman.

A Wonderful New Process

No pickles packed in glass can approach Hoffman House little pickles, packed in tin.

They are unquestionably the most delicious little pickles packed, not because they are packed in tin altogether, but because they are prepared by a new process, owned and used by us alone.

Tenders them without destroying crispness, gives them an extra spicy vim, and entirely eliminates that harsh vinegary bite that keeps the eater of some pickles from eating all he wants.

The tins are enameled inside—as safe and sanitary as porcelain.

"Is This What I Made?"

If the cook who invented Baked Beans with tomato sauce were to come back and open up some of the cans labeled Baked Beans he would go gladly back to oblivion.

For "Baked Beans" doesn't always mean baked beans any more. In most cases it means beans boiled or steamed, dampened with a little cheap catsup and packed. The result is an attempted fraud on the palate of him who knows the real thing.

L. & S. Baked Beans are really baked in the good new way. We guarantee that absolutely. Baking makes the bean over. Instead of swelling and mushing it up like steaming or boiling, it leaves it just as firm but mealy and melting.

And our tomato sauce is tomato sauce made by an expert.

If 1000 Retailers in Philadelphia Recommended Us, Would YOU Believe in Us?

One of the hardest propositions which confront the retailer is to turn their bad debts into cash. Lots of them have tried different collection agencies, paid retaining or subscription fees and got no results; so it is hard to convince them that any one can help to bring the beats to book.

We show you how to collect your own accounts; nobody handles your money but you. We can give you the names of a thousand merchants in Philadelphia whom we have shown how to get money due them which had been charged off long before they heard of us.

It costs you nothing to find out what our plan is—can you afford not to?

Only Coffee Produced in Java Island Can Can Be Sold as Java

Federal Food Board Issues Food Decision Which, if Meant to be Taken as a Ruling, Forbids Sale as Java of Large Percentage of Coffee Formerly Sold as Java. Seems Impossible of Enforcement.

During the past week the Federal Food Board has issued one of the most important decisions yet promulgated under the Federal food law. It concerns the naming of Java coffee, a question hotly discussed in the trade for several months. The gist of the department's decision is that only coffee grown on the island of Java can be sold as Java. This excludes the most of the coffee that has been sold as Java, as only a small percentage of so-called Java is produced by Java island.

The full text of the decision is as follows:—

FOOD INSPECTION DECISION
82.
LABELING OF COFFEE PRODUCED IN THE DUTCH EAST INDIES.

There seems to be in the trade much uncertainty respecting the requirements of the Department of Agriculture as to the labeling of coffee produced in the Dutch East Indies. This question has been under advisement by the Department for some time, and, with the cooperation of the Department of State, important information has been secured.

The Department of State was asked to communicate with the Government of the Netherlands and ascertain to what extent in the opinion of that government the term "Java" should be used in harmony with the provisions of the law as applicable to coffees produced in the Dutch East Indies.

A communication has been received through the Department of State from the American Minister at the Hague, who has consulted the Netherlands Government on this subject. In this communication the American Minister states:—

"The term 'Java Coffee' has been abused for many years, hence it arises that of both roasted and unroasted coffee, perchance ten times as much coffee is sold to the consumer, under the name of 'Java Coffee,' as is grown in Java.

"In conformance with the provisions of the 'pure food act,' all coffee coming from the island of Java might be called 'Java Coffee,' that from the Padang districts 'Padang Coffee,' that from Celebes 'Celebes Coffee,' and all other sorts from the Netherlands Indies 'Dutch East Indies Coffee.'

"In the Netherlands what is known as 'Java Coffee' is only the Coffea arabica produced in Java, so that the Coffea liberica coming from that island under the name of 'Java Coffee' falls as little under that term as all the coffee from the rest of the islands of the Indian Archipelago."

The Department is of the opinion that the suggestions which are incorporated in this quotation from the American Minister at the Hague indicate a proper method of labeling coffee coming from the Dutch East Indies.

Coffee grown on the island of Sumatra would also be properly labeled if called "Sumatra Coffee," or, if desired the label may state specifically and correctly the particular location in which the coffee in question was really grown.

One thing about the decision is notable—the Board does not flatfootedly say that its suggestions must be followed, under pain of prosecution. It simply remarks that it believes certain suggestions advanced by the American minister are proper, leaving it to be inferred whether this constitutes a command or a recommendation.

It is difficult to see how such a ruling could be enforced, since the only means of ascertaining whether coffee sold as Java was grown on or outside Java island is chemical analysis, and chemical analysis would throw no light on the subject whatever.

American Groceries in China.

Canned, Dried and Fresh Fruits Seem to Be Wanted. Two Large Chinese Hotels Serve California Fruit. Not So on Jams and Jellies. Large Trade Waiting for American Brands.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Nov. 22, 1907.

Vice-Consul Ernest Vollmer, writing from Tsingtau, China, says that it would be hard to find an American export which has a better chance of developing large sales in China than American fruit. Last year an American cargo of lumber came to Tsingtau from some Pacific coast port. Some of the officers brought along a lot of California navel oranges which were sold out quickly and which met with such favor that the ship was overrun with people trying to buy more after the entire lot had been sold. Lemons sell here for 5 cents gold each which would seem to be a high enough price when compared with Pacific coast values to warrant an investigation as to the possibilities of supplying the Chinese market. The American oranges are far superior to the small, seedy, tight-skinned Asiatic ones, and would surely be received with favor.

American apples, especially those of Oregon, are also favorably known in China. Some dealers in Shanghai make a regular business of importing them, and a Tsingtau firm has a standing order with the Shanghai house. The apples are by far the best that come to that country; they sell well, and their keeping qualities leave nothing to be desired Aside from oranges, lemons, and apples, it is hardly probable that any other fruit could be sent across the Pacific and find a ready market, but if exporters would make connections with Shanghai jobbers or commission men, it is absolutely certain that a large and growing trade could be worked up.

All of the American tinned fruits are to be found in China and command a ready sale. The two largest hotels in Tsingtau each have a course of California fruit every noon and evening, which is undoubtedly the most popular number on the bill of fare. Peaches, pears and fall apples grow well locally and are shipped extensively to other parts of China, but there are no canneries, and families do not seem to preserve fruit to the extent they do in America. The result is that a great deal of the American goods are used; everybody knows them and they are universally admitted to be the best to be had. Prices are somewhat lower than those in America, where the cost of tinned fruit has gone up a great deal within the last two years, seemingly without a corresponding increase in China.

Though such a satisfactory statement can be made regarding our tinned fruit, just the reverse has to be said of our jams, jellies and preserves. It may be that no attempt has been made to sell the goods in any quantity over there, the cost being perhaps too high, but they are certainly not on the market. Practically everybody eats something of this sort for breakfast, and great quantities of currant, blackberry, strawberry, orange marmalade and other preserves are thus consumed. One might suppose that with the size this industry has reached in the United States it would be reasonable to expect at least some American goods, but everything is English, with occasionally some German goods. If we could succeed in diverting this trade we would gain a market with a great buying capacity and one which is certainly worth capturing.

When it comes to dried fruits the American product again makes a better showing, but one which could easily be improved upon. Prunes, apricots, peaches, pears and other orchard fruits are found but they do not hold the dominating position which their quality should insure them. California figs have an enormous sale, but those things cannot be purchased in China, despite the fact that people are just as fond of them as are other nations. Our raisins should also command a ready sale throughout the Orient. Glazed fruit coming to China from Europe by steamer over the hot southern route simply cannot arrive in as good condition as could American glazed fruit coming through cooler waters. People out there spend their money readily for all such delicacies, as they have little else to spend it on. There are no fine restaurants where they can go for a change, so that if they get to liking anything they will buy it to a greater extent than they would if living in any other country. If our packers will make a study of conditions in China and put up the articles mentioned so that they will keep in this climate, they can be almost absolutely certain of a good business.

Domestic Sardine Pack Short.

Season Over, With a Surplus Far Below Normal. Future Looks Firm.

The domestic sardine canneries have ceased operations for the season. Some packers were considerably short in their deliveries, and others, who succeeded in filling their orders, have a very small surplus on hand. It is not unusual at this time of the year to have from 200,000 to 300,000 cases of sardines in packers' hands for the winter trade. This year, at the outside, it is not estimated that it can reach 10,000 cases surplus, and it is doubtful if it will be that after all orders have been filled.

No more sardines can be packed before May, 1908.

Sardines have as yet practically not advanced in price on account of the money conditions.

Several Western Food Commissioners Adopt Common Attitude Toward Certain Food Adulterations

Food Departments of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin Unite in Several Phases of Food Law Enforcement. Object Is to Enable Manufacturers to Sell Goods in All Six States Under One Label.

Food Commissioner and chemist E. F. Ladd, of North Dakota, has sent the "Grocery World" a copy of an important bulletin just issued by his department, Special Bulletin No. 7. The bulletin aims to instruct the Eastern manufacturer how he can escape the annoyance of having to have a different label for each State.

It seems that the Food Commissioners from a number of the most important Western States having food laws met in St. Paul, Minn., recently and agreed upon an attitude toward certain food products, which if complied with by the manufacturer, will enable him to sell his goods in all of the several States represented at the conference under one label.

The States represented at the conference were Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin, and the gist of the resolutions adopted was as follows:—

1. Resolved, That no artificial color shall be permitted in vanilla extract.

2. Resolved, That vanilla extract complying with the standards of U. S. Circular 19, and containing not less than 40 per cent. of alcohol by volume, may be sold if the face label on both carton and bottle contains the following information:—

First, net weight or measure.

Second, brand or trade-mark (optional).

Third, "Vanilla Extract."

Fourth, percentage of alcohol by volume.

Fifth, the true name and business address of the manufacturer.

3. Resolved, That solutions of coumarin and vanillin will be passed in the states here represented as properly labeled as to the name of the product, if they contain no artificial color and if labeled with the name or names of the flavoring principle or principles, together with the word "Flavor," as "Vanillin Flavor" or "Coumarin and Vanillin Flavor," etc., as the case may be.

4. Resolved, That solutions of (harmless) artificial substances used for flavoring and made to resemble the flavor of pineapple, strawberry raspberry, banana, blackberry, etc., may be sold as "artificial pineapple flavor," "artificial strawberry flavor," etc., if free from artificial coloring and if the label contain no statement or design whereby the purchaser may be misled into believing them prepared from the natural fruits, and if the true extract cannot be made from the plant or part of the plant.

5. Resolved, That the terms extract, flavor, flavoring, spirits, essence and tincture, as applied to solutions used for flavoring food products are held to be synonymous, but the use of any term in lieu of the word "extract" is deprecated as applied to flavoring solutions made from an aromatic plant or part of the plant.

6. Resolved, That any other flavoring extract recognized in U. S. Circular No. 19 and complying with the standard laid down in that circular and free from artificial color, may be sold if the face label on both bottle and carton, contain the following information:

First, net weight or measure.

Second, brand or trade-mark (optional).

Third, name of extract as recognized in Circular 19.

Fourth, percentage of alcohol by volume.

Fifth, the true name and business address of the manufacturer.

7. Resolved, That the terms, "double," "triple," etc., as applied to flavoring extracts, be held to mean respectively two or three times the minimum strength required by the standard as given in U. S. Circular No. 19.

8. Resolved, Further, That the term "concentrated," as applied to flavoring extracts is false and misleading.

9. Resolved, That the use of alum or any other aluminum compound in prepared fruits, vegetables and condiments, is injurious to health and unnecessary and should be prohibited.

10. Resolved, That compound jellies, jams and preserves containing glucose, cane sugar and fruit, may be sold if labeled:

First, net weight or measure.

Second, brand or trade-mark (optional).

Third, the word "compound," followed by the names and percentages of the ingredients and then with the word "jelly," "jam," or "preserve" as the case may be, thus:

COMPOUND.

30 per cent. Glucose.
20 per cent. Cane syrup.
30 per cent. Currants.
20 per cent. Apple.

JELLY.

Fourth, the true name and business address of the manufacturer.

11. Resolved, That in compound jellies, jams and preserves, before mentioned, no starch, gelatin, gum, added acid, artificial coloring matter, artificial sweetener, or preservative will be permitted.

12. Resolved, That catsups, conforming to the standards laid down in U. S. Circular No. 19, including freedom from artificial coloring matter and fillers, may be lawfully sold. After December 1, 1908, the sale of catsup containing preservatives except those mentioned in the standards will be contested.

13. Resolved, That edible oils and fats, complying with U. S. Circular 19. may be sold under the names there given. The name "salad oil" is not recognized as a descriptive or distinctive name for a simple oil and its use as such is not approved. Mixtures of edible oils intended for salad purposes may be sold as "salad oil" (a compound), provided the names and proportionate amounts of the ingredients are plainly stated on the main label in the order of their predominance. Example:

First, net weight or measure.

Second, brand or trade-mark (optional).

Third, name, e. g.—Salad Oil (a compound),

Composed of 60 per cent. Cottonseed Oil.

20 per cent. Peanut Oil.
20 per cent. Sesame Oil.

Fourth, the true name and business address of the manufacturer.

14. Resolved, That the sale of soda fountain syrups and crushed fruits, containing any preservative other than sugar will be contested after December 1, 1908.

15. Resolved, That the addition of color to any vinegar constitutes an adulteration whether declared on the label or not.

16. Resolved, That such terms as "Extra Quality," "First Quality," etc., as applied to food products, be deemed a misbranding unless the quality of the goods corresponds to the terms used.

17. Resolved, That the Commissioners of the different states notify all who may inquire, as to the resolutions here made, that the sale of products of any manufacturer complying with these rulings, will not be contested in the states represented.

Every Family Can Grow Tea on Its Own Premises

United States Department of Agriculture Says So and Supplies Minute Directions By Which Any One Can Plant and Cure Both Black and Green Tea. Says Much Imported Tea Is Adulterated.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

Washington, D. C.,
Nov. 21, 1907.

The United States Department of Agriculture has gone into a matter now which will strike many as highly chimerical. It has issued a bulletin on "Home-Grown Tea" which is intended to persuade consumers to start little tea gardens on their own premises, both for their own consumption and to put on the market if there is any surplus.

The bulletin referred to describes at length the success of the tea plantation in Summerville, S. C., managed by Dr. Charles U. Shepard, and deduces from it the conclusion that tea will grow anywhere in America where the climate permits. The climate necessary for the purpose is thus described:—

> The climate of the Southern and Gulf States is in general admirably adapted to the cultivation of the tea plant. Although the rainfall is much less than in a great many tea-producing countries, the average annual temperature is lower, causing less evaporation and consequently requiring less rainfall. The cultivation of the tea plant can safely be risked where the temperature seldom falls below 24 degrees Fahrenheit, and never goes below zero, and where the annual rainfall exceeds 50 inches, 30 inches or more of this precipitation occurring during the cropping season.

The Government states that clay loam or sandy loam is the best soil, and explains that the seed should be planted in autumn and winter just before a rain. Minute details are given as to how to plant and how to care for the growing plants. Plucking begins about the first of May and continues until about the middle of October.

According to the bulletin under discussion, any family can cure tea in its own kitchen:—

> All that is necessary is a four-quart double boiler (a saucepan with a hot-water jacket), a large pan, preferably agate-lined, a large wooden spoon or paddle, and a kneading board where the use of a clean kitchen table cannot be had.

In the case of black tea the leaves are brought in the day before they are to be made into tea and are spread very thinly and evenly on a clean table or floor, where they are allowed to remain from twelve to twenty-four hours, when they will lose about one-half their weight by the evaporation of moisture, become very soft and flaccid, and feel like an old kid glove. In this condition they are ready for rolling. When withering is near completion the leaves should be watched very carefully, because if allowed to go on too far they become parched and unfit for rolling.

About half a pound of the withered leaf is rolled or kneaded from twenty-five or thirty minutes on a clean table or kneading board. The operation is similar to the kneading of dough. The rolling should be very light for the first ten minutes so as to allow the eaves to begin to twist or take on ıe "roll"; then the pressure should e gradually increased until all that an be exerted is applied, so as to xpress the juice (which should be pped up with the leaves) and give ıe leaves a tight twist. This tight olling not only makes a strong tea, ut helps to preserve the flavor. ery often the leaves will be a ttle overwithered and rather brit- e, in which case water should be prinkled on the withered leaves ntil they are rendered soft enough o roll.

After rolling, the leaves are ormed into a "ball" and allowed to emain in a cool and preferably amp place from three to six hours o ferment. The end of this stage ı the process is indicated by the all turning a yellowish copper col- r, which can be seen when the all is broken open. The raw, erby scent has also changed to an greeable fruity one. This stage ıust be watched carefully, because allowed to go too far the leaves ecome sour and unfit for tea.

After fermenting, the ball is roken up and spread about half n inch thick in a large clean pan preferably of agate ware) and laced in the stove oven to dry. he pan should be removed at inter- als and the tea turned. This hould continue until the tea is ery brittle to the touch and a very light odor of tea is given off. The ven should not be too hot during his operation, as too much heat revents uniform drying. The tea s now ready for use and should e placed in air-tight tin boxes or ans.

Sun-cured black tea is the same s the ordinary black tea except ıat the withering is done in the sun ı a much shorter time and pro- uces a tea more acceptable to the verage taste.

The freshly picked leaves should e spread very thinly and evenly n trays made by tacking cloth on ooden frames of any convenient ize, or they may simply be spread n cloths, which in either case hould be placed in the sun until he leaves become very flaccid. his will require from one and ne-half to three hours, or more, epending on the intensity of the un's heat and the humidity of the tmosphere. During this operation ıe leaves should be turned at in- ervals, so as to induce uniform ithering. The further procedure s identical with that already described for the black tea from the point of withering.

This tea is generally made during the months of July and August, when the heat of the sun is very intense.

The green tea is made from the same leaves as the black, although some varieties are best adapted to make each of these respective kinds. The green-tea process is the same as that for making black tea, except that instead of withering from twelve to twenty-four hours, and fermenting from three to six hours (when oxidation takes place, which renders it black) the green leaves are quickly brought in and placed in a covered double boiler —that is, a saucepan with a hot-water jacket (one pound of leaf to a four-quart boiler)—and allowed to remain surrounded by boiling water from seven to nine minutes; the cover should be removed and the leaves stirred at intervals. This will render the leaves very soft and flaccid, ready for rolling. During this rapid process the oxidizing agencies of the leaf are sterilized by the boiling water and steam in the hot-water jacket surrounding the leaves, and the production of a green tea is rendered possible. These flaccid leaves are rolled in like manner to the black tea for about ten minutes, being stirred at intervals until they lose some of their moisture and become sticky; then they are again rolled from fifteen to twenty minutes under all the pressure than can be applied. After rolling they are immediately placed in the oven in a pan and turned at intervals (similar to the black tea) until they are dry and brittle to the touch and a slight scent of tea is given off.

From all of its experiments with tea grown in people's own gardens, the Department of Agriculture draws the following conclusions:—

> The cultivation of the tea plant in home gardens is not only profitable, but a great deal of pleasure can be derived from it at the same time that the use of the much adulterated foreign article is avoided. This is often found to contain Prussian blue, indigo, turmeric, soapstone, and leaves of other plants than tea, some of which are injurious to health.

The Hotel Patrons' Demand

A coffee that satisfies on a hotel table is a good coffee and will stand up under any test you can give it.

That's because hotel patrons are supercritical. They expect more than they get at home; in fact they expect perfection.

Hotel Astor Coffee is the year-in-and-year-out brand of some of the most exclusive hotels in New York City. They never think of buying anything else — they wouldn't dream of it.

The success of this coffee under this exacting test is really the reason that led us to push it through the grocery trade. We have a plan to increase your high-grade coffee trade. May we tell you about it? A postal request is enough.

The Failure of Good Schemes.

Why must good schemes fail? Take the fate of the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Co., which is about to pass into a receiver's hands.

To him who viewed the prospects of the Mergenthaler-Horton Basket Co. when it first launched its campaign six or seven years ago, failure seemed impossible. The company owned patented machines which completely revolutionized the making of small baskets. Before that baskets had been made slowly, clumsily and expensively by hand. The Mergenthaler machines turned them out by the hundred, perfectly made and much more cheaply than by human hands. As we say, the plan seemed sure of success, because it did a necessary thing more rapidly, more perfectly and more cheaply than it had been possible to do it before.

Yet the company's career has been a failure from the very beginning. It has never paid a dividend, its baskets have never even begun to supplant the old-fashioned hand-made baskets; in short, it has never gotten anywhere and now a receiver begins the writing of probably the last chapter.

Why is it? What can explain the fact that prospects which seem to contain not a single chance of failure so often prove to have contained no chance of success? Bad management can explain many disasters, but it is inconceivable that ordinary bad management could throttle such an opportunity as the Mergenthaler Company's.

Gimbel Bros.' New Laid Eggs.

All last week Gimbel Bros., the perfect Philadelphia grocers, sold eggs at 28 cents per dozen. The eggs were displayed in large bowls on the counters and over them appeared the sign "New-laid Eggs, 28 cents."

During the whole of last week new-laid eggs, which mean but one thing, i. e., fresh eggs, sold at wholesale at 32 cents, uncandled. Candled as they would have to be sold, the wholesale price was 34 cents. The average retail price for honestly fresh eggs last week was 40 cents, and even at that the supply was extremely light.

The price of storage eggs last week was 19 cents uncandled, and 21 cents candled. If Gimbel Bros.' "new-laid" eggs were what they were represented to be the concern lost 4 cents per dozen on them. If the so-called "new-laid" eggs were really storage eggs they netted a profit of probably 7 cents a dozen.

Now, it would naturally not be impossible for Gimbel Bros. to buy fresh eggs at 32 or 34 cents and sell them at 28 cents, but the "Grocery World" would dearly love to make a modest wager that they didn't do it.

Dr. Wiley, Autocrat.

The Corn Products Co., who control the manufacture of glucose in this country, and Dr. H. W. Wiley, Chairman of the Federal Food Board, are in a lively squabble over what the Corn Products Co. are to call their product. The company wishes to call it corn syrup, while Dr. Wiley insists that it be called glucose.

This is a question of fact, not at all of opinion. Almost exclusively, heretofore, the product has been called glucose. But unquestionably it is a syrup and unquestionably it is derived from corn, hence what can it be but corn syrup? Where an article can be correctly described by either of two names, Dr. Wiley is wholly without power to say arbitrarily which one shall be used.

Free to "Grocery World" Readers

The "Grocery World" has on hand about five hundred copies o a book on window dressing, originally published by Sprague, Warne & Co., of Chicago, Ill. It was originally intended to use the book as a premium, but after inspection it was considered scarcely good enough, and since that the copies have lain on our shelves because o uncertainty as to what use to make of them. It must not be assumed that the book is worthless—it has a number of good things in it, but is scarcely up to what the "Grocery World" thinks such a book should be.

Now we propose to give a copy to any subscriber who may want it, free of all cost save the postage of seven cents.

Send seven cents and the book is yours.

"Extra Quality."

Truly, we seem to be approaching something like the millenium. Some of us who have grown pessimistic have troubled ourselves over the fact that unscrupulous eagerness to sell goods has squeezed the meaning from some of the most pregnant words in the English language. Almost all the words indicative of quality, for instance—for years they have been heedlessly and indiscriminatingly used without the slightest regard to whether truthfully applicable or not.

But in the West a new era dawns. The Food Commissioners of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin have adopted a common attitude toward certain food practices, and one phase of that attitude is expressed through the following resolution:—

> Resolved, That such terms as "extra quality," "first quality," etc., as applied to food products, be deemed a misbranding unless the quality of the goods corresponds to the terms used.

This blows sweet with the clean freshness of literal honesty; a quality which some have supposed to be extinct, but which seems to still present a spark of life. Extravagance in the use of quality terms is usually innocent, and most offenders would be severely shocked to know that they were obtaining money under false pretences.

Some Stinging Blows for Wiley.

Hugh Gordon Miller, Esq., counsel for the National Association of Extract Manufacturers, paid his respects to Dr. H.W. Wiley before his association last week, in an address which probably expressed the most scathing arraignment of Dr. Wiley ever uttered.

Here is just one choice little extract:—

> I believe that (barring some who are known to be in official favor) the food purveyors, extract manufacturers and druggists of the country will bear me out in the assertion that Dr. Wiley, starting out perhaps (and we give him the benefit of every good intention) with the best of motives, and at first apparently in an effort to do what was highly commendable, what all good citizens applauded, and what Congress endeavored to aid by legislation, has, in fact, in his great zeal for high and exalted place in the present reform band wagon, by attacking promiscuously by widespread newspaper interviews and sensational speeches while campaigning for glory and applause throughout the country, demoralized and destroyed necessary confidence in, and as a result destroyed much of the legitimate invested property in perfectly good foods and extracts, to the extent of hundreds of millions of dollars.

There is not the least doubt about this. Dr. Wiley is a fanatical theorist, caring nothing for the practical results if his theories prevail. Furthermore, he has an extreme case of swelled head, and naturally this has made him worse.

But it is extremely doubtful if castigations like the above really make any impression upon the subject. In fact, he was quoted recently in the statement that he regarded every attack of the food manufacturing and distributing interests as a tribute to his work.

How Could It Work?

A Canadian grocer has written the "Canadian Grocer" describing a method he has used, he says, with great success, of changing his business from a credit to a cash basis. The main points he recites are as follows in a circular letter to his customers:—

> I have marked all my goods as low as they possibly can be sold for spot cash, and the customers who will not pay at the time of purchase will be charged ten per cent. extra.

If the amount is paid within thirty days the discount will be deducted.

If paid within sixty days five per cent. will be deducted.

After sixty days the ten per cent. will remain charged.

It will be the same as if I was lending you money to buy goods with and charging ten per cent. on the amount loaned. By this plan you will be able to buy goods cheaper—it will enable us to have one price only—(we will not deviate from this rule) and everyone will be on the same footing.

Now, if you will give this matter a few minutes of good sound reflection you will admit that I have found the way to deal fairly with everyone.

Give me a trial. Come and get my prices and I am sure you will appreciate my efforts in giving the public in general fair and honorable dealing. I will take this opportunity to thank everyone for the generous support given to me in the past and by fair dealing with all I hope to have a continuance of the same in the future.

Now, there isn't a flaw in the ogic of this proposition. Unquestionably the consumer who pays cash for his goods should have them cheaper than he who takes thirty or sixty days; conversely, he who takes time should pay for the use of his seller's money. So that when this Canadian grocer has moulded his regulations to conform with these common sense principles, he has done something which is justified from every standpoint.

And yet it seems incredible that the plan should have succeeded. Certainly in the United States it would have precipitated any grocer who tried it into a maelstrom of protests, and with scarcely a doubt would have lost him nearly if not all the credit customers whom he attempted to charge the 10 per cent. advance. Human nature may be different in Canada, however.

Useful Facts About Groceries

The department which will henceforth be conducted under the above head is best explained by the letter which appears below, and which was recently sent to the Grocery World." In the hope that a little such matter may be of interest and value "Grocery World" readers, a short educational article along the lines indicated will appear under this head from time to time.

Vermontville, N. Y.

Editor "Grocery World."

Dear Sir:—I have long wanted a book which would be a sort of encyclopædia, one that would take a certain article, describe it, tell where it grew, how it was prepared for market, what season of the year it was marketed, how it should be stored, whether in a cold or warm place.

Such a book was published once, but as near as I can find out it is out of print now.

I was thinking if the "Grocery World" could devote, say, half a column a week to a work of this kind we would have, in a little while, the long looked-for work.

But I won't ask for too much, for we are getting good things all the time.

Very truly yours, N. H. BRECKENRIDGE.

Lucca Oil.

Lucca is the name of a large town bout fourteen miles from Pisa, nd has a considerable trade in the xcellent oil produced in the magificent olive groves of the neighorhood. The oil is mostly shipped t Leghorn, and is exported in casks nd in 40-gallon jars, the latter eing thought preferable to wood or choice qualities.

Lucca is the chief centre of the rovince.

Macaroni.

A species of dried wheaten paste, ormed into straight or twisted hollow tubes or pipes, varying in diamter from that of a long tobacco ipe to a full inch.

It is usually made from the best wheaten flour and with a little water worked into a thick paste, then put nto a strong cylindrical tube which has small crescent-shaped holes at he bottom. By means of a piece of wood or metal plate made exactly to fit the inside of the tube and a screw press, the paste is gradually and slowly forced through the holes in long stringy ropes, while a heated stove quickly dries or partly bakes them as they descend, causing them to shrink, and their crescent-shaped edges to unite and assume pipe form.

At the proper instant the pipes are detached, twisted and hung over rods placed about the room or in the open air to dry more perfectly—first at a temperature of 65 degrees, then 70 degrees, and finally 75 degrees, and in a few days the macaroni is ready for use. This drying is the most difficult and delicate part of the process.

The best macaroni comes from Genoa, usually in large cases containing 144 small wood boxes, each holding about 4 pounds net. "Naples" is mostly in long straight pipes, packed in 28-pound boxes.

The Tender Kernels of Fancy Corn

THE CORN WITHOUT HULLS

The Pressing & Orr Company
Norwalk, O.

This introduces to you our WINORR Brand of Canned Corn. In one vital respect it is wholly different from every other brand on the market.

The difference is in the fact that WINORR Corn has no hulls. We use in our canning a device that extracts the meat of the corn, and throws out the tough hulls. Result—a dream of tender corn kernels that your customers will go wild over.

A novelty like this gives a lot of help in selling a new thing.

We also pack canned Sauer Kraut, dry Mince Meat in cartons, and a Salad Dressing which is quite the fanciest thing on the market.

We've Made "EXTON" Oyster Crackers for 60 Years

In itself, and by itself, that fact is significant.

Nothing but a superior article could last so long, and none but a very superior cracker could retain its leadership as the "EXTON" Oyster Cracker has done.

It MADE the standard of quality by which all other oyster crackers can safely be judged, and by which they HAVE been judged.

It's the Cracker King now as it has always been, and makes its sixty-first annual bow to the trade with a vigor that's growing steadily.

It's ready for the fall business whenever you are, and guarantees the same ideal quality which has made the name "EXTON" famous wherever oysters are known.

Outlook for Thanksgiving Trade. Advance Sales Satisfactory. Financial Situation in the Trade. Great Depression in Storage Eggs. Anti-Wiley Combination. Campaign Against Two-faced Jobbers.

Special correspondence of "Grocery World."

New York, Nov. 22, 1907.

Thanksgiving trade is expected to be in about the usual volume, in the retail stores, and the jobbers say that the advance sales have been quite satisfactory. The trouble with checks has been increasing, for in the last week or so the number of large employers of labor who pay off with checks has been augmented. Naturally many of the employes hasten to the grocer and present the checks in payment for purchases, expecting to receive the balance in cash. The grocer who is not ready with the money to cash the checks that are presented is likely to send trade elsewhere.

Sometimes it answers for the grocer to confess that he has not the change to spare and to say that he will send the paper through his bank or turn it over to his jobber and let the customer have the balance due him a day or two later. In other words the grocer takes the check for collection. If too many requests come in on him in one day, he is quite likely to resort to this in preference to refusing altogether.

The extension in the use of checks in paying labor is the result of action taken by some of the largest banks which are desirious of saving the premium that they are obliged to pay on currency. The checks are commonly marked as payable only through the clearing house.

The substitution of checks for money to so large an extent has, of course, been affecting many inds of business unfavorably, since even the humble employe, having more or less trouble in getting his check cashed, has impressed upon his mind the fact that there is a financial stringency, and he has a tendency to hoard his little and to make it go as far as possible instead of spending it promptly to meet his requirements in the usual fashion. But it seems agreed that the grocery trade has suffered the minimum loss, for people must buy food, although they may not buy new clothes for a time.

That there has been some contraction, even in the retail grocery business, is made evident however by the fact that for the first time in years there is a surplus of clerks instead of a scarcity, and grocers have but to apply to the headquarters of the associations to get all the assistance of this kind that they require. Even a few weeks ago grocers were complaining that it was almost impossible to find experienced clerks of the right sort to fill vacancies.

Retailers are noting that with the markets somewhat unsettled the daily papers, or some of them, publish more than the usual amount of misinformation about food subjects. Sometimes there is a motive on the part of speculative holders of food in giving out reports but pure careless regard for facts is probably the more common reason. One day this week several of the papers had articles saying that strictly fresh eggs were bringing 75 cents a dozen and were hard to get at that figure. In the same papers a large chain grocery store was offering 13 eggs, guaranteed to be extra strictly fresh for 25 cents and grocers are generally selling from 8 to 12 fresh eggs for 25 cents, the average retailer here selling this way instead of by the dozen.

With the American Extract Manufacturers' Association as a nucleus, a combination is being formed it is currently reported, to oppose in some matters the position of Dr. Wiley and to contest some of the rulings of the Department of Agriculture. The Food Manufacturers' Association may act with the extract manufacturers. The expectation is that the associated interests will endeavor to accomplish something at the approaching session of Congress.

A meeting of the extract manufacturers was held last Saturday in the rooms of the Bottlers' Protective Association in East Thirty-seventh street. In the chair was A. J. Bastine, of Bastine & Co., who delivered an address on the benefit to the Government of the taxes paid by the manufacturers.

The feeling of the members toward Dr. Wiley was disclosed in an address delivered by Hugh Gordon Miller, an attorney, who argued that the chemist of the Department of Agriculture had talked too much, and as a result false ideas have been disseminated and have injured the business of many of those engaged in manufacturing food products. He particularly argued that Dr. Wiley and his associates have no legal authority for going outside the letter of the food law and attempting to fix food standards. The applause showed that Mr. Miller voiced the sentiments of the members.

A. E. Claus spoke on the lack of uniformity in State food laws, H. D. Mann, of H. D. Mann & Co., on labels; C. Van Skiver, on "Artificial vs. Imitation."

There were present twenty-five men representing nearly 200 concerns, it is said. The association is to meet here again December 2d.

Over at the New York Mercantile Exchange the reports indicate that strictly fancy fresh eggs of the kind that have never been inside a warehouse and have been laid inside of two or three weeks, are worth 33 or 34 cents a dozen, but that the best of the warehouse eggs cannot be sold for more than 18 or 19 cents a dozen. The extreme difference is explained by the claim that there is now in the warehouses of the country a half a million cases more of eggs that there were a year ago, and the holders are finding it expedient to unload to a considerable extent, as the banks are not liberal in continuing loans on the warehouse stock.

A mistrial resulted this week after the case of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Co. against the American Sugar Refining Co. was called in the United States Circuit Court. This is the action in which the plaintiff demands damages to the amount of $30,000,000, claiming that the trust illegally obtained control of the business and shut down its plant. After the trial began the plaintiff tried to show that it had been in the business of manufacturing sugar from 1883 to 1896, when the new plant was built and transfered to the Trust. As this allegation was not in the complaint, the judge held that it could not be made an issue in the present trial, and the jury was dismissed. An effort will now be made to have the complaint amended so as to include the additional allegation.

The Executive Committee of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association is to meet in the first week of December, either in Atlantic City or in Chicago, to consider the old question of the subsidizing of salesmen and of manufacturers selling directly to retailers. The United Retail Grocers' Association of Brooklyn, at its meening last week, discussed the subject of jobbers selling directly to consumers and said that certain firms are boldly bidding for the trade of both retailers and consumers, and are giving the latter the benefit of prices close to the wholesale quotations.

A number of those present at the Brooklyn meeting expressed the determination not to buy from jobbers who sell both ways, and are in fact both wholesalers and retailers. The association took no action as a body, however, and the matter is to be brought up for further consideration at an early meeting.

While the Brooklyn association has not yet put into operation the plan long agitated of having a central buying exchange and a warehouse, yet it is now to make a start in a small way toward a more practical co-operation among members. At each meeting there is to be an intermission, during which the members may buy and sell from one another anything that may be put up, from a surplus supply of one or another kind of canned food to a delivery horse. A blackboard is to be used on which those who wish to offer anything for sale may post their announcements and those who wish to buy something may do the same.

President E. T. Bedford, of the Corn Products Refining Co., has given out a statement as to the differences of the company with Dr. Wiley. He says in substance that the only difference, as he understands the matter, is as to the proper name to be used—corn syrup or glucose. Dr. Wiley prefers glucose, but Mr. Bedford argues that corn syrup is a more definite and more descriptive term, and has been used so long that people know what it s and they would not understand what glucose means. Moreover, he said that while glucose is a healthful product, it has been so greatly misrepresented that the word now gives an unfavorable impression.

FRED. A. MCGILL.

Dr. Wiley Learns the Molasses Situation.

Dr. H. W. Wiley, of the Bureau of Chemistry, has concluded his investigations which have been in progress in Louisiana with reference to the manufacture of molasses. It is reported the experiments have been entirely successful in turning out a good grade of molasses without the use of any sulphur whatever. Dr. Wiley found, however, that the molasses thus manufactured was much darker than that made with the use of sulphur, and that the darker product would bring some 8 cents a gallon less than the sulphured goods. About twenty-five or thirty firms are now making molasses without sulphur, and the others are all employing it to a greater or less extent because of what they consider the exigencies of commercial demands. Probably 80 per cent. of the firms engaged in the manufacture are using more than the amount permitted in decision 76, while the other twenty are within the requirements of the rules. It is not the intention to begin any molasses prosecutions in the near future, so far as can be learned, notwithstanding the extent to which the regulations are being disregarded. This is considered to be almost a necessary consequence of the attitude which has been adopted with reference to the use of sulphur in general, pending the consummation of the experiments with that article. It will be endeavored to get the producers to reduce their use of sulphur with a view to its ultimate abandonment. The rigid enforcement of the rules in this respect will probably be postponed, therefore, for some time to come.

THE GROCERY MARKETS

Tea.

The tea market has shown somewhat better demand during the past week, but the situation is still dull and the movement sluggish. Buyers are taking only what they have to take, and it is astonishing how little stock they can get along with under pressure. There has been no change in price, and in all probability there will be none in low grades, which are scarce and strongly held. As to the higher grades, there may be a recession in price if the present financial stringency continues.

Coffee.

The market for Brazil coffee has ruled steady during the past week without change. There is a disposition among the trade to feel that the effort to hold the market for Rio and Santos steady under the present financial conditions indicates an advance as soon as conditions resume the normal. The present receipts of Brazil coffee would indicate a crop of a little over 10,000,000 bags, which was about the 1905-1906 crop. This is a decline of nearly 9,000,000 bags from the last crop, and much comment is being made in coffee circles on this decrease, which no conditions of weather could reasonably account for. The only year on record when a heavy crop was followed by one half the size was in 1886-87, when the cause was a heavy frost in the growing districts. The query is abroad whether the Brazilian Government is using its power as a railroad owner and holder of enormous stocks to hold back the receipts at primal points in order to create the impression that the crop will be much smaller than it actually promises to be. Mild coffees are steady with little movement; same can be said of Java and Mocha.

Sugar.

The sugar market is unchanged for the week. Raw sugar is about steady, except in Cuba, where it is still weak and low. Refined sugar shows no change and is in moderate demand only.

Syrup and Molasses.

Glucose shows no change for the week. Compound syrup is in moderate demand only, needing cold, brisk weather to increase the sales. Sugar syrup is fairly active at unchanged prices. Molasses is dull. New molasses is coming forward, but is not wanted very keenly as yet. Prices are about unchanged.

Fish.

The fish market is dull. Mackerel shows no recession in price, not as to Norways or Irish or shore fish, but the demand is very light. It usually is so around the end of the year, and this condition is intensified this year by money conditions. Cod, hake and haddock are slow and unchanged in price. Salmon is quiet at ruling prices. Domestic sardines are a trifle firmer on reports of the close of the packing season after a short pack. The demand, however, is light. Imported sardines grow scarcer and firmer all the time.

Canned Goods.

The tomato market is unchanged and unimproved. Sales are still being made at 80 cents county, but the demand is small. The trade now offers 80 cents delivered, which means about 2½ cents off. For this there are no takers as yet. There is no general pressure to sell, but so long as money remains tight the market will show no strength. Some few little lots of corn are selling at ruling prices. The general market is dull. Peas are quiet and unchanged. Stocks are very low Peaches are extremely scarce. The market is still firm, high and dull. Apples are unchanged at $3.25 for New York State gallons in a large way. The demand is extremely light. The Baltimore line is unchanged, except as to oysters, which are lower. The opening prices were too high. There is very little business doing. California canned goods are very slow, prices being unchanged, and no business doing from first hands at all.

Dried Fruits.

Prunes are very slow, and prices are unchanged. The market on spot is being weakened, however, by the fact that holders who need money are letting lots go at most any price. The coast is fairly steady. Peaches are slow and very hard to move. Prices are unchanged. Apricots are slow and unchanged. Currants are in very active demand, mostly on contracts. Prices are unchanged. Raisins, meaning seeded, are in somewhat better supply, as receipts of new have increased. Prices are still well held on a fairly high basis. The demand is good. Loose raisins are very dull and weak. The latest importations of Valencias are selling in a large way at 6¾ cents, a large fraction below California fruit of the same grade. Foreign raisins haven't had such an innings in years as they are having now. Apples are somewhat weaker and dull.

Beans and Peas.

Pea beans are unchanged at $2.25 to $2.30 in a large way. The demand is fair. Marrows are also unchanged at about $2.25, and the demand is fair. California limas are somewhat weaker on spot and now rule below the coast parity. This is mostly for early shipments, which were bought below the present market. Split yellow peas are selling to some extent at $7 per barrel in a large way, which is a decline of 50 cents from the highest point. Whole dried peas of both grades are in good demand at unchanged prices.

Butter.

The butter market is firm and unchanged. The receipts of fresh butter are about normal and the quality continues good. There is very little movement in refrigerator butter. The outlook is for a shorter supply of fresh butter, though perhaps no radical change in prices. This applies both to nearby and Western butter.

Eggs.

Fresh eggs are still in very small supply at 1 cent advance over a week ago. The receipts continue very light, with not enough eggs coming forward to supply the demand. Refrigerator eggs are in ample supply and stocks are larger than a year ago. Prices have declined 1 cent per dozen during the week. There is likely to be a continued shortage in fresh eggs for two or three weeks, by which time an increase in production usually occurs. In case we get into a heavy cold spell, however, the supply may remain light for an indefinite time.

Provisions.

The market for smoked meats is very dull at a general decline of ¼ cent. The price to-day is a little above normal for the season. Pure and compound lard are unchanged and about steady. There has been a very good demand in both lines. No change is looked for for a few days. Barrel pork, canned meats and dried beef are all dull and unchanged.

Cheese.

The cheese market is steady. The market for fancy September cheese is very dull and about 1 cent per pound lower. October cheese is Poultry.

Up to the present writing very few turkeys have arrived in market. From all over the country come reports of small stock. The outlook seems to be for higher prices for Thanksgiving trade. The market is now almost bare, with prices 22 to 24 cents, according to quality. Owing to the scarcity of turkeys, chickens and fowls have advanced 1 cent per pound during the week, and from present conditions there may be a shortage of everything in the poultry line, accompanied by firmer prices. Ducks are short, and meet a ready sale at 1 cent over a week ago.

INDIVIDUAL MARKET REPORTS.

Coffee.

In times such as we are now passing through, when financial disturbances are so serious as to create general distrust, when actual cash money is at a considerable premium, due to the hoarding of many millions of dollars, commercial transactions based on credit naturally suffer a curtailment. It is, therefore, not surprising to notice for the time being a virtual absence of important buying orders; nor is it surprising to witness the liquidation of speculative holdings. It seems as if everybody has but one end in view—i. e., to get his house in order.

The recent decline in the price of coffee may well be regarded as only a moderate one under the circumstances, and may be construed as a sign that the position of the article is sound. One of the strong points is the continued and steadily growing increase in the consumption, evidenced by the following table of deliveries from port stocks in Europe and the United States during the four months, July to October, inclusive: 1907, 6,228,000; 1906, 5,740,000; 1905, 5,341,000.

The consumption of Brazils for the same four months in these respective years amounted to: 4,780,000, 4,330,000, 3,764,000.

This is a record breaking consumption of Brazils, and if the withdrawals from port stocks show a like proportionate increase for the remaining eight months, the total for the crop year will reach the enormous figure of 14,000,000 bags Brazil coffee. The general position of the article will thereby be improved materially and particularly that of Brazils.

It is reported that the Government holdings are financed till December, 1908; it is furthermore reported that the Government administration has committed itself not to make any sales below the fixed parity.

The Government holdings consist principally of fine selections Santos.

The cessation of Government purchases at a time when the new crop movement was near at hand was severely felt. Santos as well as Rio coffee then reached the lowest milreis price witnessed in twenty-five years.

The trade all over the world, which had by that time reduced its stocks to a minimum, then entered the market with renewed confidence; firstly, because it dawned upon the trade that the Government was in the position to take care of the coffee purchased, for some time to come; secondly, because the necessity of replenishing stocks became quite pressing; and thirdly, due to the conviction that the current crop had been very much over-estimated.

This caused an advance in the milreis price of Santos 7's from 2.550 to 3.700, and of Rio's 7's from 3.225 to 3.750. (The Rio price includes the export tax; the Santos price does not.)

The advance in the price of Rios was very moderate as compared to that of Santos.

European buyers recognized for some time past the relative cheapness of the former and availed themselves of the opportunity offered by making liberal purchases. This is verified by the shipments from Rio to Europe, which were from July 1st to October 31st—1,136,000 bags, against 424,000 bags same period last year, and 493,000 bags two years ago.

The usual annual European purchases of Rios were about 1,000,000 bags in recent years, but, as Europe continues buying on a liberal scale, it looks as if about 2,000,000 bags will go hence during the current fiscal year, which would leave comparatively little for the United States. The shipments of Rios to the United States during the past four months compare with previous years as follows: 1907, 594,000; 1906, 701,000; 1905, 756,000; 1904, 912,000; 1903, 1,019,000.

It is apparent that a shortage in the supplies of this growth will be felt in this country later on, especially for such grades as are generally used, bringing same nearer to a parity with Santos than now exists.

Mild coffees, in which there was a very active trade going on, relapsed into extreme dullness when the financial skies darkened; a few small consignments of washed Central Americans were offered at a reduction of ½ cent per pound from prices eagerly paid a few days before, but found no buyers. Stocks in Europe and the United States are very small, the visible supply of milds is only 1,260,000 bags, as compared with 1,763,000 last year and 2,060,000 bags two years ago. Fresh supplies of any extent are not likely to reach consuming markets before the end of next month, and by that time confidence ought to be fully restored.

Sugar.

The market is quiet. One sale has been reported.

In so far as regards the raw sugar situation at New York there is no real market. The refiners own all the raws, have about enough to last until the new crops come in, and don't want to buy more. If a little extra should be needed Louisiana sugars can be bought up or foreign beets imported. Quotations are nominal. New York is eighteen points under the European market and seventeen points higher than the New Orleans market. We have all sorts of prices in raws, also a rather varied scale in refined. The sugar business at this season of the year is always dull; to-day, because of the financial stress through which we are passing business is especially dull. The Louisiana planters are getting prices much lower than they expected for their crop They can't distribute their stocks as in other years, when grocers, dealers and refiners have been buyers. The only buyers taking hold now are the refiners. The great quantity of the new Louisiana sugars coming in is enough in itself to depress New Orleans raw quotations, and in addition, this season there is the limiting of the demand.

The one bright feature of the week has been the advances in the European markets. They probably think we will need a lot of their stock and they are marking up values. One of our refiners did buy a couple of thousand tons a week or so ago. It is not likely we will need more. The higher prices in Europe have not had the slightest effect here. Any estimates that may be put forward as to a loss in the European crop, or a reduced Cuba crop, won't help us to get higher prices; they may enable us to start off the new Cuba season at a higher quotation than we otherwise would, but when the Cuba, Porto Rico and other sugars get to arriving here in full volume, our market will go off, will get down to about 3.38 cents as it does almost every year, and when the European beets now being reaped get coming in a little faster the European markets will go off, just the same as our market declines under similar circumstances. Some one must do the carrying and it is not done for nothing. We have only a month and a half more of this sugar season, new crop Cubas are already being offered, our refiners will hardly lay in big stocks at the start of this crop as they did at the commencement of the last, there won't be any buying of refined except in such quantities as are needed to supply consumption, no stocking up by the grocers, and the season will soon come to a close. Refined values have been reduced, that makes buying safer, and prices are guaranteed against declines up to day of arrival, thus minimizing risks.

Refined Sugar.—The price decline has brought in some business from buyers who had held orders awaiting the expected change. The American Sugar Refining Co., Howell and Arbuckle now quote f. o. b. net basis 4.70 cents, the Federal, 4.65 cents, less 1 per cent. cash; respective refiners guaranteeing their own, and B. H. Howell, Son & Co. also the American Sugar Refining Co's prices on day of arrival. The Federal admit a delay of about ten days in filling their orders, with other refiners shipping promptly.

Beet Sugar.—We quote to-day strictly standard beet granulated, f. o. b., at 4.50 cents, less 1 per cent. cash, applying to Buffalo, Pittsand other points west thereof.

Baltimore Canned Goods.

No. 1.

The unfavorable monetary conditions prevailing throughout the country have had less effect upon the prices of canned goods than on any other lines of merchandise, or commodities in general, which is evidenced by a comparison of the market prices to-day with the quotations on the same articles on, say, September 1st, when the prices of the leading staples were at the top figures of the season. Those "prophets of evil" who so unhesitatingly predicted in the highways and byways that the market for tomatoes, for instance, would break wide-open are now busy trying to explain why that article has not declined more than 8 or 10 per cent. and are hard put to tell why corn, peas, sweet potatoes and beans of all kinds, not to mention any articles in the line of fruits, have substantially held their own throughout the trying times of the past six or eight weeks. The canned goods market is not going to the demnition bow-wows, at least not this season. There has been a reasonable set-back in the prices of some few, but not of all the articles in the list, which was overdue anyway, after such a long spell of advancing quotations for nearly every article in the list since last spring, without a single reaction at any time. Much larger declines in values have occurred with less cause many a time within easy recollection. There are ready buyers of tomatoes looking for bargains, and the sales during this week encouraged the holders of them. Corn is dull because the small stocks left in the hands of the canners do not bother them to carry, while the buyers seem to think they are entitled to some concession in price in exchange for the ready cash these days. Apples are easier and show a decline in the last two weeks. There are no other changes worth noting, however, either in fruits or vegetables. The cove oyster packing season is on, but the output, so far, is smaller than was anticipated.

No. 2.

The market has been rather dull this week, though we believe there has been some improvement in buying as compared with last week. There is enough inquiry for tomatoes to justify the belief that as soon as the conditions in the money market become more settled there will be a decided improvement in the demand for tomatoes. The market certainly has some very encouraging features. In spite of the heavy packing, stocks held by packers in this section are, we believe, comparatively light. Many packers are sold out. Stocks in Baltimore are unusually well cleaned up. Some shrewd buyers are beginning to show a disposition to take advantage of the present "slump" to buy goods at 5 to 7½ cents per dozen less than was possible a month ago.

Spices.

The market has been fairly active. Buying, however, has been for actual needs. Spices are in demand and sales should hold up fairly well until the holiday season is on.

Pepper.—The market is rather steady for all grades. There is a noted increase in demand for white pepper. Little is offered for futures. The market shows a steady tone.

Cayennes.—Japans exceedingly scarce, in fact, none offered. Other grades continue steady.

Cloves.—Somewhat easier and the demand continues quite satisfactory.

Pimento (allspice). — Demand fair; market slightly easier, although quotations rule about the same as has been in effect during the last thirty days.

Mace.—Better grades in good demand and there appears a scarcity. Consumption is no doubt larger than formerly.

Nutmegs remain quite steady at lowest prices ever recorded. There are no special features to report. Our advice, however, is to buy heavily, as bottom prices have no doubt been reached.

Cassias.—Demand fairly good and prices slightly firmer.

Gingers.—Very steady at unchanged prices. The demand during last week has increased.

Seeds.—Caraway steady and selling well. Coriander slightly easier. Celery very firm, with upward tendency. Poppy with big demand at unchanged prices.

McCormick & Co.
Baltimore, Md.

MARKET NOTES.

Cranberries seem weak, due to rather large supply and lack of demand. The price still keeps fairly high—$2.25 to $2.75 per crate.

There are plenty of grapes about and the price remains unchanged from last week—15 cents for Concords and 20 cents for Niagaras. The demand is brisk.

Florida beans are still coming along and range from $2 to $2.50 per crate. The quality is good and the demand regular.

Florida oranges are high by reason of scarcity. The best fruit ranges from $4 to $5 per box. The quality of the current receipts is good and the demand active.

Florida grapefruit is wanted at $4 to $5 per crate.

Florida peas are so scarce as to be about out of the market for the present. The average price is $ per one-third barrel basket.

Florida cucumbers range from $ to $2.25 per basket. The demand is slow.

Florida tomatoes are so scarce and poor that temporarily they have taken a back seat. Hothouse tomatoes are wanted at 25 cents a pound. California tomatoes range from $ to $2.25 per carrier.

Florida squash ranges from $1.50 to $1.75 per package, and the demand is poor.

Salad is coming from Norfolk but mostly from North Carolina. The price ranges from $1.50 to $2.25, and the demand is slow.

Long Island cauliflower is quoted at $2.25 to $2.75 per barrel. As yet the demand is active.

The Holidays and Delicatessen.

Don't forget during the holiday season that there is more delicatessen used than at any other time. I am prepared to furnish you with a full line of Imported Fish and Cheese that will all prove money makers. I shall be pleased to quote prices and I know that they will be lower for the same quality of goods than you can obtain elsewhere. Carl Wilde 357 North Second Street, Philadelphia.

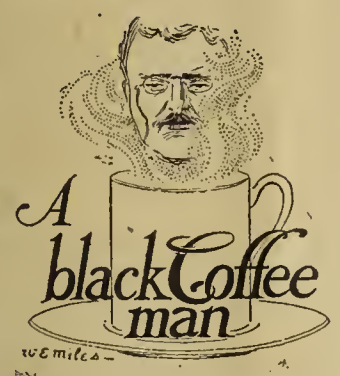
THE SCIENCE OF ADVERTISING

This Department is devoted to the criticism of advertising matter sent in, to the devising of new advertising ideas for special occasions, upon request, and to the suggesting of original advertisements when data is supplied. All communications sent in for this Department should be addressed to the Editor of Science of Advertising. They will be filed in their order and taken up according to strict rotation.

Mr. J. B. Losey, grocer, of Somerville, N. J., sends me in for criticism a circular and a copy of his local paper containing his advertisement, measuring two columns 10 inches long. Also contained in his letter are a number of vari-colored stickers which I suppose are attached to packages which go out of the store.

* * *

The circular is a rather large affair and is headed "A Different Kind of Store." It is cleanly printed, but is not especially distinctive in appearance. It is too large to reproduce. The advertisement I do reproduce in slightly reduced form:—



President Roosevelt bas been described as tbe "a black coffee man," and you appreciate the compliment.

In the famous old English Coffee House days, coffee was called the "intellectual beverage," and it is a fact tbat the world's great celebrities are invariably lovers of coffee. The man who does tbings drinks coffee. Feed your brain with pure, thoroughly cured, correctly-roasted coffee, of delicious flavor and delightful aroma—the coffees that Losey sells from 15c. to 35c. a lb.

There is not another store in the State of New Jersey that takes as much pains and puts as much effort on the Coffees they sell as we do.

We are more than particular as to quality. We almost continually in the cool weather demonstrate our different brands and we know they are good and always fresh. Our sales of Coffees for the year 1906 were over Ten Thousand Pounds, so if they were not good we could not have sold so much.

We have all kinds and our prices are low, considering the quality. We do not have a single poor lot of Coffee in our store.

TIGER—We will commence with our lowest grade—our Tiger Coffee; it is a Rio mixed with a milder grade and is really a very superior Coffee—full strength and only 15c. a lb., 7 lbs. for $1.00; far superior to the Lion brand of Coffee.

SANTOS—Then we have a good Santos. This is a mild Coffee that so many people like, 16c. a lb., 6½ lbs. for $1.00.

SOMERSET BLEND—A Blend of two Coffees tbat makes one of the best cups of Coffee for tbe price tbat can be made. It is really worth 20 to 25c. a lb., and only 17c. a lb., 6 lbs. for $1.00.

EXCELSIOR JAVA BLEND—This is without question the best and finest Coffee tbat we are selling. Just what we claim it is. Worth 25c. a lb., but we sell it for only 20c., 5 lbs. for $1.00.

ROYAL BLEND—It's rich, smooth, flavory. Many of our customers drink it and think it's the finest Coffee they ever used. This is a single Coffee skillfully blended, 25c. a lb., 4½ lbs. for $1.00. It's pleasing so many folks it ought to please you.

GOLD JAVA BLEND—This is our finest Coffee and we challenge any one to produce a better one. It's superior flavor is at once apparent as you taste it in tbe cup. Being absolutely dry roast also adds to its strength and flavor. This Coffee is full strength, right flavor and always the same, 28c. a lb., 4 lbs. for $1.00. Lots of Coffees are sold for 35c. a lb. that are not near as good.

TASTE IN COFFEE varies as much as taste in dress so we keep a variety of blends to suit the tastes of our customers, unless that taste is for poor Coffee, and then we try to educate them to use tbe good kind, which we sell.

Telephone No. 33.

This is a good advertisement, in my judgment, though it is too wordy and long. There is too much matter in it for the space. As a matter of fact there is as much in it as should go into twice the space. Type twice as large as this should be used for the text of an advertisement like this. One-third of this advertisement is occupied by the introduction. I should cut that down very decidedly. There is no need to dilate upon the virtues of coffee; everybody knows about coffee; it is so old that it needs no general exploiting. Just a crisp sentence is enough. Something like this: "The man who drinks good coffee for his breakfast will get through the day 50 per cent. easier and more contentedly than the man who doesn't."

Most of the wordiness in this advertisement is in the introduction, and if that is cut down there will be enough room to permit the text to be set in larger type. The body of this advertisement is all right, and it is a good idea to keep advertising to specific lines—in this case to coffee.

* * *

The stickers sent are about 1½ x 2 inches, some being oblong and some oval. There is nothing much on them except the name of the tea and coffee brands. Here is one sample:—

LOSEY'S
GOLD BLEND
MIXED TEA
IS THE BEST POSSIBLE.
60c. PER POUND

Some of the others are more commonplace than this, bearing simply the words "Go To Losey's For Your Teas and Coffees. Best Qualities at Low Prices." It seems to me that these stickers could be made a little snappier than this. The idea, however, is good. Who was it that said "never send a package out of the store that doesn't talk for you." Not offensively, of course, but quietly and persistently, just as these stickers will make it do.

Armour Gets His Injunction After All.

Alleging that the United States Pure Food Department recognizes water and cereals as proper ingredients of sausages, the Armour Beef Co. to-day secured in the Circuit Court at Lansing, Mich., a temporary injunction restraining the Michigan State Food Department from threatening to arrest the company's agents or other dealers for selling the Armour sausages. The company alleges that by reason of this threat it has suffered a loss of $100,000 in ten months. The company recently secured a temporary injunction in Berrien County restraining the food department from publishing the statement that the Armour sausages were adulterated, but the injunction was afterwards dissolved.

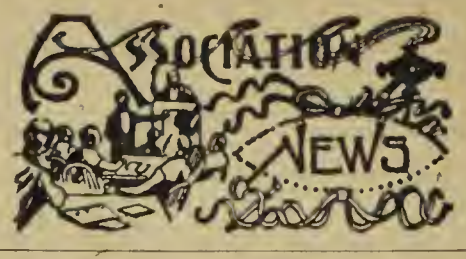
The Bennett Register Co.

No. 2 Park Avenue LISBON, OHIO



Minneapolis, Minn.

Members of the Minneapolis Retail Grocers' Association want the lid applied to the retail grocery business in Minneapolis.

This sentiment was expressed at the regular monthly meeting of the Minneapolis Retail Grocers' Association last week by O. P. Holman, who stated that there were fully 300 small grocery and confectionery stores open every Sunday in Minneapolis in violation of the law.

At the conclusion of Mr. Holman's remarks, it was decided that the president appoint a committee of three to wait upon the Mayor and see what could be done toward closing these stores on Sunday. The committee was appointed and called upon the Mayor, who promised all the aid in his power.

St. Paul, Minn.

The City Salesmen's Association of St. Paul, Minn., adopted the following resolutions against the parcels post scheme at their last meeting:—

Whereas, There is widespread discussion of a parcels post proposition which has its fountain head in the mail order catalogue interests of one or two great cities.

Resolved, That the City Salesmen's Association of St. Paul enter their most emphatic protest against the enactment of any parcels post law by Congress as certain to inflict grave injury to mercantile interests and place upon the government the burden of vast expense, conditions, not demanded by any save certain special interests.

Therefore, be it further Resolved, That we earnestly and respectfully request that our Senators, the congressional delegation of our state, and particularly our representative from the Fourth Minnesota district, use their proper influence against any and every parcels post bill, and that they, mindful of the conviction and wishes of their constituents, vote against such measures as may be submitted to Congress.

New Orleans, La.

Believing that the Quaker Oats Co. is not giving the retail grocers of this city a square deal in the advertisements the company has been running in the "Saturday Evening Post" and "Collier's Weekly" during the past few weeks, the New Orleans Retail Grocers' Association is now using its best efforts to have the company eliminate the price from the "ads." Attention was called to this practice at a recent meeting of the association, when a resolution was adopted requesting Secretary Fineran to write the concern protesting against the use of the words "Ten cents a package."

The following is a copy of the letter the association wrote to the manufacturers of Quaker Oats under date of October 10th:—

Quaker Oats Co., Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:—At a meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association, held Wednesday, the fact that you advertise the retail price of Quaker Scotch Oats at 10 cents per package was discussed, and it was the opinion of those present that the advertising of this is unfair to the retail grocer, in view of the fact that they are now paying $3.25 per case for your oats, and retailing them at $3.60 per case.

This profit is not enough to pay the expense of doing business, and we would kindly request that you omit the retail price in your future advertisement.

The company gave them an unsatisfactory reply, which upheld its supposed right to advertise the retail price. It was pointed out that since the retail grocers are paying $3.25 per case for Quaker Oats and retailing them at $3.60, or a profit of 35 cents on a case, the retailer should be given an opportunity of raising the selling price if they can. This is out of the question as long as the company advertises to the consuming public that the retail price is "Ten cents per package." At present market prices, the retail grocer can make only about 9 per cent. gross, when in reality it costs him on the average of 10 per cent to do business, or a loss of 1 per cent. before the day's business begins.

A letter was sent in reply to the Quaker Oats Co's unsatisfactory communication, again requesting that the retail price be stricken out of the advertisements. The company's letter was read at the next meeting of the association, and it was the unanimous opinion that the price should be taken out as requested by the association.

The practice of packing houses in general in charging retailers for the outside wrapping paper used on hams at prevailing ham prices has prompted the Retail Grocers' Association in calling the attention of the pure food law officials at Washington to the custom. The point has been advanced by the association that the retail grocers should not be made to pay for the heavy wrapping paper, outside of the regular covering, and since the national pure food law is particularly plain as to the marking of net weights on all packages and ship-ients, the practice is apparently a agrant violation of the statute.

The wrapping paper used on the utside of the hams generally runs o about five pounds to a tierce of 6 hams. At this rate the grocers re charged up from 50 to 75 cents n each tierce for goods they cannot ell, as the paper is virtually worthess except for giving away purposes. At this rate the packing houses are fleecing the retailers out of thousands of dollars each year by making them pay for old stuff that does not nearly cost as much as ham to manufacture.

The wrapping paper proposition is the same as the cardboard evil that was worked on the retail grocers by the cracker factories for years until the local association had the scheme put out of business.

The association took the matter up with Dr. Wiley, the man behind the gun for the national pure food law, in the following letter:—

New Orleans, La., Oct. 9, 1907.

Dr H. W. Wiley, Chief of Bureau of Chemistry, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:—It is the practice of several packing houses, shipping goods into this city to place a sheet of heavy wrapping paper on hams, outside of the regular covering, and charge this up in the weight. For

Window Dressing for Grocers

In this department from now on will appear each week suggestive articles regarding the proper use of the retail grocer's window. An endeavor will be made to deal with the subject practically, in other words, to show grocers how they can turn their windows into a money-making feature of their business. Subscribers are invited to make free use of the department by submitting both queries or suggestions.

A Thanksgiving Display.

You want an unusual display for hanksgiving, don't you? One iat will make people stop and look -then talk about it afterward?

How does this idea strike you? know that it will attract—for a milar idea was used by a new shoe ore, attracting considerable atntion; though the idea was not arried out sufficiently to create the iost talk.

For this display, in a ten-foot indow, you will need two rolls of olored crepe paper—any color—iough black will give the best reults; a small table, two chairs, a w plates, knives, forks, spoons, c.; papier-mache turkey (though ressed poultry may be used, and an assortment of other eatables incidental to Thanksgiving.

Glue two strips of the crepe paper across the full width of your window, the lower strip flush with the floor, the upper overlapping by possibly an inch. This will cover your window to a height of 39 inches.

In the centre—10 inches above the overlapping edges—cut an oval twelve inches long by eight wide.

Across the top of the covering run a long strip reading "Does this look good to you?" Or use a neatly-lettered card with the same wording. This card should be fastened directly over the peep-hole and should not be larger than twelve by six inches.

Next place your table in the window as far from the glass as possible, cover with white tablecloth and lay as though for dinner, with turkey, celery, cranberries, etc. The illustration "inside" will give you the idea, though I would not suggest following the artist's way of setting the table—he evidently is not a reader of the "Ladies Home Journal."

Next run a string of black thread across the back of the window just above the level of the peep hole, and suspend from this a number of neatly lettered cards giving prices on the various items of your Thanksgiving stock.

If your window is not sufficiently deep to get a good view of the arrangement, it would probably be as well to use a simple display of Thanksgiving goods with prices.

And you can wager that nine out of every ten people that pass your store will stop and take a peep. Keep the front of your window clear, so that they can reach it easily. RUSSELL GRAY.

Knight's Flavoring Extracts have been pleasing epicures throughout the United States for fifty-nine years. The name Knight on an extract package is a stamp of excellence. instance, a retail grocer bought a tierce of hams from a wholesaler which was marked 36—383—30—353, which means that there were 36 hams in the tierce, 383 pounds gross, 30 pounds tare and 353 pounds net weight of hams.

When the extra wrappers were taken off the net weight of hams was 348 pounds, a loss of five pounds to the retailer.

While it is customary to pay for the regular wrapper and covering we feel that we should not be compelled to pay for the outside wrapper which is used only to keep the regular covering of the ham clean. We think that this is a violation of the Food Law and would like to know from you if it is. Awaiting your reply, we are. Yours truly,

RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

The letter brought forth a reply from the Washington authorities thus:—

Washington, D. C., Oct. 21, 1907.

Mr. J. S. Fineran, Secretary Retail Grocers' Association, New Orleans, La.

Sir:—Your letter of October 9, addressed to the Chief, Bureau of Chemistry, on the subject of the proper weights being shown on the containers of meats has been referred to this Bureau.

I would advise that under the Meat Inspection Act of June 30, 1906, the Department ruled that if any weight is given upon a package of meat or meat food products it must be the correct weight, and it must be stated whether it is the net weight or the gross weight.

If this ruling is not complied with in instances of interstate shipments of meat food products arriving at New Orleans, I would ask that you kindly furnish the data necessary for the Department to take the matter up direct with the violators.

Very respectfully,
Signed: A. D. MELVIN,
Chief of Bureau.

Ohio Going After Bad Vinegar.

Will Start on January 1, 1908, to Enforce Vinegar Law. Food Commissioner Sends Summary of Act to "Grocery World."

The Ohio Dairy and Food Commissioner has sent over the entire country during the past week a circular letter stating the attitude of his department toward the sale of adulterated vinegar. This is important enough to reproduce, both from the manufacturer's and the grocer's standpoint:—

First. (Cider Vinegar) All vinegar sold as apples, orchard or cider vinegar must be the legitimate product of pure apple juice, known as apple cider, and must be made exclusively therefrom; it must not contain any foreign substance, drugs or acids, and must contain not less than two per cent. by weight of cider vinegar solids upon full evaporation at the temperature of boiling water; and not less than four per cent. by weight of absolute acetic acid. It must contain not less than .25 of 1 per cent. ash or mineral matter, the same being the product of the material from which such vingear is manufactured.

Second. (Fermented Vinegar) All fermented vinegar of whatever character must contain not less than 2 per cent. by weight, upon full evaporation (at the temperature of boiling water) of solids, contained in the fruit or grain from which said vinegar is fermented, and must also contain not less than .25 of 1 per cent. ash or mineral matter, the same being the product of the material from which said fermented vinegar is manufactured; it must be made solely from the fruit or grain from which it purports to be or is represented to be made; must contain no foreign substance, and must contain not less than 4 per cent. by weight of absolute acetic acid.

Third (Distilled Vinegar) All vinegar made wholly or in part from distilled liquor "is distilled vinegar." All distilled vinegar must be free from coloring matter added during or after distillation and from color other than that imparted to it by distillation; the mixing of cider vinegar with distilled vinegar is a coloring of the same and is in violation of the law.

Fourth (Injurious Ingredienst) No vinegar can be manufactured or sold which contains any preparation of lead, copper, sulphuric or other mineral acid or other ingredient injurious to health.

Fifth. (Branding) All vinegar made by fermentation and oxidation without the intervention of distillation shall be branded "fermented vinegar" with the name of the fruit or substance from which the same is made.

All vinegar made wholly or in part from distilled liquor shall be branded "distilled vinegar;" all packages containing vinegar shall be branded on the head of the cask, barrel or keg containing such vinegar, and if sold in other packages, each package must be plainly marked with the name, the date of manufacture and the residence of the manufacturer, together with the other brands required by law.

Every person manufacturing cider vinegar shall brand on the head of each cask, barrel or keg containing such vinegar the name and residence of the manufacturer and the words "Cider Vinegar."

No vinegar shall be branded "fruit vinegar" unless the same be made wholly from apples, grapes or other fruit.

The present vinegar law of Ohio has been in force for fifteen years but has never been sharply enforced. At the bottom of the above summary appears a footnote which states that on January 1, 1908, the department will go out for bad vinegar, and from that date on the act will be vigorously enforced.

What Different Meat Cuts Should Yield

Veteran Meat Dealer Illustrates What Should Be Gotten Out of All Principal Cuts of Meat. Cutting Meat to Insure Best Profit.

A veteran and intelligent meat dealer, who has made a study of the way meat should be cut in order to return the largest profit to the dealer, has drawn up a series of tables showing what a hind quarter of beef, a fore quarter of beef, a strip of bacon, a side of lamb, a side of veal, a strip of pork and a ham should yield when cut properly, and what the money result will be if they are so cut The figures appear below, and the prices given will be found to approximate closely to those now ruling:—

FILLING A GLASS LAMP FONT is a very simple operation because the surface of the contents is seen rising toward the top. Carelessness is the only excuse for pouring in too much and going beyond the capacity.

A METAL FONT is not so easily filled because you can only guess how much is in it. Experience may enable you to guess fairly close but absolute accuracy is Impossible.

OLD STYLE SCALES present the same difficulties. No weight is shown until you have too much and the scale goes down. You must either take a little out or suffer a loss.

MONEYWEIGHT AUTOMATIC SCALES show at all times the weight on the scale and you pour on the goods until the correct weight or money value is indicated. This means a prevention of loss and a saving of money.

OLD STYLE scales prevent you from seeing their defects with the accompanying loss of merchandise and profit.

We ask the opportunity of showing you what it amounts to. The coupon will send our representative to you.

It's An Old Friend

What would you feel like to look around your store and not see Babbitt's Soap?

Why you'd feel as if you'd lost an old friend. For Babbitt's Best Soap has been a national grocery stand-by for more years than most grocers have spent in the business. Of course you could do business without it; but you wouldn't want to, and there is no reason why you should since it sells steadily and pays a good profit.

Sell the established things that pay well.

Karo
CORN SYRUP

"All" Jobbers

If you want to sell Syrup to-morrow as well as to-day you must sell Syrup that is regular and standard.

It must be standard in grade, else a poor lot to-morrow may undo the good work done by the good lot to-day.

It must be a standard in the sense of being a staple. You must always be able to get it and get it quickly and easily. "We expect some in to-morrow" is a fine ad. for your competitor who has some in to-day.

KARO CORN SYRUP is the straight product of corn—smooth, rich, delicious. Quality never varies a hair's breadth.

Packed at the factory in sterilized cans, 10 cents, 25 cents and 50 cents, and sold by all wholesale grocers.

Pays the retailer a better-than-usual profit.

Here Is a Good Scheme!

Grocers sometimes demonstrate these with fine results. The demonstration shows two things—first, the ease with which beef tea, bouillon or soup is made from these capsules, one of which has simply to be dropped in a cup of hot water; then it shows the delicious, spicy flavor.

You can sell hundreds of boxes, and every one at a profit.

Make Your Jobber Tell You

If you, Mr. Retailer, have signed any future canned goods contracts, ask your jobber what per cent. of your order he will absolutely guarantee to give you.

In most cases he will make no guarantee whatever. He can't, since the packer has made none to him.

In no case except one will he make a guarantee to deliver you all you ordered, or 100 per cent. That one case is where he buys Blue Bell or Clover Farm canned goods, for we, who sell those brands, always give a jobber 100 per cent. contracts on them, and the jobber can therefore give it to you.

The moral is to buy the brands you can get what you buy on.

Some grocery stores sell two grades of print butter; others sell only one. Sometimes the one is the finest grade, sometimes a medium grade.

The point is this—that Gurnse Butter has a natural place in every store except the one that sells only one grade, and that medium. It represents the finest butter possible to make; the cleanest, the purest, the most sanitary and healthful.

It is not possible for a pound of Gurnse Butter to be bad, for the many inspections it undergoes absolutely insure the contrary. Depend on it to the limit; it will never destroy your customer's confidence in you.

Why We Use Tin

For reasons which we don't care to disclose to our competitors, we have learned that tin is the best possible package for pickles. The tins our Hoffman House little pickles are packed in are enameled on the inside, which gives a preserving surface unsurpassed.

Hoffman House little pickles are produced by a new process which we control. So tenderly spicy and delicious are they that the average person will eat away until the dish is empty. Put a dish on your counter and see.

There's a great trade waiting for these pickles in your store.

Taking Fool Advice.

A week or so ago I made some-hat of a kick about people butting n with advice on things they knew othing about.

This week I want to say a few vell-chosen words about the fool-shness of taking that kind of ad-ice.

One night last week I was sit-ing in a country hotel. It's a place vhere I'm pretty well known—I've een going there for years—and I now every grocer in the place.

This night I speak of there were couple of other salesmen besides nyself and three grocers. We made p a sociable little group, and hinned about a lot of things.

I personally settled a lot of na-ional questions and set the other oys straight on several things in vhich they differed with me and vere therefore wrong.

Finally we got to talking about he big chance that is supposed to come once to every man, and whether any of us had had it.

"I had mine all right," said one of the other salesmen, "but I didn't have brains enough to grab it, so it passed me by. I suppose now it's the road for mine till I drop dead.

"It was about six years ago. I had got mighty tired of traveling and wanted to set up in the retail business somewhere. I had the m o n e y—t h e n—it's disappeared since, so I couldn't grab any more chances if they came along to-morrow.

"One of the places I got to was building up a lot, and one day another salesmen I knew said to me, 'by George, if I had the money I'd open a grocery store out in the new part of that town. I believe it's the coming residence section of the place, and the man who gets in there first is going to make some money.'

"Well, I had the money, and I sat up and took notice. I stopped off there a couple of days and looked over the prospect, and it looked pretty good. I about decided to do it, but I had a good job and it meant a complete turn-over for me, so I couldn't quite make up my mind. I went to see an uncle whose opinion I had always thought a good bit of, and asked him what he'd do. He roasted the whole plan and sort of gave me cold feet. I went on dilly-dalling with the thing and couldn't decide one way or the other, and in the meantime another man got in. I sell his store nearly all the canned goods he uses, and he has one of the finest stores in the State. A beautiful place! The fellow who owns it is making money hand over fist, as I could have done if I hadn't been a fat-headed fool!"

"You say it was your uncle's advice that held you off?" I asked him, scenting another distributer of asinine advice.

"Yes," he replied.

"Now, what an idiotic thing that was to do," I said. "You were a man with twenty years' experience in the grocery business. You had traveled among retail stores all your life and you knew those that got along and those that didn't, and knew why in both cases. You had looked over the ground at this particular town, and your own judgment ought to have been better than anybody else's. Instead of acting on it, you go to your uncle—had he even seen the place?"

"No," was the reply.

"How could he know anything of the conditions then? Is he a grocer himself?"

"No; real estate dealer."

"Oh, Lord," said I, "worse and worse! You go to a blind man to tell you what's becoming to you! Didn't you have common gumption enough to know that his advice, knowing nothing about the business or the town, couldn't be worth shucks? By gravy, it's the biggest mystery on earth why every ignoramus is so willing to give advice and why the average person is so darned willing to take it!"

"I suppose you're right," said the salesman, "if I'd only acted on my own ideas I'd have been all right. But when you're about to make a big move like that you like to get all the advice you can."

"Sure you do," I replied, "if you're level-headed enough to throw it away if it's worth nothing."

"I had an experience just the opposite," said one of the grocers. "I opened a store once on somebody's advice against my own judgment and sunk nearly $1,500 in it.

"I Wish I Had Some Real Gelatine"

Every day some woman in your town bemoans the disappearance of old-style gelatine--the clean, delicious, melting kind, flavored with lemon, that we learned to like on our mother's table.

Old-style gelatine has not disappeared, though at times it has seemed to be snowed under by the flavorless imitations that hide their worthlessness behind bright colors.

Chalmers' Gelatine is old-fashioned gelatine--nothing in it but purest calves' stock and spring water. Your customers want it.

James Chalmers' Sons

Williamsville, N. Y.

"It was before I came here," he said. "I had one store and it was doing fine. I had no kick coming at all. I was laying by a little money, and was comfortable in every way. One day a salesman came to me and asked me why I didn't open another store in a certain section nearer the centre of the city.

"Why, there are plenty of stores there now," I said.

"But they're all cheap joints," he said, "not one of 'em sells the class of goods you sell. There's a demand for a better store there, and you can make it go."

"I didn't take to the idea much. While it was true that none of the stores in that section sold fine goods, still I wasn't sure that the people around there would buy 'em if they did. The salesman kept at me and swelled my head with the stories of the big money the Philadelphia chain-store grocers were making, and in the end he got me to do it. All the time I felt uneasy, but I opened up a good store and gave the thing all the chance I could. It lasted about eight months. I sweat blood to make that store go, but it was no use, and I dropped about $1,400. If I'd only acted on my own advice without letting that fellow push me—he only wanted to sell me my opening bill—I'd a been all right."

"Well, you're another one," said. "This was your own tow You knew all about it—a hundr times as much as any salesma could. Yet you trusted his judg ment in preference to your own."

I'll tell you what one of the mo successful men I know said to m once:—

"When I'm planning a move," h said, "I study the thing out the be I can from all standpoints, and the if I can find anybody who's in shap to know any more about it than know I ask his advice. If I can find anybody who knows more tha I do, I act on my own judgment.

That's so plumb sensible that yo can hardly believe that most peop do just the opposite, can you?

And yet it's a fact. It seems t me that the average man will go fo his advice straight to the fello who's sure to know the least abou the subject.

Two-Minute Sermons for the Retail Grocer

XX.—Swapping Horses At the Wrong Time.

Some one said it was a bad policy to swap horses while crossing a stream.

Retailers will also find this applies to their business. Every retailer should consider well before placing an opening order with a jobbing house, and he should hesitate about ever discontinuing that line when once he has begun its sale.

The consumer has a habit of remembering brands, and anything which especially pleases is always remembered when the time comes to buy again, and if the retailer has changed jobbers in the meantime the consumer will have to go elsewhere to buy his favorite brand or buy a substitute, which is then very likely not to please, although it may be the same thing packed under another brand, for there is a prejudice against it to start out with

It sometimes happens that a re tailer absolutely must change job bers, and in this case the chang should be made gradually as possi ble, so customers can be introduce to the new brands while the brand which may be the property of the old jobbing house are still on th shelves.

No jobbing house is so good tha all the goods turn out absolutel right all the time, but most of them should be right all the time and th house should be willing to make th others right to the retailer.

No jobbing house is so bad tha none of its brands will gain a regu lar following if offered for sale by the retailer, so these brands ther help draw trade to the retail store These things should be well though over before swapping lines.

Heart-to-Heart Talks With Grocery Clerks

"Mutual Aid Sheets" Which a Large Eastern Retail Grocer Tucks in Each Clerk's Weekly Pay Envelope. Some Advice From the Head of the House on Selling Goods and Other Subjects.

[The "Grocery World" has come into possession of a series of "Mutual Aid Sheets," which are weekly little talks issued regularly to its clerks by one of the large retail grocery stores of the East. The talks are typewritten and a copy is enclosed in each clerk's pay envelope. They are so soundly practical and so useful generally that it is this journal's purpose to publish them weekly or bi-weekly for the edification of other clerks as well as other grocers who have clerks.—ED.]

SELLING MALAGA GRAPES.

Malaga grapes are very cheap his year and very good. Saturday ve sold at retail over three barrels. You noticed how the fruit men han- lled them. When a person called or a pound or two pounds, a bunch r a couple or three bunches were ut on the computing scale and vere so figured. If the 15-cent ones veighed 1¼ pounds, the price was 9 cents. In nine cases out of ten hat was satisfactory; when it vasn't, the men whipped out their ocket scissors and snipped off the ounces. That's business! That pplies to bacon and salt pork, heese, tub butter, etc.

WELCOME STRANGERS.

You can often get a good order rom strangers. This was fully emonstrated two weeks ago when ne of our men took an out-of- own customer around and showed im our plant. He was impressed with the courtesy he received and the prices given, especially on meats. Four days later we received that man's order for $15 worth of goods. It only goes to show that "putting yourself out" pays. He is now on our mailing list and will no doubt prove a good, permanent customer. We will do the follow up part. But—the clerk in question won the man. He has full credit for same.

COFFEE SALES.

Our coffee business is coming up. Value and push are doing it. This notion that the public don't know coffee is all rot. They do know. A full bodied, delicate coffee at 25 cents a pound, like our —— blend, is bound to win out. The sales show it. The comments show it. It's increased popularity shows it. The goods are behind you, boys, and that's the main thing.

THANKSGIVING.

We're entering upon another Thanksgiving. The buying spirit is liberal. Offer your best goods. When a man is ready to give you his Thanksgiving order, sell him out finest peas, our fanciest asparagus and our highest priced string beans. He wants the best of everything, although he may not admit it. Land your turkey orders early. Assure him that you, yourself, will do the picking—and do it. Keep your word to the letter. Suggest the line of glass goods. Show up the olives, the glass fruits, the shelled nuts, etc. Compliment him (or her) by presupposing that anything short of the finest for their Thanksgiving is out of the question.

Novel Model Stores Attract Attention. Cash Registers Sold by Convincing Methods. Prospective Purchaser Sells Himself.

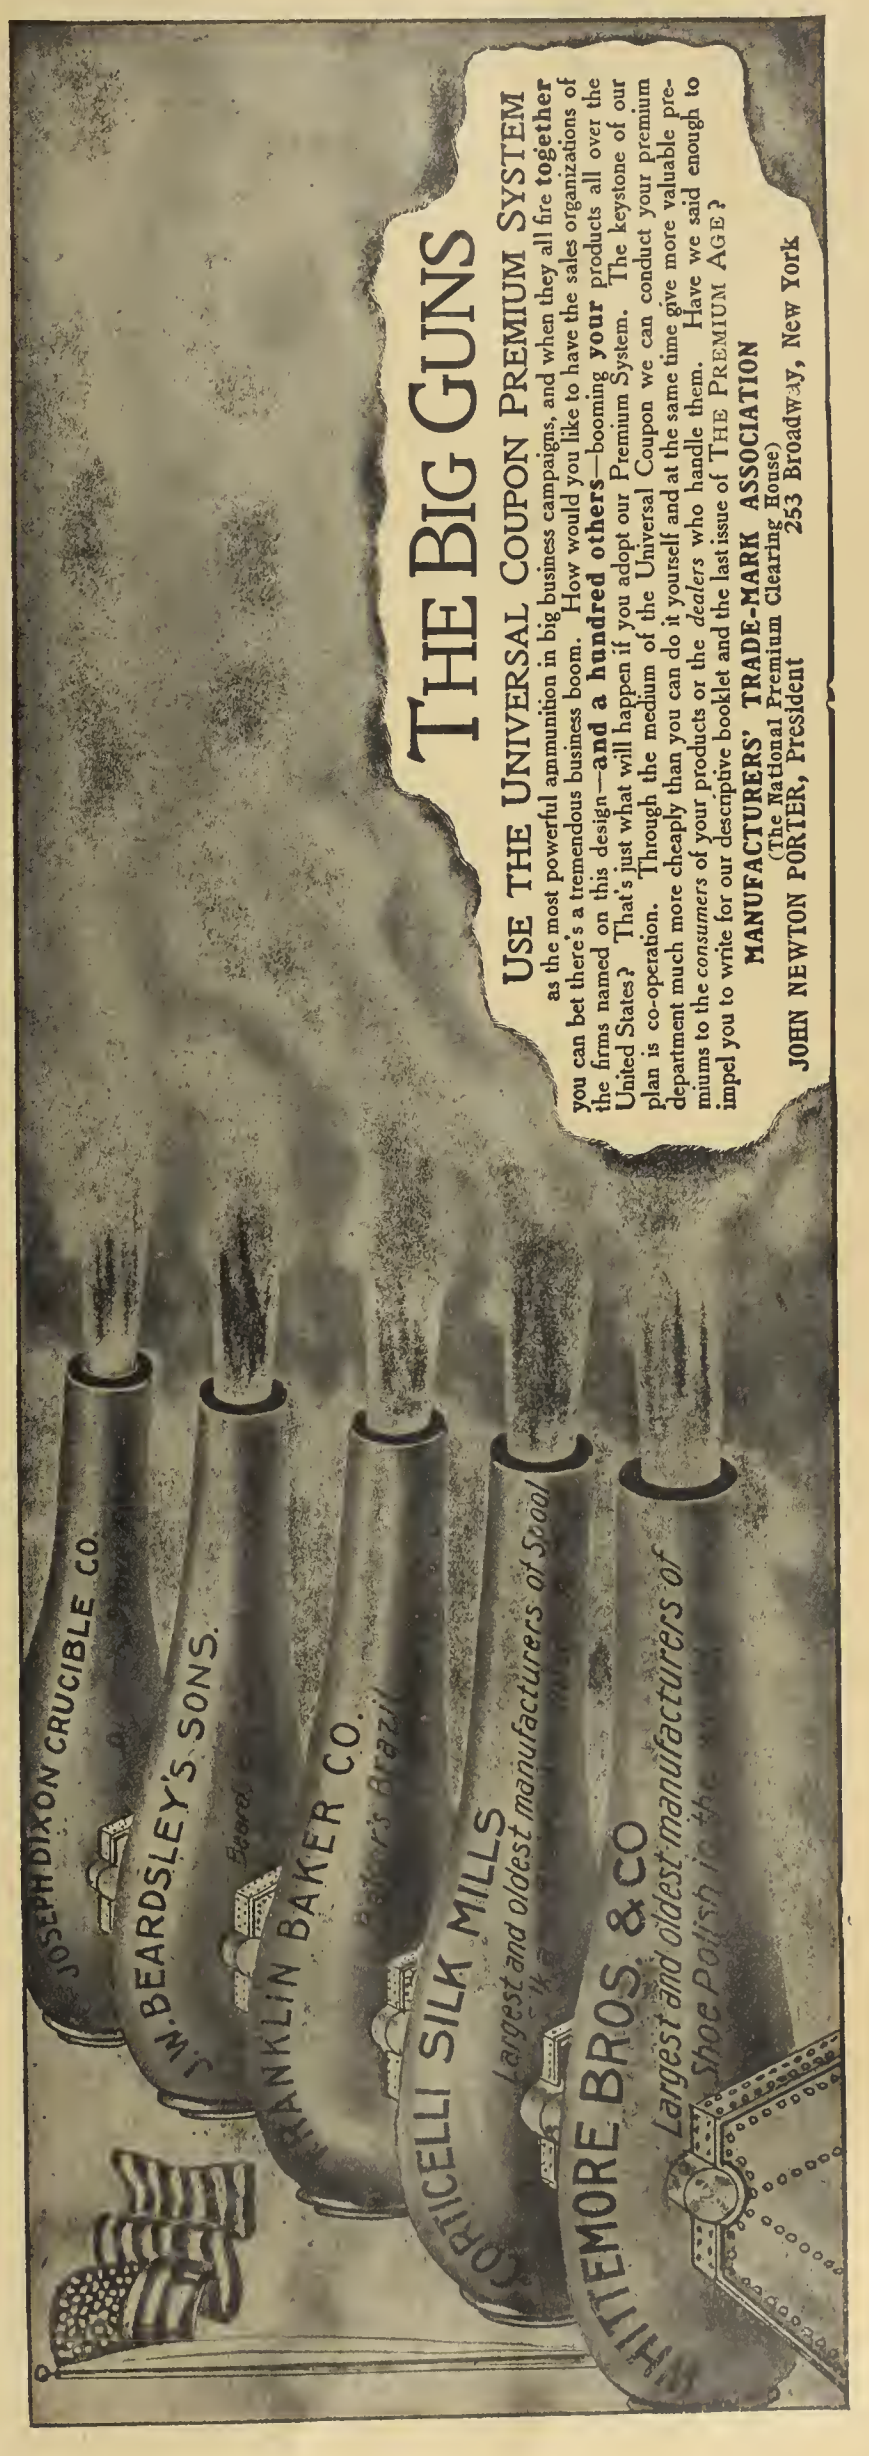
The National Cash Register Company has just originated a new method of selling its product that has met with unqualified success. This new method is startling in its simplicity. Suppose that a grocer is to be shown the merits of the cash register. What does the salesman do? Does he show him a dozen out of the 533 different styles and sizes made by the Company? Does he talk up the merits of one particular register until he is blue in the face, and his prospect nearly deaf? Not a bit of it.

He shows the grocer into a small, well-appointed model grocery. On the shelves are rows of canned goods, in one corner is a barrel of potatoes and a bushel basket of apples, on the counter is a register, on the wall even a telephone is connected. Every detail is faithfully reproduced. The salesman requests the prospect to sell him a pound of tea, or a can of corn. He pays for his purchase and shows the prospect what to do with the money and how to operate the register.

In this way the prospect catches onto the advantages of the register without the need of much explanation from the salesman. He becomes quickly familiar with it and, therefore, does not feel any hesitation about purchasing. In short, he sells himself, because he sees just why the register is a good thing for him. Nothing is left to his imagination. He can understand the machine. He can see where it would save him money and so he wants it.

These novel methods are creating widespread comment in the grocery trade. The special feature about them is that they place the prospect in a familiar atmosphere. He feels at home and his attention is not diverted from the subject at hand.

Florida eggplants average $2 per crate and are in slow demand.



Unduly Heavy Supply of Storage Eggs.

Unusually Wide Difference of Thirteen Cents Between Price of Fresh and Price of Storage Eggs. Storage Eggs Many and Market Weak.

The fact that this year's supply of storage eggs is extremely heavy is upsetting the egg market considerably and may upset it more before the supply is exhausted.

Six weeks ago it looked as if the supply of cold storage was so large that it could not be consumed. The price dropped considerably, however, and in consequence the sales of this grade of eggs have been enormous. Some of the chain stores in Philadelphia, for instance, have been pushing storage eggs as low as 20 cents per dozen.

The present difference between fresh and storage eggs is very large, due to the extreme scarcity of the first, and the extreme plentitude of the second. Fresh-laid eggs are quoted around 32 cents, and storage eggs at 19 cents!

The holders of storage eggs are becoming apprehensive. The price has declined, owing to the oversupply and the financial tightness. Several heavy holders whose collateral loans were called had to let their eggs go to raise the necessary money. More of these egg loans will be coming due shortly, and all told the situation is a little shaky.

How Evaporated Apples Are Graded.

In classifying evaporated apples, three grades are generally recognized, which are commonly designated as "fancy," "choice," and "prime." Two other grades, which in reality are special grades, are also sometimes recognized, viz., "extra fancy," and a lower grade than prime—usually called prime with some prefix, frequently the name of a locality, to distinguish it from that grade.

The standards demanded for these various grades are about as follows:—

"Fancy" is very white, clean stock, free from all pieces of skin and other objectionable portions which should be removed in trimming, and a good proportion of the slices in rings.

"Choice" denotes a grade intermediate between "fancy" and "prime," not quite clean enough for "fancy," yet more nearly free from imperfections than the "prime" grade demands.

"Prime" must be good stock, well cured, and of a generally attractive appearance. It must be comparatively white and mostly free from undesirable portions, but stock having a small percentage of such defects is usually put in this grade.

"Extra fancy," as the name implies, is a fancy grade that is exceptionally fine. It must possess all the qualities mentioned in describing that grade in a marked degree. At least 85 per cent. of the slices should be "rings."

The grade below "prime" is the stock that has been so carelessly handled and is so unattractive in appearance that it cannot maintain the standard of "prime." It is packed for an entirely different and much poorer class of trade than any of the other grades.

How to Get a Roll Top Desk Free.

The Knickerbocker Chocolate Co., of New York, have made an arrangement with the Manufacturers' Trade-Mark Association, the big premium clearing-house of New York, which enables them to substantially reward retailers who show an interest in increasing the sale of Barker's Hasty Lunch Chocolate, Bedford and Blue Ribbon Cocoas.

These goods are so fine that it is hard to sell anything else to consumers once they have had them; so besides the reward the Knickerbocker Chocolate Co. give grocers for pushing them, they are certain to please their trade.

Suppose, for example, a grocer needs a new roll-top desk, a safe, a cheese cutter, a computing or platform scale; instead of drawing on his bank account to pay for them he pushes the sale of the Knickerbocker Co.'s goods with his customers, saves the Universal Coupons packed in every case for him and adds them to those coming to him from other manufacturers, and in a short time he will have collected enough to entitle him to any of the articles named.

The Manufacturers' Trade-Mark Association issue a handsome illustrated catalogue which they send free to grocers, showing an almost unlimited array of useful articles of merchandise which they will send grocers in exchange for the Universal Coupons, together with a list of all the manufacturers throughout the country who give these same coupons to the grocers.

The Knickerbocker Co. is the only manufacturer of chocolate and cocoa from whom a grocer can get these Universal Coupons; so grocers who want valuable free merchandise as well as their regular profits will concentrate their efforts on the sale of the Knickerbocker Chocolate Co.'s goods.

Be A Successful Specialist

Do some one thing better than your competitors possibly can and your success is assured.

The Grocer equipped with Johnson's "EVERSHARP" slicing machine can without trouble slice Libby, McNeil & Libby's best dried beef to perfection. And these moist, delicate flavored, full size, rosy hued, freshly cut wafer slices are all alone. A class by themselves—so much larger—so much thinner—so much brighter, attractive and better tasting, their superiority so marked and self evident—so far above comparison, that delighted housekeepers once acquainted with Johnson's sandwich sliced beef use it so frequently, in so many different ways, with such gratifying success, nothing could induce them to buy dried beef cut on any other machine.

A chance to secure a complete monopoly of this most profitable rapid-selling, trade-drawing specialty is yours to-day—to-morrow may be too late.

Send for a sample of the best dried beef sliced to perfection.

They Must Keep Expert

It is a provable fact that a majority of cooking experts use Nicelle Olive Oil in all their demonstrations.

Why? Because they must use the very best oil obtainable in order to insure results. Otherwise they would soon cease to be known as experts.

Nicelle Olive Oil is bottled in France, where produced. It is the first pressing of the finest oil olive grown. You will be proud to sell it.

PHILADELPHIA GROCERY STORE AS A BARGAIN.

A veteran Philadelphia grocer, who has conducted one store 29 years, wishes to retire. The store is in good part of North Philadelphia. Size 18x30 feet. Does $300 weekly, greater part cash. Stock now $1,000, but could be reduced several hundred dollars. Uses one team. Nets a clear 10 per cent. Real estate for sale or rent. Owner will sell stock at inventory, and to sell quickly will make very low price on fixtures.

DO YOU WANT TO SELL YOUR BUSINESS?

We find buyers for grocery and general store businesses—nothing else. We are specialists in that and we know what we are about.

In the term "grocery stores" we include butter and egg stores, tea and coffee stores, green groceries and anything else in the same line.

If you want to sell your business, we have a customer. If you want to buy one, we know where something is that we're sure will suit you.

Write, call or telephone.
